

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

P R E F A C E.

THIS Epitome is on the plan of the Epitome of the Fasti Hellenici, to which it may be considered as a sequel, or as a second volume. The arrangement is similar: that is, the quotations and references are generally omitted; the facts and narratives are retained. The same distribution of subjects is followed as in the larger work, except in some few particulars where an alteration was desirable. In the larger work the Tables terminate at the year 578, and the sixty-three years which follow are placed in the Appendix, and in the second Volume: but in the Tables of this Epitome the years are given in one uninterrupted series, beginning at A.D. 15, and ending at A.D. 641.

At the close of the section containing the list and account of Emperors, the genealogies of the Merovingian, Carolingian, and Capetian dynasties are added.

In the section on Scripture Chronology some new matter will be found which is not in the larger work. The probable period during which the Japhetic families inhabited the Iranian upland before they occupied India, Greece, and other countries, is considered; the Indian Chronology of Prichard and Tod is examined; and the most probable dates are given for the rise of the kingdom of the Pharaohs.

Of the Abstracts from Ecclesiastical Authors contained in the larger work that of Origen de principiis is omitted, but in its stead is given an Abstract of Photius from a work of Theodorus of Mopsuestia.

This Epitome has the disadvantage of being a posthumous publication. The manuscript of it was carried down by the lamented Author to the commencement of Testimonia Patrum, but he did not live to finish it. (See page 454, note a). His journal attests how much he had at heart the completion of this Work, and how diligently he laboured at it, even when, while his mind retained its fullest vigour, his state of health was far from equal to the task.

For the compilation of the remainder (from page 454 to the end, including the Indices), and for the general revision of the whole, the Editor is responsible.

The Editor gratefully acknowledges that the Delegates of the Oxford University Press have extended to this last work of his brother the same favours which they have uniformly bestowed upon his former volumes. Like its predecessors it is published under their auspices and patronage.

FASTI ROMANI.

IT is proposed in this volume briefly to exhibit in the order of time the civil and military events, together with the literary chronology both secular and ecclesiastical, of the Roman Empire from the death of Augustus to the death of Heraclius. To speak with greater precision, we may observe that the Tables of this volume, embracing a period of 627 years, commence at Jan. 1 A. D. 15, in the fifth month after the death of Augustus, and terminate Dec. 31 A. D. 641, in the eleventh month after the death of Heraclius.

I transcribe some passages from the introduction to the Tables of the larger work. "For the civil and military transactions valuable testimonies have been derived from the Roman coins contained in the accurate work of Eckhel. Where the assistance of the medals begins to fail us, the Theodosian Code supplies materials. It records the day and the month and the consuls, with the place from whence the emperor issued his edict, and the name and office of the person to whom it was addressed; and affords most valuable assistance. But unfortunately from many causes, from the similarity of names, sometimes from the identity (when the same persons were consuls in different years), and from the easy alteration of numbers, the Code has undergone corruptions; as Tillemont Eckhel and others who have used this monument have found. It is used therefore with caution. Only those inscriptions of laws are quoted, which appear without suspicion. We cannot always rely upon the subscriptions of laws in the Theodosian Code when they are not supported by other testimony. When they corroborate the evidence of historians, their uses are important; thus coming in aid as independent witnesses, they establish the certainty of the fact. The Code and the History confirm each other."

"The Theodosian Code begins with Constantine and ends with the year 438. The Code of Justinian extends over a larger space. It ascends to the reign of Hadrian and proceeds through the intermediate emperors to Constantine inclusive; then embracing the whole period of the Theodosian Code it descends beyond that Code 96 years to A. D. 534. In the early period few notices of laws appear. One in the reign of Hadrian without a date; nine laws in the space between Hadrian and Severus. From Severus A. D. 193 the laws preserved are numerous. The dates are not always added; most of the laws of Diocletian are without the year. But yet in the interval from Severus to Constantine the subscriptions of laws supply some valuable information. Within the period of the Theodosian Code the diligence of Godefroy has collected from the Code of Justinian about 320 laws which are not found in the former Code^a. For the rest, the Code of Justinian is less full than its predecessor: some laws are omitted, others are abridged. In the last period of 96 years it contains useful evidence. In addition to the two Codes the Novellæ supply testimonies which are inserted in the proper years."

"It is the object of this work to collect the original testimonies; to make each author speak for himself and deliver his own evidence in his own language. In executing this task I have been constrained to occupy in some parts of the subject a considerable space. When the epitomators and chronographers are our chief authorities a large space is sometimes required. None of these writers is so exact as to be wholly free from error; and yet few passages are so deficient as not to contain some valuable relic, some particle of truth. It was necessary then, where the passages were not too long, to give the whole of what each author has said, that they may be compared and examined, and that it may be seen at a glance wherein they confirm one another and wherein they differ. Some of them transcribe from their predecessors; as Cassiodorus from Hieronymus and from Prosper; Paulus Diaconus from the epitome of Victor, from Orosius, from Prosper; Isidorus from Idatius. But even here it was sometimes requisite to insert both passages, because he who transcribes from a preceding author may be a better evidence of the original reading than any extant manuscript. It will be further observed that in the decline of the empire the succession of events is rapid, the revolutions are various and complicated, and a mere recital of the facts requires a long narrative."

^a Some of these have been now discovered in the five books of the Theodosian Code, which have been given

"The distribution of ecclesiastical authors into centuries is rejected in this work. That arrangement, although adopted by the Centuriators, and after them by Mosheim and others, is recommended by no advantage. The beginning and the end of each century, computed from the vulgar era, are not especially marked as epochs at which great changes occurred either for good or evil. Such a distribution is insufficient, and incomplete; for it may not fix an author's time within 50 years; and why should we be satisfied with an imperfect account, when a more exact description may be had? It is sometimes inaccurate, for an author may belong to two centuries. Hieronymus wrote and taught for 30 years of the fourth century, but he also composed many valuable works during 20 years of the fifth. It is sometimes delusive, and conceals the value of testimony. Thus Quadratus is called a writer of the second century. But this conveys an inadequate idea of the evidence of Quadratus, who was a disciple of the apostles, and who wrote only 60 years after the deaths of St. Peter and St. Paul, and little more than twenty after the death of St. John. The method adopted by Hieronymus himself, by Eusebius, Gennadius, and others, of marking an author's time by naming the reigning emperor, is far more judicious. In the present work then no mention is made of centuries, but each author is placed as nearly as may be at the year in which he flourished."

"The General Councils are important parts of the public history, and will be found in the Tables at the proper years. But it did not come within the scope and object of this Chronology, nor was it possible within the intended limits, to introduce all the synods of which memorials remain. If any especial reason offered for describing some particular councils, if they supplied a date which verified other transactions, if they illustrated the lives or influenced the fortunes of eminent men recorded here, these have been inserted. The rest must be sought in other works."

"The bishops of the five great Churches, Rome, Alexandria, Jerusalem, Antioch, and Constantinople, are frequently mentioned in the Tables. All could not be inserted; for sometimes the want of space and the pressure of other subjects excluded them; sometimes the uncertainty of the testimonies required a long examination. The rest are therefore reserved for the Appendix, which will contain the series of those who flourished within the time included in this work."

In the Tables of this Epitome the coins, the inscriptions, the laws of the two Codes, and the testimonies collected from historians or chronographers are necessarily omitted. But the narrative of facts is founded upon those authorities, and may be verified by reference to the original passages.

15	U. C. Varr. 768 Drusus Cæsar C. Norbanus Flaccus Coss. The death of Augustus Aug. 19 A. D. 14 was in the fifth month before these Tables begin. Nero heard of the revolt of Vindex on the 19th of March at Naples. He had already been at Rome, where his first arrival was triumphant. His second coming thither, after the news received at Naples, was under very different circumstances. After some interval the revolt of Galba is known. Galba accepted the empire on the 3rd of April. Death of Nero 1 year and 22 days before July A. D. 69; therefore in June A. D. 68. The exact duration of his life, Dec. 15 A. D. 37—June 9 A. About February 68 he enters Gadara, and Jericho about May: during the intermediate operations he hears of the revolt of Vindex. After the 3rd of Dæsius Vespasian pursues his preparations, till news arrives of the death of Nero. Apollonius Tyaneus in Sicily hears of the death of Vindex, the flight of Nero, the rise of Galba Otho and Vitellius. Returning from Sicily to Greece in the autumn, he finds Demetrius in Greece. Quintilian accompanies Galba to Rome. He had already been at Rome in his early youth, and had heard Domitius Afer. But the 20 years of his teaching appear to have commenced in A. D. 69 on his return to Rome with Galba. is proclaimed Jan. 2. Adoption of Piso Jan. 10. Galba is slain Jan. 15. He is said to be in his 73rd year by Plutarch, Tacitus, Eutropius and Victor. He reigned 7^m 7^d from the day of Nero's death, inclusive of that day, and exclusive 7^m 6^d to the day of his own death. The birth of Galba is placed by Suetonius at Dec. 24 B. C. 3, or 70^y — 23^d before his death. If the account that he reached his 73rd year is correct, his birth must be placed at B. C. 5.
69	822 Ol. 212 Serv. Sulpicius Galba Cæsar Augustus II. T. Vinus Rufinus. The German legions revolt ipso Kal. Jan. die, and Vitellius

Otho is acknowledged by the senate. He is still at Rome on the 14th of March, and set out soon after. The battle near Bedriacum was fought in the spring season. Death of Otho at Brixellum. His death was known at Rome Ap. 19, or the 95th day after the death of Galba. He died on the 92nd day, on the 16th of April, when he wanted eleven days of completing his 37th year; for he was born Ap. 28 A. D. 32.

Vitellius was in Gaul at the time of the death of Otho. Visited the field 40 days after the battle, towards the end of May, and entered Rome before July 18. The city of Cremona was destroyed in October (conf. Tacit. Hist. III. 37 de Allieni Cæcinæ consulatu). Vitellius withdrew from the palace Dec. 18. His death may be placed at Dec. 21. It is computed that he reigned one year wanting 10 days, and lived 54 years and 89 days. This period for his life, from Sept. 24 A. D. 15 will terminate at Dec. 31 A. D. 69; the period of his reign, reckoned from Jan. 2, will terminate at Dec. 22. But Josephus gives 3^m 2^d to Otho, and 8^m 5^d to Vitellius, or 11^m 7^d for the whole space from the death of Galba; and this amount being computed from Jan. 15 will be completed at Dec. 21.

Vespasian was proclaimed on the 1st of July. It was determined that Titus should remain in Judæa, that Vespasian should occupy Egypt, that Mucianus with a part of the forces should encounter Vitellius. Vespasian according to Tacitus and Philostratus is 60 years of age at his elevation. Consistently with his birth Nov. 17 A. D. 9.

The Jewish war during this year is suspended, and Jerusalem is left to the factions of John and the zealots, and of Simon and his banditti.

Apollonius of Tyana having wintered in Greece went in spring 69 to Egypt. He was in Egypt with Dio Prusæus and Euphrates when Vespasian assumed the empire. Dio is already eminent. That Nero reigned in his time is attested by Dio himself. The quarrel of Euphrates with Apollonius began in Egypt in 70. He is said to have been jealous of Apollonius in Ethiopia in 71, and to have incited Domitian against him in 93. Euphrates however is mentioned with praise by Epictetus. He was admired by Timocrates a contemporary of the sophist Polemo, and is highly commended by Pliny.

Suetonius is a young man 20 years after the death of Nero. His father was a military tribune in the army of Otho A. D. 69. Tacitus is prætor at the time of the secular games.
89	842 Ol. 217 T. Aurelius Fulvus II Atratinus. Domitiani 9 from Sept. 13, trib. pot. 9 . Quintilian teaches at Rome. He taught 20 years, which terminated at this date. He was preceptor to the nephews of Domitian, and was exercising that office when he composed de Institutione Oratoria libros , which were accordingly written in the reign of Domitian, and yet written after those 20 years of teaching had expired. Tacitus leaves Rome four years before the death of Agricola.
90	843 Domitianus Aug. XV M. Cocceius Nerva II. Domitiani 10 from Sept. 13, trib. pot. 10 . Domitian expels the philosophers from Rome, and Epictetus withdraws from Rome to Nicopolis. Dio Prusæus also went into exile, and visited many distant countries. Pliny is prætor in the year in which the philosophers are expelled. He was prætor before the legal age; and the legal age was fixed by Augustus at the 30th year. Pliny therefore was prætor in his 29th year. But he entered his 29th year at the close of A. D. 89; which determines his prætorship to the year 90, and confirms the date of Eusebius for the expulsion of the philosophers.

After this period he wrote his Life as a sequel to the Antiquities. Apollonius of Tyana at the beginning of this year comes to Italy. He went from Asia to Corinth, thence by Sicily to Puteoli; where he met Demetrius the cynic. Thence to Rome. He is favoured by Ælianus the præfect, is brought before Domitian, and admitted alone. Is again before Domitian, who suffers him to escape; and he joins Demetrius and Damis at Puteoli. These transactions were in the beginning of the year; for Domitian left Rome in May, and Apollonius was in Greece in July, and passed through Sicily to Olympia at the Olympic games. After 40 days at Olympia he went to Lebadea. Scopelianus of Clazomene is ambassador to Domitian pro serendis vitibus. His mission was successful. It may be placed in the beginning of 993, before the month of May. Scopelianus was the pupil of Nicetes, and the preceptor of Herodes Atticus. He taught at Smyrna. Martial in his first nine books, and in the book de Spectaculis alludes to transactions from the reign of Titus to the return of Domitian from the Sarmatian expedition in January 94. His return is expected in December—he returns in January. The Sarmatian victory is celebrated, in which he declines a triumph. The two triumphs—de Cattis et de Dacis—and the Sarmatian laurel are recorded among the acts of Domitian; who was 8 months absent in the Sarmatian expedition. As he returned in January, he set forth in May preceding, or May 93. Lib. VII was composed during the Sarmatian war, and comes down to Dec. 93; lib. VIII opens with January 94; lib. IX still describes January 94, but might possibly be written in A. D. 95.

95	848 Domitianus Aug. XVII T. Flavius Clemens. Domitiani 15 from Sept. 13, trib. pot. 15. Conspiracy of Celsus. A persecution of the Christians, in which the consul Flavius Clemens is put to death, and his wife Flavia Domitilla sent into exile. Clemens was put to death in the present year, after he had abdicated the consulship, and this persecution occurred partly in the 14th and partly in the 15th year of Domitian, within A. D. 95.

The first book was written after the Dacian war; the third after the return from the Sarmatian war Jan. 94. The Thebais had been composed before the first book of the Silvæ. The Achilleis is mentioned in the fifth book. The Thebais had employed 12 years, and was not completed till after the Dacian war. Trajan, then in command in Germany, is adopted, three months before the death of Nerva, and is associated in the tribunician power. Hence the tribunician years of Trajan are reckoned from the autumn of 97. Trajan was a native of Italica in Spain, a city founded by Scipio in the second Punic war. Death of Verginius Rufus in his 84th year. Nicetes of Smyrna is sent into Gaul. Ælianus tacticus flourished. Apollonius of Tyana died about the same time as Nerva. As he was 20 years old soon after the death of Archelaus A. D. 17, he must have been at least 97 at the time of the death of Nerva. Frontinus is appointed curator aquarum. Tacitus is consul suffectus in A. D. 97.
98	851 Nerva Caesar Aug. IV Nerva Trajanus Caesar II. Death of Nerva Jan. 25. He reigned Sept. 18 A. D. 96—Jan. 25 A. D. 98 1y 4^m 8^d. Dio reckons his age 65y 10^m 10^d, Eutropius and Cassiodorus 72 years, Victor the 63rd year current. Trajan at his accession is at Cologne. Justus of Tiberias is marked by Eusebius at the year 2113, commencing Oct. A. D. 97. Justus published his history of the war after the deaths of Vespasian and Agrippa, and was still living when Josephus wrote his own life.

	Plutarch flourished. As he was old enough to receive instructions in an abstruse philosophy in A. D. 66, he was probably born in 46, and would be 52 at the accession of Trajan, to whom he had been preceptor. Pliny and Tertullus are in this year appointed tribuni ærarii Saturni. Pliny mentions in this year Licinius Nepos the prætor, and Afranius Dexter the consul. Afranius was consul suffectus Oct. 1 A. D. 98.
99	852 C. Sosius Senecio II A. Cornelius Palma. Trajani 2 from Jan. 25, trib. pot. 3 from October. Trajan returns to Rome. Dio Prusæus is favoured by Trajan. He was already eminent and in favour with Vespasian 30 years before. Dionis Or. XLVIII, an address to the citizens of Prusa, was composed when Varenus was proconsul of Bithynia, and before the Dacian war was finished, who were conquered in 102. Varenus was proconsul in the beginning of the reign of Trajan, although the year is not certain. Martial celebrates Trajan in lib. X, which is a second edition. He addresses X. 19 to Pliny then at Rome; quoted by Pliny himself Epist. III. 21.—X. 24 is written on the 1st of March, his 57th birthday. At the close of this book he had been 34 years at Rome, and now meditates a return to his own country. He sends this book to his native town Bilbilis. Martial sometimes scarcely produced one book in a year. He marks IX. 35 that he was composing epigrams at the time of the revolt of Antonius in 91, and promises Norbanus the productions of 6 years. The two books of distichs, the Xenia and the Apophoreta, were also composed in the reign of Domitian. Silius Italicus 31 years after his consulship still lives in retirement at Naples. Delivered in the senate in the beginning of September in the presence of Trajan. Martial is still at Rome, where probably lib. 	Second triumph of Trajan. The whole war with Dacia had lasted five years, from the middle of 101 to the middle of 106. The title optimus princeps now first appears upon the coins of Trajan, but had been already conferred before Sept. A. C. 86. Written before the 10th book, or Pericles and Fabius, and before Pyrrhus and Marius, and before Nicias and Crassus. The 5th book contained Demosthenes and Cicero; quoted in Phocion and Cato, and in Theseus and Romulus. When Plutarch wrote this 5th book, he lived at Chæronea. The Parallel Lives, or at least Theseus and Romulus, and the 5th book and the 12th, were addressed to Sosius Senecio, whom Plutarch also addresses in the Symposiacs, and in πῶς αὖ τις αἰσθόιτο ἑαυτοῦ προκόπτοντος. But of some of the lives there seem to have been two editions; for the 12th book is quoted in Cæsar, and yet Cæsar is quoted in the 12th book. Theseus and Romulus are quoted in Camillus, and Camillus in Numa; and yet Numa is quoted in Theseus and Romulus.

	Phlegon of Tralles remembered one who lived at this period. Coins with the title Parthicus were issued partly in the 19th partly in the 20th tribunician year. Trajan might receive this title in the summer of 116.
117	870 Ol. 224. Niger et Vipstanus Apronianus. The sedition of the Jews (see 115) is suppressed by Lusius. Death of Trajan at Selinus in Cilicia after a reign of 19y 6m 15d. The 15 days being placed at July 25—Aug. 8 will give Aug. 8 for the day of the death of Trajan, 3 days before Hadrian assumed the empire. Dio gives July 26—Aug. 9 for the 15 days, two days before the reign of Hadrian began. Trajan lived by some accounts 63 or 65 years. His birthday was Sept. 18 A.D. 97, and according to Dio he was 41 Sept. 18 A. D. 97, and 60y 10m 22d at Aug. 8 A. D. 117. Hadrian was at Antioch, 300 miles from Selinus, at the time of the death of Trajan, and was proclaimed through the management of Plotina on the 11th of August. Hadrian abandons the provinces east of the Tigris and the Euphrates.
118	871 Hadrianus Augustus II et Salinator. Hadriani 2 from Aug. 11, trib. pot. 2 from Aug. 11. Hadrian came to Rome through Illyricum. Four senators, Palma, Celsus, Nigrinus, Lusius, are put to death. Hadrian at Rome remitted the debts due to the treasury, in his second tribunician year, and second consulship, within Aug. 11—Dec. 31 A. D. 118. Epictetus and Favorinus are favoured by Hadrian. Epictetus, the slave of Epaphroditus, was already grown up in the reign of Nero, 50 years before the accession of Hadrian. During the reign of Trajan he dwelt at Nicopolis. His death at a very advanced age may be placed in the reign of Hadrian. Hadrian was afterwards jealous of Favorinus. This philosopher was the pupil of Dio and the preceptor of Herodes Atticus and of Alexander. Valerius Pollio of Alexandria flourished in the reign of Hadrian—author of an Ἀπτική λέξις. Terentius Scaurus a grammarian flourished in this reign; and Juvenal, whose 13th Satire was composed 60 years after the consulship of Fonteius A. D. 59.
119	872 Hadrianus Augustus III et Rusticus. Hadriani 3 from Aug. 11, trib. pot. 3 from Aug. 11. This progress occupied many years. He visited Gaul in 120, Arabia and Egypt in 130. His coins mark the countries which he visited, but not the years. Eusebius names at the year 2135, the 3rd of Hadrian. Plutarch of Chæronea, Sextus, Agathobulus, and Cœnomaus. Plutarch is now in advanced age; but Sextus in early youth. If Plutarch was 20 when Nero visited Greece, he would now be 74. His grandfather Lamprias had conversed with Philotas, who was a young man in B.C. 40. His great grandfather Nicharcus remembered the battle of Actium B. C. 30. Sextus the grandson of Plutarch was still living towards the end of the reign of Marcus, 57 years after this date.

I was written before the Odeum was begun by Herodes Atticus, lib. VII after he had finished it. The sophist Pausanias was probably a different person. See F. Rom. Vol. I p. 111, 112.

From Dio and Eusebius combined we may conclude that Hadrian was at Athens in October 129, that he passed the winter there, and proceeded in the spring of 130 to Syria, Judæa, Arabia, and Egypt. He reached Egypt in the autumn of 130. Aristides was born when the planet Jupiter was in the sign Leo. But this happened (in every 12th year) in A. D. 105. 117. 129 according to Halley. But A. D. 117 was too early. Born therefore in 129, at Adriani. The disciple of Polemo. He also heard Herodes at Athens and Aristocles at Pergamus, and was taught by Alexander of Cotiæum.

	The second era of Gaza marked upon coins commences in 129. The first era of Gaza is fixed to the year of the Seleucida 252 commencing Oct. B. C. 61 by a coin of Plautilla. The first year of the second era fell upon the years 19$\frac{1}{2}$ of the first, and commenced in the beginning of A. D. 130, to which date the visit of Hadrian is fixed, being marked by this new era of Gaza. His visit to Mount Casius, to Gaza, and Arabia, was in the beginning of 130, and he arrived in Egypt in the autumn. The death of Antinous may be placed in October 130. Pancrates an Alexandrian poet, known to Athenæus, was in reputation when Hadrian visited Egypt. Appian refers to this period. An Ephesian sophist, the disciple of Isæus, he taught at Athens, and was the preceptor of Theodotus and Philager. We may place Lollianus at about the 16th year of Hadrian, as an intermediate point between the times of his master Isæus and of his disciple Theodotus. Isæus flourished in 101, Theodotus, who died at something more than 50 years of age, was still living in 168. The Perpetual Edict was composed by Salvius Julianus. D. 128, some not earlier than 130, some later than 133. Favorinus and Polemo are named at this year by Eusebius. Polemo of Laodicea was the disciple of Timocrates, Scopelianus, and Dio. He taught Aristides. When Scopelianus was old, Polemo was a young man. He was ambassador for the first time from Smyrna in the old age of Scopelianus. Polemo was older than Herodes Atticus; but, as he was still living in 143, and died at 56, he could not have been born earlier than A. D. 87. Polemo and Favorinus were rivals. Marcus of Byzantium the disciple of Isæus was contemporary with Polemo, and was ambassador to Hadrian from the city of Byzantium. The preceptors of Marcus Aurelius the future Emperor were Euphorion, Geminus, Andron, the grammarian Alexander of Cotiæum, Trosius Aper, Pollio, Euty chius Proculus, the Greek orators Annius Macer, Caninius Celer, Herodes Atticus, the Latin Cornelius Fronto, the philosophers Apollonius of Chalcedon the stoic, Sextus of Chæronea the grandson of Plutarch, Alexander the Platonist, Junius Rusticus, Cinna Catullus, Claudius Severus. From some of these Marcus received instructions at this time in his 12th year, from others at a later period.

He heard Alexander declaim at Athens; saw Philager at Athens. Herodes was the preceptor of M. Aurelius and of Verus. He taught the sophists Pausanias, Ptolemy, Chrestus, Rufus, Onomarchus, perhaps Heraclides. In his youth he had declaimed before the emperor in Pannonia. Herodes governed the cities of Asia in the reign of Hadrian, when Antoninus was proconsul of Asia. Herodes declined or delayed a second consulship on account of the death of his wife Regilla. Polemo the sophist is mentioned in this year by Fronto. Cornelius Fronto is a consul suffectus for two months when M. Aurelius was 22 years of age. Marcus completed his 22nd year April 24 A. D. 143, and Fronto was consul from July 1 to Sept. 1. Fronto was not only the preceptor of Marcus but of Verus. Fronto was born at Cirta. His reputation in the reign of Hadrian is attested by Dio Cassius. The preceptors of Verus were the Latin grammarian Scaurus, the Greek grammarians Telephus, Hephæstio, Harpocratio, the rhetoricians Apollonius, Caninius Celer, Herodes Atticus, Fronto, the philosophers Apollonius and Sextus.

He lived beyond the middle age. We may collect that Aristocles was eminent at this date, when Herodes was a little more than 40, and Aristides 15 years of age. Galen at the age of 14 hears the disciples of Caius and Aspasius. Mosheim supposes a difficulty from the distance of the time in the account (see 140) that Valentinus conversed with a disciple of St. Paul. But the disciple of St. Paul might survive his master 40 years to A.D. 105, and, if Valentinus in 105 was 25 years of age, he would be 70 in 150, the first year of Anicetus. And as Valentinus aspired to be a bishop, and after his failure seceded from the church, he might be somewhat advanced in years when he published his heresy.

That Justin flourished at this period is marked by Eusebius himself, who has a wrong date in his Chronicon (see F. Rom. Vol. I p. 131) but in his History refers Justin to the times of Eleutherus and Anicetus A. D. 150—173. The dialogue with Trypho was written after this apology.

He is placed in Philostratus before Philager, in this order: Alexander (fl. 160—170.), Varus Pergæus, Hermogenes, Philager, Aristides (born in 129). Varus of Perga was contemporary with Polemo, who was eminent in 133—143. Galen at the age of 28 returns to Pergamus from Alexandria. It appears from his own narrative (see F. Rom. Vol. I p. 145) that he entered his 29th year about autumn 158.

The position of Hermogenes in the narrative of Philostratus has been already given at 158. The order is as follows: Alexander, Varus, Hermogenes, Philager, Aristides, Adrianus. Alexander flourished A. D. 160—170, Philager was the disciple of Lollianus, who taught in the reign of Hadrian (see 132), Aristides was born in 129. The birth of Adrianus was not later than 113. The impostor—who had been the disciple of a Tyanean a friend of Apollonius of Tyana—founded an oracle of Æsculapius and Apollo in his native place in Paphlagonia. This oracle was consulted by Severianus before his campaign in Armenia where he was cut off in 162; and in the war of Divus Marcus against the Marcomanni in 170—175, when the Romans lost on one occasion near 20,000 men. Lucian himself while his father was yet living visited Alexandria then in his highest reputation. Rutilianus at the age of 60, and before the Marcomannic war in 170, married Alexander's daughter. He survived Alexander (who died before he had completed 70 years), and himself died at 70. That visit of Lucian, being after the marriage of Rutilianus, was not long before Alexander's death, who survived that marriage less than 10 years. Rutilianus himself, whose death is also recorded in this piece, must have died before 180.

Pollux was the disciple of Adrian, and was appointed by Commodus to the professor's chair at Athens. He taught Antipater. Contemporary with Pollux was Athenodorus. The sophist Pausanias of Cappadocia was contemporary with these. He is placed between them by Philostratus, and may be referred to this period, among the disciples of Herodes Atticus. Irenæus bishop of Lyons is named by Hieronymus at the year 2198. Eusebius in his History mentions as flourishing together the following: Hegesippus, Dionysius of Corinth (see 173), Pinytus a Cretan bishop (see 173), Philippus, Apollinarius, Melito, (see 172), Musanus, Modestus, and finally Irenæus.

Among the disciples of Adrian were Pollux, Apollonius of Naucratis, Apollonius of Athens, Proclus of Naucratis, Damianus (who heard him at Ephesus), Antipater, Heraclides, Quirinus of Nicomedia.
193	946 Ol. 243. Q. Sosius Falco C. Julius Erucius Clarus. The elevation and death of Pertinax are related by Herodian. He was slain March 28. Pertinax had served 3 years in Liguria under Perennis, who was slain in 185. At his election he was præfectus urbis. He declined the honours of Augusta for his wife, and of Cæsar for his son. From his birth Aug. 1 A. D. 126 he lived 66y 7m 28d. From Jan. 1 A. D. 193 (when he began to reign) to March 28 both inclusive are 87 days, the period assigned by Dio for his reign. Julianus buys the empire. Niger assumes the empire at Antioch, Severus in Pannonia.

Julianus is slain 66 days after the death of Pertinax. From March 28 inclusive 66 days will place his death at June 1. He lived according to Dio 66y 4^m 4^d.

Severus, who had assumed the empire at Carnuntum on the 13th of April, 16 days after the death of Pertinax, is met at Interamna after the death of Julianus by a deputation of 100 senators, and enters Rome probably about the 10th of June, less than 60 days after the assumption of the empire. On the 30th day after his arrival he quitted Rome and proceeded to the East.

Galen delivers lectures in the reign of Pertinax.

Dion Cassius is a senator under Pertinax, and prætor elect. He describes himself in the reign of Julianus. As a senator he voted for his death. Dion is present at the entry of Severus into Rome and at the consecration of Pertinax.

Æmilianus is defeated and slain near Cyzicus by the generals of Severus, and Byzantium is besieged. After this, an obstinate battle was fought near the lake Ascanius, in the passes between Nicæa and Cius or Prusias. The forces of Severus were led by Candidus, who was opposed by Niger himself: Candidus rallied his men who were giving way, and Niger was defeated. The decisive combat was at Issus. Valerianus and Æmilianus commanded the army of Severus. The forces of Syria were led by Niger in person. The contest was long and doubtful. At length Niger was routed with the loss of 20,000 men, who fell in the action. Not long after, Antioch was taken, and Niger attempting to escape to the Euphrates was overtaken and slain. His head was exhibited before the walls of Byzantium.

Athenæus wrote after the death of Commodus; but, as he mentions no work of Galen, he probably composed before the death of Galen cir. A.D. 200. Athenæus preceded Ælian, who transcribed from his work. And Ælian himself lived in the time of Elagabalus A.D. 222.

(Galen de suis libris. Composed after the reign of Pertinax, for he mentions among his works an account of lectures delivered in the reign of Pertinax.)

Clemens Alexandrinus and Pantænus are commemorated at the year 2209 by Eusebius. A date consistent with Clemens himself, who mentions the death of Commodus but never names Severus. The Stromata were therefore written in the reign of Severus. When the Stromata were composed, he had already written the Protrepticus, and after that the Pædagogus in 3 books, and he looked forwards to old age as still Fixed by coins to the third tribunician year. Hippodromus of Larissa the sophist presided at the Pythia. He presided twice, and did justice to Clemens of Byzantium a tragic actor, who performed at the games. Hippodromus boldly adjudged the prize to a Byzantine during the siege of Byzantium. As the Pythia during that siege occurred in Ol. 243. 3, they are determined to the autumn of 195. Hippodromus was liberal in speaking of other sophists, both of those who were much older than himself, as Polemo, and of those who were only a little older, as Proclus of Naucratis, and of his contemporaries, as Heraclides, and of younger sophists, as Philostratus of Lemnos. He excelled all in extent of reading, except only Ammonius the peripatetic (see 265). He came to Smyrna to hear Heraclides, left about 30 meletæ, and died at the age of 70. He taught Aspasius. The following ecclesiastical writers flourished in the reigns of Commodus and Severus: Heraclitus, Maximus, Candidus, Apion, Sextus, Arabianus.

Severus, who commanded in person in this action, was in great peril, but rallied his troops and obtained the victory. The collected force of the two armies amounted to 150,000 men. Great numbers fell on both sides. Albinus escaping to a house near the Rhone slew himself. Severus after this war proceeds to the East against the Parthians. Dion Cassius was at Rome when the war with Albinus was impending. He was present at games in December 196. After the death of Albinus he was present at Rome when Severus by a message to the senate and people declared himself the son of Marcus and brother of Commodus. The dispute concerning Easter is placed by Hieronymus at the Eusebian year 2212, the 4th of Severus. The facts are in Eusebius H. E. V. 23—25. The churches of Asia Minor, the Quartadecimans, commemorated the Crucifixion on the 14th day of the moon, and the Resurrection on the 16th day of the moon, on whatever days of the week these might happen to fall. The other churches, neglecting the age of the moon, commemorated the Crucifixion on the 6th day of the week and the Resurrection on the 1st day of the week following. The Quartadecimans again (to commemorate the Last Supper) interrupted the Fast of Passion Week by eating their Paschal Supper in the evening which began the 14th day of the moon; the time of the Jewish Passover (for the Jews reckoned their days from sunset to sunset). The other Christians deferred their Paschal Supper till Easter day. The Quartadecimans followed the Apostles St. Philip and St. John. The other churches also asserted for their usage apostolical tradition. Victor bishop of Rome attempted to persuade the other churches to join in excommunicating the Quartadecimans, but the other bishops refused their consent. The Quartadecimans were only put out of communion with the diocese of Rome, and continued to observe Easter after their own way till A. D. 325. On this question the following bishops wrote against the

	Quartadecimans; Narcissus of Jerusalem, Theophilus of Cæsarea in Palestine, Victor of Rome, Palmas of Pontus, Irenæus of Lyons, Bacchylus of Corinth, Cassius of Tyre, Clarus of Ptolemais. But Irenæus recommends toleration and forbearance, quoting the precedent of Polycarp a Quartadeciman, who was received at Rome and treated with respect by Anicetus. Each was tolerant of the opinion of the other. For the Quartadecimans Polycrates of Ephesus, who followed their usage, claims the authority of the apostle St. Philip, the evangelist St. John, Polycarp of Smyrna (who appealed to the practice not only of St. John but of the other apostles with whom he had associated), Thraseas a bishop and martyr, Sagaris a bishop and martyr, Papirius, and Melito of Sardis. Polycrates speaks of himself at this time as "65 years old in the Lord." He probably computed the 65 years not from his birth but from his baptism.

He celebrates at Rome the decennalia and the marriage of Caracalla and Plautilla. The marriage is fixed to this year by coins. Dion Cassius is at Rome or in Italy during this period. At this period Dion often retired to Capua. A persecution of the Christians is recorded by Eusebius in the 10th of Severus, when Lætus was governor of Egypt and Demetrius bishop of Alexandria. In this persecution Leonidas the father of Origen perished. Origen at the death of his father had not completed his 17th year. If his 17th year was still current in the autumn of 202, his first was still current in the autumn of 186, and his birth may be placed at the close of 185. Judas flourished, who composed a commentary on the 70 weeks of Daniel, and brought his Chronography down to the 10th year of Severus.

Confirmed by Origen himself, who affirms that in these studies he followed the example of Pantænus and Heraclas; and that this last had studied under Ammonius five years before he himself had attended that teacher. The studies of Origen at Alexandria are referred to the Eusebian year 2221, which was the 13th of Severus. Ammonius then might be heard by Origen in 206, by Heraclas (5 years before) in 201. But this Alexandrian school produced an injudicious mode of combining philosophy with Scripture. Clemens learned this philosophical theology from his master Pantænus and taught it to his disciple Origen, to the prejudice of sound doctrine.

Dio, a contemporary, records three battles, in the last of which Artabanus fell. The enterprise of Artaxerxes then commenced at the end of the 4th year of Alexander; but the last decisive action and the death of Artabanus occurred in the beginning of the 5th year, in the spring of 226, and a few months before that 538th year began. Alexander in this year is in Italy.

	Dion Cassius between the accession of Alexander and his own second consulship had been in various governments. 238	991 Pius et Pontianus. Maximini trib. pot. 4 from Jan. 1. The Gordians were proclaimed in Africa after the third year of Maximin was completed. Confirmed by coins bearing his fourth tribunician year, which demonstrate that trib. pot. IIII had commenced before the Gordians were acknowledged by the senate. Maximin heard the news in his winter quarters at Sirmium, and in five days was on his march to Italy. After the death of the Gordians, M. Clodius Pupienus Maximus and D. Cælius Balbinus were appointed by the senate. Maximin heard of this second appointment on his march at Hemona, about 240 English miles from Sirmium, and arrived before Aquileia (60 miles from Hemona) when the snow had melted from the mountains. After some time spent in the siege of Aquileia Maximin was slain with his son Maximus. Pupienus received the news at Ravenna. Intelligence of the death of Maximin was carried in four days from Aquileia to Rome. On the return of Pupienus to Rome after celebrating the Capitoline games (which were held in 238), he was slain with Balbinus, and Gordian III proclaimed by the soldiers. The events of this memorable year may be thus arranged.

The Gordians were proclaimed in February, were slain in March, after one month and six days; Pupienus and Balbinus were appointed in March; Maximin reached Aquileia in April, was slain in the beginning of May; Pupienus and Balbinus were slain and Gordian III proclaimed about the middle of June. All the events might happen between Feb. 8 and June 15. Pupienus and Balbinus occupied 3 months; Maximin might reign from 8 Feb. 235 to the beginning of May 238 about 3^y 3^m. He was at his death 65 years old.

Censorini de die natali: in the years of these consuls, to which he refers all his dates.

The history of Herodian ends at this year with the elevation of Gordian III.

239 992 M. Antonius Gordianus Aug. M. Acilius Aviola. Gordiani 2 [from June.] trib. pot. 2 from Jan. 1.

Gordian at his elevation about the middle of June 238 was 13 according to Herodian and Victor. His birthday was January 20; and he might enter his 14th year 20 Jan. 239.

Philostratus composed the Lives of the Sophists when Aspasius, who attended Alexander in 230—234, was settled at Rome in the decline of life. Philostratus himself had been in Gaul in 213. He had been taught by Proclus of Naucratis, and had heard Antipater before February 212. He dedicates his work to "the consul Antonius Gordianus," who was descended from Herodes Atticus, and had conversed with Philostratus at Antioch. A consul suffectus in some year unknown. Philostratus had heard of Dionysius and Polemo from Aristæus. He had conversed with one who described the Panathenæa celebrated by Herodes Atticus, and with Ctesidemus, who had travelled over the isthmus of Corinth with Herodes. He had heard of Aristocles and Philager from elderly persons; and of Adrianus from his own teachers. He knew many Athenians who wept at the remembrance of Adrianus. Adrianus and Aristides were described to him by Damianus, the disciple of both. Damianus in his old age was known at Ephesus, and lived to the age of 70. His descendants flourished in the time of Philostratus. The author of the Lives of the Sophists was of Lemnos. He wrote his work in the lifetime of Aspasius, of Heliodorus, and Nicagoras, who was still living in 245. The author was the friend of Apsines, Nicagoras, and another Philostratus, who was born in 192. See 213, 215.

His master Proclus was the disciple of Adrian and lived 90 years. Philostratus had heard Hippodromus discourse against Proclus at Athens.

The author of the Lives of the Sophists was also the author of the life of Apollonius, which he quotes, and which he might have written, or at least begun, 25 years before this date.

He might have been 10 years older than the other Lemnian, as he describes; and this would suppose him 32 years of The new emperor Decius having appointed his son Etruscus Cæsar sent him into Illyricum. At this juncture L. Priscus was proclaimed by the army in Macedonia. Julius Valens also assumed the empire, and the Goths having passed the Danube ravaged Thrace and besieged and took Philippopolis. Priscus and Valens were soon destroyed, and Decius hastened from Rome to oppose the Goths. The ravages of the Goths were in 249. 250; and we may place the mission of the son of Decius into Illyricum at the close of 249 and the departure of Decius himself from Rome at the close of 250. Seven missionaries are sent in 250 into Gaul; Gatianus to the Turones, Trophimus to Arelate, Paulus to Narbonne, Saturninus to Tolosa, Dionysius to the Parisii, Stremonius to the Arverni, Martialis to the Lemovici. The Christian Faith was already planted at Vienne and Lyons in 177, and perhaps in some other parts of Gaul at an earlier period. But those former converts were probably small congregations, and only in a few districts. Fabianus of Rome suffered martyrdom in the Decian persecution 21 Jan. 250. His 2nd year began 29 Aug. 250, because 29 Aug. 249 was the 7th year of Philip. L γ therefore commenced 29 Aug. 251 and was current at his death, about November following. He might reign two years and two months. Cornelius is appointed bishop of Rome. We may place the deaths of the Galli in February; Æmilianus was slain in May, and Gallienus the son of Valerian acknowledged by the senate in June 254. It is shewn by coins that Gallienus in this year was not only Cæsar but Augustus; and, as his tribunician years are conumerary with those of his father (which are reckoned from his elevation in Rhætia in 253), it appears that Valerian himself associated his son already in the preceding year, while Trebonianus and Æmilianus were yet alive. Cornelia Supera the wife of Æmilianus is commemorated upon coins. Æmilianus has Alexandrian coins inscribed L α'. L γ' of Gallus was current till his death in Feb. 254, then L α' of Æmilianus was current for 3 months till May; then L α' of Valerian and Gallienus till Aug. 28, and their L β' began 29 Aug. 254. Coins of Valerian were issued after autumn 260, namely one of Ægæ in Cilicia bearing the year 307; one of Augusta in Cilicia inscribed with the year 241; and these epochs, the 307th year of Ægæ and the 241st of Augusta, commenced in autumn 260. Valerian is upon an Alexandrian coin bearing L η' which commenced 29 Aug. 260. No coins inscribed with his name are extant after A. D. 264, but he appears in one law of A. D. 262, and in one law of Jan. 8 A. D. 265. If these two inscriptions are genuine, they will confirm the opinion that Valerian survived his captivity some years, and that after his captivity he was still considered emperor by the Romans. Macrianus, supported by Ballista, is proclaimed in the East with his sons Macrianus and Quietus in the beginning of this year. In the Alexandrian coins of Macrianus L β commences 29 Aug. 261; L α therefore was current, and Macrianus was acknowledged at Alexandria, before that date; probably in the beginning of 261.

The sack of Tarraco by the Franci is referred to the 9th of Gallienus by Hieronymus. They occupied Spain during 12 years A. D. 256—267, within which period Tarraco might have been occupied at the date assigned by Hieronymus.

The rhetoricians Paulus and Andromachus, and the historian Dexippus, flourished at Athens from the time of Gallienus to the time of Probus, within 261—282.

On the captivity of Valerian his son by an edict stays the persecution of the Christians. At this period Demetrianus is bishop of Antioch, Firmilianus of Cæsarea in Cappadocia, Gregory and his brother Athenodorus, disciples of Origen, presided over the churches of Pontus, in Cæsarea of Palestine Domnus had succeeded Theoctistus, and was soon succeeded by Theotecnus, who lived to the times of Eusebius, and who was also a disciple of Origen. Hymenæus, who was long known to Eusebius, succeeded Mazabanus at Jerusalem in 262.

Manes in the 9th of Gallienus escapes into Mesopotamia, where he holds a disputation with Archelaus a Mesopotamian bishop, and with a presbyter Tryphon. Manes was afterwards pursued by the emissaries of the king of Persia, captured, and put to death. He flourished in the reigns of Sapor and Hormisdas, and was put to death by Vararam I within A. D. 273—275.

Macrianus with his son Macrianus is defeated and slain in Illyricum by Aureolus, who had assumed the empire in that province. Quietus son of Macrianus is slain in Asia, and Odenathus reigns in the East. As Macrianus reached his second year at Alexandria, commencing Aug. 29 A. D. 261, these events may be placed in 262.

To the 5th consulship of Gallienus are referred an earthquake, a pestilence, and the inroads of the Goths, who occupied Thrace, ravaged Macedonia, and besieged Thessalonica, although they were repulsed from Achaia. Meanwhile another army of Goths plundered Asia Minor, and destroyed the temple of Diana at Ephesus.

The surprise and plunder of Antioch by the Persians may be placed at this year, from a notice in Hieronymus, who records it at the 10th of Gallienus.

Postumus in Gaul associates Victorinus, who attained his 3rd tribunician year and was slain not later than the beginning of 268; which determines his elevation to 265, in the 8th year of Postumus. Postumus has now defended the empire in Gaul from 258, Odenathus in Syria from 260.

Longini de fine ad Plotinum et Gentilianum Amelium. Longinus in the proem names the philosophers whom he had seen in his youth or who were still living. He divides them into two classes, those who left written works, and those who left none. Of the first were the Platonists Euclides, Democritus, Proclius, Plotinus, Amelius, the stoics Themistocles, Phœbion, Annius, Medius, the peripatetic Heliodorus. Of the latter class were Platonists, Ammonius Saccas, Origenes, Theodotus, Eubulus; stoics, Herminus, Lysimachus, Athenæus, Musonius; peripatetics Ammonius and Ptolemy.

Longinus having praised the works of Plotinus and Amelius, as superior to those of the other philosophers, mentions his own pupil Porphyry. This treatise de fine was written after Porphyry had heard Plotinus for some time, and while Plotinus was still alive; therefore within 265—267.

Dionysius of Alexandria after an episcopate of 17 years died in the 12th of Gallienus, and was succeeded by Maximus, who presided 18 years. The letter of Dionysius upon Paul of Samosata in 264 is mentioned by the bishops in their epistle quoted by Eusebius. "Dionysius sent a letter to Antioch, of which we subjoin a copy. Firmilian, who came twice to Antioch, condemned the innovations of Paul, and was about to come to Antioch now, but died at Tarsus on his way." Firmilian therefore died on his journey to a third synod, which was held at the close of 269. The death of Dionysius may be placed at the end of 264 or beginning of 265. Maximus is named by Dionysius himself, "My fellow presbyter Maximus, the deacons Faustus, Eusebius, Chæremon." Eusebius was afterwards bishop of Laodicea in Syria, Faustus perished with Petrus of Alexandria in the 9th year of the persecution.

2000 ships having been destroyed, took refuge in mount Hæmus, where they were wasted by famine and pestilence, and pressed on all sides by the Roman forces. But Claudius himself died of the pestilence which, after the Gothic war had been completed, affected the Roman army. He died at Sirmium in the 3rd year of his reign at the age of 56. As his birthday was May 10, he might enter his 56th year 10 May 269. Aurelian had succeeded before August 270, for in the Alexandrian coins of Aurelian L. α' was current till Aug. 28, and L. β' commenced 29 Aug. 270. Quintillus has also L. α' upon Alexandrian coins, which was also current before L. α' of Aurelian. We must therefore refer the death of Claudius to the beginning of his 3rd year, before the summer of 270. His 3rd tribunician year, from Jan. 1, is attested by an inscription, when he had not yet the title Gothicus.

After the death of Claudius, Quintillus was proclaimed in Italy, and Aurelian at Sirmium. But Quintillus after 17 days destroyed himself at Aquileia.

Aurelian after his elevation first visited Rome, and then engaged the Goths in Pannonia. After his Pannonian campaign he encountered the Marcomanni and Alamanni in Italy before the close of this year. These transactions make it probable that he began to reign before midsummer, which agrees with his Alexandrian coins.

Plotinus dies in Campania at the end of the 2nd year of Claudius, at the age of 66, after a residence of 26 years at Rome. Porphyry at this time was at Lilybæum, Amelius at Apamea, Castricius at Rome; only Eustochius was present. Of his disciples Zethus, Zoticus, Paulinus, died before him. He had female disciples Gemina and her daughter Gemina, and Amphiclea.

Felix is appointed bishop of Rome. His predecessor died 26 Dec. 269, and his election was about 1 Jan. 270.

Paul of Samosata is deposed, by an order from Aurelian. The synod was held some months before Aurelian's accession, but, as the order for Paul's removal was issued by him, the deposition is brought to the year 270.

Domnus, the son of a former bishop Demetrianus, succeeds Paul, and is succeeded by Timæus in 272.

The Marcomanni being in Italy, the Sibylline books are consulted. The letter of Aurelian upon this subject is considered in the Senate 11 Jan. 271. From whence it is proved that the Marcomanni were in Italy in the autumn of 270, that the check was sustained by Aurelian at Milan towards the close of that year, and that his letter to the senate was written in the beginning of January 271. After Jan. 11 Aurelian defeated the Marcomanni. He was victor in three battles: at An inscription given in F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 311 describes Aurelian as trib. pot. V cos. III. The 6th tribunician year of Aurelian was current at his death, and is marked on a Roman coin. It had commenced therefore before March 275, and the second tribunician year had commenced before March 271. Whence we collect that his tribunician years, like those of his predecessors, from Marcus to Gallienus, were dated from Jan. 1. But as he died in his 3rd consulship, it follows that in this inscription either the tribunician year or the consulship is erroneously marked.

Felix bishop of Rome died in 274. He was succeeded by Eutychianus 5 Jan. 275, who presided 8^y 11^m 3^d and died Dec. 7 A. D. 283.

Death of Tacitus at Tarsus on the 200th day from his elevation. The 200th day will place his death at 11 April 276.

Florianus the brother of Tacitus is acknowledged at Rome, and Probus in the East. But Florianus is slain at Tarsus by his soldiers in the third month after his elevation. His reign is variously computed at 2^m 20^d, or at 82, 84, 88, 89, or 97 days. About 84 days from April will place his death at the beginning of July 276.

Probus was proclaimed by his army soon after the death of Tacitus, and his reign may be dated from about April 276, consistently with his Alexandrian coins, which reckon L. β to commence 29 Aug. 276.

Vararam II king of Persia succeeds his father in the beginning of 276. See 273. His reign of 17 years will terminate at the beginning of 293.

Proæresius the sophist, a Cappadocian of Cæsarea, is born in 276, since his 87th year was current in autumn 362. He is said to have been contemporary with Libanius, whom the emperor Julian, to mortify Proæresius (for Proæresius was a Christian) preferred and honoured. Libanius, born in 314, was 38 years younger than Proæresius. But Proæresius continued in reputation to a late period, to his 87th year.

(Callicrates of Tyre, a Greek historian, wrote between A. D. 275, and A. D. 306.)

Eusebius in the Armenian copy of his Chronicle has 3 redundant years between the 13th of Commodus and the 1st of Probus, which Hieronymus properly omits. The years are thus exhibited.

After these transactions he directed his course to the East, and in his progress delivered Isauria from Palfurius a powerful chief of banditti, whom he captured and put to death. Having secured the peace of Pamphylia, he penetrated into the Thebaid, overthrew a barbarous tribe, the Blemmyes, and recovered the cities Coptos and Ptolemais. After these victories, he received from the Persians offers of peace, which is concluded between the two empires. Probus then returned to Thrace, and settled 100,000 of the Bastarnæ in the Roman territory. 282 1035 M. Aurelius Valerius Probus Aug. V et Victorinus. Probi
7 (from April.)

Probus, having exhibited shows at Rome in the Circus, passing through Illyricum on his route to the Persian war, is slain at Sirmium by his soldiers.

Probus survived Aug. 29 A. D. 282, because coins after that date were issued at Alexandria. He reigned therefore at the least till September, 6^y 5^m from April 276. He died at the age of 50 years. His birthday was Aug. 19, and perhaps he had completed his 50th year 18 Aug. 282.

Carus the prætorian præfect is elected emperor, who immediately appoints his sons Carinus and Numerian Cæsars. The country and origin of Carus are uncertain.

283 1036 M. Aurelius Carus Aug. II M. Aurelius Carinus Cæsar. Cari trib. pot. 2 from Jan. 1.

Carus immediately on his accession delivered Illyricum and Thrace from the Sarmatians, of whom he slew 16,000 and captured 20,000. Then with the consent of the whole army he undertook the Persian war, for which Probus had made preparation. Leaving Carinus to preside in Gaul, and taking Numerian with himself, he occupied Mesopotamia without meeting an enemy, and penetrated to Ctesiphon, the Persians being engaged in domestic factions. He subdued the Sarmatians in his march from Sirmium to the East, probably before the close of 282.

Carus being at Ctesiphon is killed by lightening. He died in his 61st year. Four testimonies in the Code of Justinian shew that Carus still lived at Nov. 12. 21. 24. 27 A. D. 283. He probably died at the end of November. His second tribunician year is recorded in an inscription.

The poets Nemesianus and Apollinaris were contemporary with Numerian, who was himself a poet. Nemesianus celebrated Carinus and Numerian after the death of Carus. His lines alluding to the victories of Carus at Ctesiphon in 283 were written in 284, while Numerian was still in the East and Carinus in Gaul.

Theonas succeeded Maximus at Alexandria, and presided 19 years. The 18 years of Maximus, computed from the death of Dionysius, might be completed in the beginning of 283. See 265.

Pierius flourished. A presbyter of Alexandria, reckoned a second Origen for eloquence. Achilles, also a presbyter of Alexandria, was contemporary with Pierius.

Caius is appointed bishop of Rome. His predecessor Eutychianus died 7 Dec. 283, Caius succeeded 17 Dec. 283. His pontificate of 12^y 4^m 6^d terminated 22 Ap. 296.

Hieronymus in Chron. differs from Eusebius and from himself in the reigns and deaths of Carus and his sons.

Confirmed by Alexandrian coins of Numerian inscribed L. α' L. β' L. γ'. These demonstrate that Aug. 29 occurred twice within his reign. Aug. 29 A. D. 285 belonged to Diocletian, 29 Aug. 282 to Probus. The intermediate years then belonged to Numerian. L. α' was current till 28 Aug. 283, L. β' commenced 29 Aug. 283, L. γ' commenced 29 Aug. 284. But Syncellus is inaccurate in the accessions of the emperors, and loses 6 years between the death of Augustus and the death of Probus. The true interval was 268 years, Syncellus reckons 262. Theophanes adopts and exaggerates the error of Syncellus; for he places the 1st year of Diocletian at A. D. 277, from whence it comes to pass that every transaction in his Chronicle is some years in advance of its real time. But he assigns the true number of years to the successive reigns, and his anachronisms may be corrected by the help of the Indictions, which are rightly noted in Theophanes. For the notation of Syncellus and Theophanes see F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 381.

Diocletian associates Maximian, a Pannonian by birth, in power as Cæsar, before 5 Aug. 285. He winters at Nicomedia. The Alexandrian coins of Diocletian are inscribed L. α' L. β' L. γ' &c. to L. ι'. L. β' commenced 29 Aug. 285, L. γ' 29 Aug. 286, L. δ' 29 Aug. 287, L. ε' 29 Aug. 288. Consequently L. ι' commenced 29 Aug. 298, and terminated 28 Aug. 299. Theognostus flourished. The succession in the Alexandrian school (see 206) was this. The master of Pantænus was the first teacher, then Pantænus, Clemens, Origen, who was the fourth teacher. After Origen, Heraclas presides; then Dionysius; then Pierius; then Theognostus. Pierius might succeed Dionysius in 249.
286	1039 M. Junius Maximus II Vettius Aquilinus. Diocletiani 3 from Sept. 17. Diocletian at Nicomedia, where he had passed the winter, declares Maximian Augustus on the 1st of April. A coin of Maximian as Augustus issued before his consulship is extant bearing this inscription: Maximianus Augustus + p. m. tr. p. p. p. Issued within 1 Ap.—31 Dec. 286. Maximian in Gaul subdues the Bagaudæ, a band of rustic plunderers led by Ælianus and Amandus, and restores the peace of the provinces.

	Carausius, a Menapian, commanded the fleet of Maximian in the British channel, to repel the Franks and Saxons, who infested the coasts of Gaul in that quarter. Being suspected of want of zeal, or want of good faith, in rendering an account of the booty he had taken, and being in danger of punishment or of death from Maximian, he passed into Britain and there assumed the purple.

Before the fleet had encountered Carausius, a meeting of the two emperors Diocletian and Maximian is noticed. Diocletian had repressed the Persians by a treaty and not by arms. He had lately entered Germany from Rhætia.

The actual days of the births of Diocletian and Maximian are not known. But we may probably assign this discourse to 291 between April and December. The orator alludes to his former panegyric. Naval trophies are promised. This is not a reference to Carausius or to Constantius. Carausius had already defeated Maximian at sea, Constantius had not yet taken the command. The reference is therefore general and indefinite; a vague promise of future victories.

Galerius began his expedition while Diocletian was still at Alexandria; but all these events could not have happened in one campaign. The defeat of Galerius was in 297, but the retreat, the collection of new forces in Mœsia and Illyricum, and the march into Armenia, will extend the war into 298. Eumenii Panegyricus Constantio Cæsari recepta Britannia dictus. The orator after a long silence addresses Constantius, who is present. After the recent defeat of the Carpi and the reduction of Egypt, and while the war with the Mauri was still pending. He mentions the passage into Britain, the death of Allectus, the defeat of the Franci by Constantius at London, the liberation of Britain. No allusion is made to Galerius in Persia, nor to the victory of Constantius over the Alamanni, who lost 60,000 men. The oration then was pronounced before these events, in 297. Eumenius is now of mature age and experience. Diocletian in his progress through Palestine on his way to Egypt to encounter Achilleus was accompanied by Constantine, and Eusebius saw them on that occasion in the autumn of 296. Constantine in the autumn of 296 was about 23 years of age. The age of Eusebius at that date is not known. No evidence remains to fix the year of his birth. He names

Eusebius calls those who flourished after the death of Dionysius of Alexandria in 265 "the men of his generation." He speaks of Dionysius himself and of Paul of Samosata as in his time. From these notices combined we may conclude that Eusebius was born about 265, which will extend his life to about 75 years. See 340.

307 1060 M. Aurel. Valerius Maximianus Aug. IX Flavius Valerius Constantinus Cæsar. Galerii 3 from May 1, Constantini 2 from July 25.

Galerius sent Severus whom he had appointed Augustus, against Maxentius to Rome. But Maximian had now resumed the empire, and Severus is deserted by his army and escapes to Ravenna, where he is taken, or delivers himself up, and is slain. Galerius himself attempts Rome, but is repulsed.

Licinius is now appointed Augustus by Galerius at Carnuntum 11 Nov. 307, and the title of fili Augustorum is conferred upon Maximin and Constantine.

Trebellius Pollio addresses his life of Claudius to Constantine Augustus. He had already published these lives before 291. Wherefore we must suppose with Casaubon that he now published a second edition of the life of Claudius.

Panegyricus Maximiano et Constantino. Delivered at the marriage of Constantine and Fausta. Maximian had sought Constantine after the death of Severus, and this marriage occurred about the time of the attack of Galerius upon Rome. The orator mentions the resumption of the empire by Maximian. Constantine at this time receives the title of Augustus from Maximian.

Pamphilus was imprisoned after Nov. 5th in the 5th year of the persecution in Palestine. He remained with his companions two years in prison.

Maxentius, who is now in Italy, assumes the consulship with his son Romulus. But the army in Africa, rejecting Maxentius, proclaims Alexander, who appears as Augustus upon coins of Carthage and of Tripolis.

Galerius declares Maximinus Daza and Constantine Augusti.

Helladius flourished, an Egyptian, the author of a Chrestomathia.

Julianus the sophist flourished in the reign of Constantine: of Cæsarea in Cappadocia, contemporary with Ædesius; and Ædesius is now about 30 years of age: Proæresius after his studies at Antioch found Julianus at Athens. And Proæresius in this year is 32 years of age. He succeeded Julianus at Athens before 342. These particulars establish that Julianus taught at Athens about A. D. 306—342. Julianus is said by Suidas to be contemporary with the sophist Callinicus. A second Callinicus, a later sophist than Callinicus, who is described at 266.

Pamphili et Eusebii pro Origene libri VI. Hieronymus, who in 392 had given the Defence of Origen. to Pamphilus, renounces that opinion in 402, and complains that Rufinus had

	deceived him. Hence it appears that Rufinus had already translated the Apology for Origen before the year 392. According to Photius however the first five books of that work were written by Pamphilus, and the 6th by Eusebius, who completed it after the death of the martyr, who perished in 309.

From his appointment as Cæsar 1 March 292 to his death in May 311 are 19 years and more than two months; from his elevation as Augustus 1 May 305 are six years.

Maximin after the death of Galerius is master of Asia.

After the death of Maximian, Maxentius leading a force under the prætorian prefect Rufus Volusianus overthrows Alexander, who is slain, and Carthage and Africa are occupied by Maxentius.

Eumenii gratiarum actio Constantino. After the 5th year of Constantine was completed. The 5th year was completed 24 July 311, and this oration was composed soon after. Eumenius addresses Constantine at Treves in behalf of Augustodunum. In his youth he remembered the reign of Claudius in 269; which agrees with the age of the orator at 310.

Antonius the monk is noticed at this date by Athanasius. See 357.

312 1065 Flavius Valerius Constantinus Aug. II P. Valerius Licinianus Licinius Aug. II. Constantini 7 from July 25. Licinii 6 from Nov. 11.

Constantine, collecting the forces of Gaul and Britain, leaving a part to defend the Rhine, descends with the rest from the Alps into Italy, against Maxentius, who, collecting still more numerous forces from Rome and Italy, from Carthage and Sicily, prepares to meet him. But the city of Sigusium at the foot of the Alps is stormed and nearly burnt by Constantine. The cavalry of Maxentius is defeated in the plains of Taurini. Ruricius, who commanded in Verona for Maxentius, is overthrown and slain. After the victory, Verona surrenders to the conqueror. Having razed all the cities of Northern Italy, Constantine proceeded to encounter Maxentius himself, who is defeated in a great battle at the Mulvian bridge, is borne along by the crowd of fugitives and drowned in the Tiber. He had reigned 6 years from 27 Oct. 306, and perished Oct. 27 A. D. 312, on the first day of his 7th year.

The Indictions begin at Sept. 1 A. D. 312.

Jamblichus of Chalcis in Syria, the philosopher, the disciple of Porphyry, flourished in the reign of Constantine. He was also the disciple of Anatolius. Among the disciples of Jamblichus were Sopater of Syria, Ædesius and Eustathius of Cappadocia, Theodorus and Euphrasius from Greece, Alypius of Alexandria. Ædesius succeeded Jamblichus, and succeeded in the reign of Constantine. Sopater repaired to the court of Constantine after the death of Jamblichus. From the history of Sopater we may collect that Jamblichus was dead before A. D. 330, and we may thus determine the times. His predecessor Porphyry was 68 in 301; his successor Ædesius died at an advanced age in 355. Jamblichus, who came between them, may be placed at 309—329.

A later Jamblichus, with whom the emperor Julian corresponded, lived in the year 363.

Methodius suffered martyrdom at the close of the persecution. He suffered at Chalcis in Syria; for Syria was under the dominion of Maximinus Daza, who persecuted the Christians.

Achillas is appointed bishop of Alexandria. His predecessor Petrus was martyred in the 9th year of the persecution and the 11th of his episcopate, towards the end of 311; and the vacancy of a year which followed will bring down the appointment of Achillas to the 7th of Constantine and the end of 312.

Constantine and Licinius met at Milan, where Licinius married Constantia the sister of Constantine. After the nuptials Constantine returned to Gaul and Licinius to Illyricum.

Maximin meanwhile, moving rapidly with his army, while it was yet winter invades the territories of Licinius. He marches to Byzantium, Heraclea, and Perinthus. Licinius advanced to Hadrianople to oppose him. The armies met 18 Roman miles from Heraclea 30 Ap. 313, when the forces of Maximin, 70,000 men, were routed by 30,000 soldiers of Licinius. Maximin on the 1st of May, the anniversary of his elevation, fled from the scene of his defeat, first to Nicomedia and then to Cappadocia.

A few days after this victory Licinius entering Nicomedia published an edict 13 Jan. 313 in favour of the Christians, restoring the churches to their pristine state. Thus the persecution ceased, 10 years and 4 months after the first edict for persecution published by Diocletian at Nicomedia 24 Feb. 303.

Diocletian dies in 313 in the 9th year from his abdication, after the marriage of Constantia and before the death of Maximin.

Maximin being pursued by Licinius reached Tarsus in his flight, where he expired before the end of summer 313. He had reigned as Cæsar 3 years, from A. D. 305, and as Augustus 5 years, from 308.

Panegyricus Constantino. Addressed to Constantine in Gaul by a native of Gaul. The orator celebrates the victory over Maxentius. The expedition was undertaken with small forces. Constantine, as he affirms, left three fourths of his army to defend the Rhine, and with only a fourth part marched to encounter 100,000 men. In Zosimus however the forces of Constantine are 98,000, the forces of Maxentius 188,000. Probably Zosimus exaggerates the forces of both, while the panegyrist reduces below the truth the numbers of Constantine. This discourse was pronounced a year after the war. The son of Constantine was not yet Cæsar. The event was yet future. The orator remembered Verona 29 years before, in the war of Carinus and Julianus in 284. Cæcilianus bishop of Carthage, who with the permission of Maxentius had been appointed successor to Mensurius, is accused. The cause is remitted to Rome by the proconsul Anulinus in an edict dated 15 Ap. 313. The accuser was Donatus a Numidian bishop of Casæ Nigræ. The cause was heard at Rome by Melciades bishop of Rome, who pronounced in favour of Cæcilianus. Donatus resisted this decision, and hence arose the Donatist party. Rhæticius, bishop of Augustodunum in Gaul, flourished in the reign of Constantine. He is named by Constantine in his letter to Melciades bishop of Rome, written in 313.

314	1067 C. Ceionius Rufus Volusianus II et Annianus. Constantini 9 from July 25, Licinii 8 from Nov. 11. War arises between Constantine and Licinius. It was proposed that Bassianus, who had married Anastasia the sister of Constantine, should be appointed Cæsar. But Licinius excited Bassianus to revolt against Constantine. It is discovered and prevented. But Licinius refuses to give up Senecio brother of Bassianus, the author of the plot. Other causes of offence had also occurred and the two emperors have recourse to arms. Constantine with 20,000 men engages and defeats his rival, who led 35,000, at Cibalis in Pannonia 8 Oct. 314. Licinius favoured by the night fled to Sirmium, thence with his wife and son and treasure to Dacia, where he created Valens Cæsar. After this, Licinius from Hadrianople negotiates with Constantine, who is stationed at Philippopolis. The negotiation failed, and the war was renewed. The armies engage in the plains of Mardia. The contest was long and doubtful. At length the army of Licinius gave way. Licinius by a second embassy obtains a peace, in which it is agreed that Valens shall be deposed and put to death; that Crispus and Constantine, sons of Constantine, and Licinius son of Licinius, shall be Cæsars; that Licinius shall hold the East, Asia, Thrace, Moesia; that Constantine shall possess Illyricum and the West. The two emperors are consuls together in the year following. Libanius was born towards the end of 314, since his 50th year was still current in July 364, and his 57th was completed in the autumn of 371. A sophist, born at Antioch, he came at an early age to Athens, where he selected Diophantus of Arabia for his preceptor.

The orator mentions the winter which followed that victory, the winter of 321. Crispus had engaged the Franci in 320, and after his victory had travelled in the beginning of 321, while it was yet winter, to join his father, with whom he was present in Illyricum when that Panegyric was pronounced at Rome. That Constantine was in Illyricum in 321 appears from the inscriptions of various laws in the Theodosian Code. Of the Cæsar Constantine it is said by Nazarius "jam maturato studio literis habilis, jam felix dextera fructuosa sub- scriptione lætatur." According to Zosimus and Victor he was born at the end of February 317, and is now therefore only in his fifth year. But according to the anonymous chronographer quoted at 314, he is in his eighth year, which better agrees with the description of the orator.

Nazarii Panegyricus Constantino. Delivered at Rome. Neither Constantine nor the sons of Constantine are present. Pronounced in the beginning of the 5th year of the Cæsars, and in the 15th year of Constantine. The 5th year of the Cæsars began 1 March 321, the 15th of Constantine terminated 24 July 321. And this oration was delivered between those dates. Nazarius describes the war with Maxentius. He had declaimed on the same subject the day before.

Alexander bishop of Alexandria condemns Arius. This date for the condemnation of Arius is confirmed by Athanasius, who places it 36 years before A. D. 356. At this time Silvester is bishop of Rome, Philogonus of Antioch, Macarius of Jerusalem, Alexander of Byzantium.

Achillas succeeded Petrus at Alexandria at the close of 312. (See 312.) He presided only one year, and was succeeded by Alexander at the close of 313, who died in the 13th year of his episcopate, in January 326.

The Sarmatians, who were seated near the lake Mæotis, crossed the Danube and invaded the empire. Constantine marching against them repulsed them and followed them across the Danube. This Sarmatian war preceded the war with Licinius in 323, and was later than the Panegyric of Nazarius in 321, by whom it is not mentioned. It may therefore be referred to 322.

323 1076 Acilius Severus et Vettius Rufinus. Constantini 18 from July 25.

War with Licinius. The Cæsar Crispus with a navy is sent to occupy Asia, and is opposed by Amandus. Licinius himself is posted with a great army near Hadrianople. Thither Constantine directed his march, and on the 3rd of July 323 defeated Licinius, who fled to Byzantium, where, strong in his naval forces, he nominated Martinianus Cæsar, and prepared to sustain a siege. But his fleet under Amandus being destroyed by Crispus, Licinius, despairing of the sea, retired with his treasures to Chalcedon. Supported by a body of Goths he encountered Constantine again at Chrysopolis 18 Sept. 323. In this battle he is overthrown, and his legions surrender to the conqueror. The next day Constantia solicited and obtained from her brother Constantine the life of her husband, who surrenders himself upon those conditions.

	Licinius from 11 Nov. 307 had reigned almost 16 years, to his surrender 19 Sept. 323. Constantius the third son of Constantine who was born in Illyricum on the 7th of August, and perhaps in the year 316, is appointed Cæsar 8 Nov. 323. Eusebius represents the war against Licinius as undertaken solely for the defence of the Christians. In his Ecclesiastical History he makes Licinius the aggressor. In his narrative in the Life of Constantine he is tedious, in the History he is tumid. In both narratives he is vague and indistinct. The surrender of Licinius is passed over in silence by Eusebius.

This happened towards the end of Lent, a little before Easter. Which determines the synod to the beginning of 341, before April, and it appears from the Theodosian Code that Constantius was at Antioch Feb. 12 A. D. 341.

Earthquakes in this year are mentioned by Socrates, by Sozomen, Theophanes, Cedrenus, and Idatius.

Athanasius after the arrival of Gregorius withdrew on account of the violences committed by the opposite party, and retired to Rome. As those violences were at Easter, the arrival of Athanasius at Rome may be placed soon after Easter, in the beginning of May 341. At Rome he is received by Julius.

Marcellus of Ancyra also takes refuge at Rome.

Audæus the author of the Audæan heresy is placed by Hieronymus at the 4th of Constantius.

At the close of this year a sedition is excited at CP. after the death of Eusebius of Nicomedia, who held the episcopate of CP. The people restore Paulus to that see, while the Arian party nominate Macedonius the successor of Eusebius. Constantius, then at Antioch, upon hearing this, directed Hermogenes, who was passing with an army into Thrace, to expel Paul; but the populace rising against him, Hermogenes is slain. The emperor after this event hastened in person to CP. drove out Paul, and deprived the city of the daily allowance of corn granted by his father; but forbore to place Macedonius in the vacant see. After this, he returned to Antioch. As the death of Eusebius did not happen before November, these transactions may have extended to the beginning of 343.

Proæresius the sophist was summoned by Constans into Gaul. He remained some time in Gaul, and was sent to Rome. Constans was in Gaul in 341—345, within which period the journey of Proæresius must be placed. Already before his visit to Gaul he had been appointed successor to Julianus at Athens.

Julii Romani epistola ad Eusebianos. Written when Athanasius had been 18 months at Rome, who came to Rome soon after Easter 341. This letter then may be placed at October 342, Julius complains that they have detained his messengers

	till January. He justifies the reception of Athanasius and Marcellus at Rome. He asserts that Marcellus had cleared himself to the synod of 50 bishops at Rome. Julius urges that Alexandria and Ancyra, the dioceses of the deposed bishops, were churches founded by Apostles; that the bishop of Rome ought to have been consulted. Eusebius of Nicomedia was still living when the letter of Julius was written; but, as he died in this year, before the sedition at CP., his death may be placed in November. Marcellus was treated with forbearance and respect by Athanasius and his friends, because he was persecuted by their common adversaries the Arians. The real opinions of Athanasius may be gathered from Epiphanius quoted by Montfaucon ad Athanasium tom. I p. 274 ed. Patav. Photinus a Galatian, a disciple of Marcellus, and bishop of Sirmium, taught the heresy, which bore his name, soon after the synod of Antioch. He was afterwards banished by Valentinian, and was the author of numerous works.
343	1096 M. Mæcius Memmius Placidus et Romulus. Constantii II Constantis 7 from May 22. Immediately after the peace with the Franci Constans crossed over into Britain. He is at Bononia Jan. 25; from whence therefore he passed over to Britain at the end of January. In June he had returned to Treveri; from whence a law of Constans is dated June 30. It appears from the Theodosian Code that Constantius was at Antioch in February, and at Hierapolis in June and July 343. Maximin bishop of Treveri is marked at the 6th of Constantius. He gave an asylum to Athanasius, and honourably treated him, when pursued by Constantius. Firmicus Maternus flourished. His discourse de errore profanarum religionum is addressed to Constantius and Constans. Composed therefore before the death of Constans in 350, and after his passage into Britain in 343, which is mentioned. Firmicus refers to the Persian wars of Constantius II, perhaps the repulse of Sapor from Nisibis in 338. He augurs success in future. The Persian war therefore was still pending. As no distinct allusion is made to the boasted victory of Singara, we may conclude that Firmicus wrote before that event, and we may place his work within 343—347.

346	1099 Fl. Julius Constantius Aug. IV Fl. Julius Constans Aug. III. Constantii II Constantis 10 from May 22. Sapor a second time besieges Nisibis for 3 months without success. This siege is followed by an eclipse of the sun which happened 6 June 346, being 6 June of the 10th year of Constantius. Hieronymus has placed the eclipse and the 10th of Constantius one year too low, because he had obtained a redundant year before the accession of Diocletian, (see 283), which has deranged his chronology in all the succeeding reigns, so that the years of each emperor are always one year too low. He has the right period from the 20th of Diocletian to the 14th of Valens, or 75 years, both inclusive; and the true period from 17 Sept. 303, when the 20th of Diocletian began, to 27 March 378, when the 14th of Valens ended, was 74y 6m 11d, or 75 years in round numbers. But the whole series is carried downwards one year below the true time. From the Theodosian Code we learn that Constans was at Cæsena in May, and Constantius at CP. in May and August 346. Libanius resides at Nicomedia for 5 years before he is recalled to Constantinople. He is at Nicomedia in 349, 350. He had returned to CP. before 352, and three summers had passed between his return thither and his journey to Antioch. The summers therefore of 350, 351, 352; for he passed 4 months at Antioch in the latter part of 352. His recal then to CP. will be placed at the beginning of 350, and his first settlement at Nicomedia, 5 years before, at the beginning of 345. Triphyllius a Cyprian bishop flourished in the reign of Constantius II. Constans had supported Athanasius, but Constantius refused to restore him. At length the two emperors agreed to assemble a synod at Sardica, a town of Illyricum. At this council Asclepas of Gaza, Marcellus of Ancyra, and Athanasius himself, were present. The bishops from the east and west assembled, according to Athanasius, to the number of 170. But he gives the names of 284 bishops, including not only those who were present, but many who, though absent, assented to the acts of the council. The synod met after May 22, when the 11th year began. The order for

The author of numerous and popular works. Athanasius after three years at Rome was at Milan, then in Gaul, and with Hosius proceeded to the Council of Sardica. Athanasius and Marcellus were restored by the Council, and Gregorius of Alexandria and Basilus of Ancyra are deposed. But Basilus is bishop again in 351.

The first appointment of Cyril is placed at 348 by Hieronymus, who charges him with joining the Arian party and receiving the episcopate from their hands. After this first appointment he was three times deposed, and three times restored. He died after a long and troubled period of 40 years, in 388. (see 381.)

He had held the episcopate almost 8 years from his entrance into Alexandria at Easter 341. The Code attests that Constans was at Sirmium in May 349, and that Constantius was at Antioch in April, and at CP. in October.

	Libanii basilicus ad Constantium et Constantem. A panegyric upon both, delivered at Nicomedia. He never alludes to the elder brother Constantine II, but always speaks as if Constantine had only two successors. He attests that Constans is now in Pannonia. The orator describes the battle of Singara, which he calls the last battle. This oration was therefore composed in 349, after the battle of Singara in 348, and before the death of Constans 18 Jan. 350. Athanasius, a year after the deputies from the Council of Sardica arrived at Antioch, is permitted by Constantius after Gregory's death to return to Alexandria. Constantius upon this occasion wrote to his brother Constans, and to Athanasius himself, to promote the return of Athanasius to his diocese. Athanasius describes his progress. After the synod of Sardica he dwelt for a long time at Aquileia, where he received the letters of Constantius. He had seen Constantius formerly, first at Viminacium, then at Cæsarea in Cappadocia; his third interview with the emperor was at Antioch on this occasion. From Constantius he proceeded to Jerusalem, where Maximus the predecessor of Cyril is still alive. From hence he went to Alexandria. He might arrive there 6 months after the death of Gregory, in the middle of 349, and more than 8 years after his expulsion. His fortunes from his second exile in 341 are thus traced by Hieronymus. "Athanasius fled to Constans in Gaul, from whence he returned with the emperor's letters to Alexandria. But after the death of Constans he was expelled again in 356, and lay concealed till the accession of Jovian, by whom he was restored. He died in the reign of Valens."
350	1103 Sergius et Nigrinianus. Constantii II 14 from May 22. Magnentius assumes the empire at Augustodunum 18 Jan. 350, and Constans is pursued and slain by his emissaries at Helena in the Pyrenees. When the death of Constans is known, Vetricianus is proclaimed at Mursia in Pannonia 1 March 350. And Nepotianus aided by a band of gladiators assumes the empire at Rome 11 June 350. Nepotianus is slain in 28 days. Vetricianus is deposed in the tenth month, probably 25 Dec. 350, after a reign of 9^m 25^d. The testimonies to these events are given in F. Rom. Vol. I p. 416. 418. Constans at his death was in the 17th year as Cæsar from Dec. 333, in the 13th as Augustus from 337, and in the 10th from the death of his brother Constantine II in 340. Meanwhile, during the absence of Constantius in the west, Sapor besieges Nisibis for the third time. Libanius at that time taught at Nicomedia,

	and, although Julian did not attend the lectures, he purchased and studied the works of the sophist. Libanius had quitted that city after his 5 years' residence in the beginning of 350, but returned thither in the summer of the same year; and Julian might either be sent to Nicomedia in 349 before the 5 years of Libanius were ended, or in 350, during that summer visit. Julian is still at Nicomedia when Gallus passes through in 351. After that time he never saw Gallus. (Eustochius of Cappadocia described these times. See Suidas p. 1529 C.) Jacobus of Nisibis, who is mentioned by Hieronymus at the first siege of Nisibis in 338, is placed by Philostorgius at 350. For many years he concealed his Paganism. He relates that when he became Cæsar in November 355, one confidential servant alone was conscious of the fact. In 360, before his elevation, to conciliate the Christians he still professed Christianity. After the death of Constantius he avows himself at the close of 361. A Synod appointed by Constantius to meet at Sirmium condemns Photinus for adopting the dogmas of Sabellius and Paul of Samosata, and Photinus is deposed in 351. Constantius drives Magnentius from Aquileia into Gaul.

From the two Codes it appears that Constantius was at Sirmium in Feb. and March 352, and at Milan in November. He was already master of Rome 26 Sept. 352.

Libanius is at CP. at the fall of the tyrants, and is invited to Athens by Strategius, who had been appointed governor of Greece after the fall of the tyrants. He declines the invitation, and obtains leave to visit Antioch for 4 months. He was again at Antioch at the time of the sedition in 353. The present four months therefore preceded the winter of 353, and the appointment of Strategius is carried back to the beginning of 352, when Vetrano had been deposed and Magnentius had been defeated.

Paul of Constantinople (see 342) had been sent by Constantius bound with chains to Singara in Mesopotamia, and from thence transferred to Emesa; thence to Cucusus, where he is strangled by order of Philippus. As Philippus, the agent in these transactions, was engaged against Magnentius in 351, we may refer the last exile and death of Paulus to 352. The last mention of Philippus in the Theodosian Code is in 349. He was in the west in 351. He conducted Paulus to Cucusus in 352, and the disgrace of Philippus within a year of the death of Paul, might happen in the beginning of 353.

353 1106 Ol. 283 Fl. Julius Constantius Aug. VI Fl. Julius Constantius Cæsar II. Constantii II 17 from May 22.

Magnentius is defeated in a third battle in Gaul by Constantius, and escapes to Lugdunum, where he dies by his own hand 11 Aug. 353. His brother Decentius also slew himself 18 Aug. 353. Magnentius had reigned from his elevation 18 Jan. 350 to his death 11 Aug. 353 37 6^m 25^d, called by Victor 42 months, by Zosimus 37 6^m. He was near 50 years of age.

Constantius marries Eusebia in 353 after the death of Magnentius and before Oct. 10.

The Isaurians plunder Lycaonia and Pamphylia, when the legions were in winter quarters.

Constantius in 353 is at Ravenna in July, at Lugdunum in August, at Arelate in October, where he winters.

The sedition at Antioch and the cruelties of Gallus there at the close of this year are told by Ammianus. This sedition happened nine years before January 363, according to Julian; which, understood of current years, will agree with the close of 353.

Hieronymus places at the 16th of Constantius Gennadius an eminent orator at Rome and Tiberius Victor Minervius a rhetorician of Burdigala, who taught at Rome with great applause.

Ammianus Marcellinus is in the East with Ursicinus, a dis-

	tinguished commander, who defended Nisibis, and who gave secret information to Constantius of the tyranny of the Cæsar Gallus at Antioch. Ammianus in 354 accompanied Ursicinus to Milan. Libanius again visits Antioch. He arrived at the time of the sedition and the death of Theophilus, which are fixed by Ammianus to 353. Libanius now finally settled at Antioch. Aëtius the preceptor of Eunomius is at Antioch in the time of the Cæsar Gallus, to whom he was acceptable as an interpreter of Scripture. Aëtius was skilled in logic, and had studied the philosophy of Aristotle at Alexandria.
354	1107 Fl. Julius Constantius Aug. VII Fl. Julius Constantius Cæsar III. There he took measures against the Cæsar Gallus. Gallus by command of Constantius made a journey from Antioch to Constantinople, preceded by his wife Constantina. But Constantina died in Bithynia of fever on her way, and Gallus lost the advantage of her intercession. He arrived at Hadrianople in the winter, and from thence was carried to Pola in Istria; the scene of the death of Crispus, 28 years before. He is slain by Pentadius, Serenianus, and Apodemus, the ministers of Constantius, at the little island of Flanona near Pola. He died in the winter, at the close of 354, in the 4th year current of his reign as Cæsar, which began 15 March 351. Gallus the son of Constantius and Galla was in his 29th year. Constantius receives the news of this event at Milan. Ammianus the historian accompanies Ursicinus to Milan. Victorinus the rhetorician and Donatus the grammarian, the preceptor of Hieronymus, flourished at this period at Rome. Agrippina. He is slain in 28 days. But Constantius is alarmed by the account of the state of Gaul, which was left undefended a spoil to the barbarians. These ravages occurred after the deaths of Magnentius and Decentius in 353. To repress these evils it is determined to appoint Julian Cæsar.

Julian after the death of Gallus had been confined for 7 months in Cappadocia. After this, he visited Ædesius at Pergamus; of the sophists, Eusebius the Carian and Chrysanthius were present; Maximus was at Ephesus, Priscus in Greece. Julian after this conference went to Ephesus, and there saw Maximus. From thence he passed into Greece, whither at the intercession of the empress Eusebia he obtained permission to retire. From Greece after the death of Sylvanus he was called into Italy, and appointed Cæsar at Milan 6 Nov. 355. After his marriage with Helena the sister of Constantius, he is sent into Gaul, with a slender force of 360 men, 1 Dec. 355.

Alcimus and Delphidius, rhetoricians of Aquitania, and Petrus an orator of Cæsar Augusta, are celebrated by Hieronymus at the 18th of Constantius.

Themistius is favoured by Constantius, who recommends him to the senate of CP. in a letter which is read in the senate 1 Sept. 355. Themistius is now married. His father, Eugenius, who is still living, is also mentioned with honour by the emperor.

Ammianus accompanies Ursicinus into Gaul.

Ædesius, who a little before his death was visited at Pergamus by Julian, died in advanced age in 355, a little before Julian's mission into Gaul. Chrysanthius, who was at Pergamus at the time of Julian's visit, when young had heard Ædesius, was the preceptor of Eunapius, and lived to his 80th year. His successors were Epigonus and Veronicianus.

Oribasius the physician is in favour with Julian, whom he accompanies into Gaul. He was possessed of Julian's secret. See 351.

A synod is held at Milan by order of Constantius in 355 against Athanasius. The following bishops are banished for adhering to Athanasius and to the Nicene Council; Eusebius of Vercellæ, Lucifer of Caralis, Liberius of Rome, Hilarius of Pictavi, Dionysius of Milan, Paulinus of Treveri, together with Pancratius a Roman presbyter and Hilarius a deacon.

Acacius of Cæsarea (see 340) assists at the appointment of the Arian Felix as the successor of Liberius at Rome.

Serapion of Thmuis and four other Egyptian bishops support the cause of Athanasius.

Hieronymus marks that Donatus bishop of Carthage was expelled in the 18th of Constantius.

Gregory of Nazianzus and Basil of Cæsarea study at Athens together under Himerius and Proæresius the sophists. At Athens they were known to Julian, who was in this year at Athens. Gregory quitted Athens in his 30th year, and was still young when he returned to his own country.

He was hastening to Constantius with this apology, when he heard the report that many bishops had been banished; among them was Liberius of Rome, Hosius of Spain, Paulinus of Gaul, Dionysius and Eusebius of Italy, Lucifer of Sardinia.

	And further violences were committed at Alexandria during Easter. Athanasius still proceeded on his way, when a third rumour reached him of further oppressions. Two hostile letters of Constantius himself are given. Upon hearing these things Athanasius returned to his solitude. This apology was therefore composed in his retreat, before the close of 356.
357	1110 Ol. 284 Fl. Julius Constantius Aug. IX Fl. Claudius Julianus Cæsar II. Constantii II 21 from May 22. Constantius, accompanied by Eusebia and Helena arrived at Rome on the 29th or 30th of April 357, but quitted it 29 May, on the 30th day after his arrival, and hastened into Illyricum, being alarmed by the intelligence that Rhætia was ravaged by the Suevi, Valeria by the Quadi, Moesia and Pannonia by the Sarmatæ. From Illyricum he sent Severus to replace Marcellus in Gaul. In the Theodosian Code Constantius in 357 is at Milan in January and April, at Rome in May, at Milan in June, in Illyricum in July, at Milan again in December, at Sirmium Dec. 18. Julian, having passed a turbulent winter among the Senones, and having received Severus from Illyricum about July, and being aided in another quarter by Barbatio with 25,000 men, begins his second campaign by entering the country of the Remi. The first acts of the campaign—the repulse of the Læti from Lugdunum, the misconduct of Barbatio, the approach of Julian to the Rhine—are told by Ammianus. At Argentoratum a great army of the Alamanni was assembled, commanded by Chnodomarius and other kings. They were encountered by Julian, and the Romans are victorious. Chnodomarius was captured, and sent to Constantius, who was then in Rhætia. After this victory Julian passed the Rhine at Mogontiacum, after the equinox, and besieged two forts of the Franci, for 54 days current in December and January. After this, he wintered at Paris, which he accordingly reached in January 358. Juliani Or. II de Constantii rebus gestis. Addressed to Constantius himself, and composed at least after Julian's first campaign. Perhaps in the winter of 357. The fall of Silvanus is mentioned. Juliani Or. III Encomium Eusebiæ. Before the entry of Constantius into Rome Ap. 29 A.D. 357, which is not alluded to, and yet after a visit of Eusebia to Rome at the time of an expedition of the emperor across the Rhine. That expedition was in 356, and Eusebia therefore visited Rome in 356, and this oration may be placed at the beginning of 357. Julian acknowledges her services. Eusebia had obtained for him the rank of Cæsar, had procured his marriage with Helena, and supplied him with books in Gaul. Eusebia had been long dead in the beginning of 361.

Themistii Or. III presbeuticus ad Constantium, pro urbe CP. Intended to have been recited to Constantius at Rome, but in reality read by Themistius to the senate of CP. He mentions the victory over Magnentius.

Themistii Or. IV ad Constantium. Recited in the senate of CP. while Constantius was still at Rome.

Ammianus is with Ursicinus at Sirmium.

Juliani Or. VIII ob discessum Sallustii. Sallustius was recalled through the jealousy of Constantius. Pentadius caused his recal, and he was called into Illyricum to the emperor. Sallustius then was not long with Julian, and was recalled while Constantine was in Illyricum—recalled therefore at the close of 357, when Constantius wintered there.

Hosius at the end of 357 submits to Constantius, and is permitted to return to Cordova. Athanasius relates the attempt upon Hosius, (who had been 60 years a bishop), after the exile of Liberius, the letter of Hosius to the emperor, his detention a year at Sirmium, when he was now 100 years old, his submission, and his repentance of that submission on his death-bed.

Liberius, who was banished in 355, gave way after 2 years' exile, and returned to Rome 2 Aug. 358. Fortunatianus was his adviser.

The death of Antonius the monk is placed at this date, the Eusebian year 2372, by Hieronymus. He died at least not later than 360, and completed his 104th year; and was therefore born not later than 256. The life of Antonius ascribed to Athanasius agrees with this period; for he is said to have retired to the desert at 35, and to have resided there almost 20 years in solitude. Then he came forth to the people. Then followed the persecution under Maximinus, who renewed the persecution in May 311. At that date Antonius according to this narrative was 55 at the least; Hieronymus makes him 59. Paulus, Antonius, Hilarion were the founders of monachism. Hilarion at the death of Antonius was 65 years old, and celebrated the anniversary of the death of Antony. After this he proceeded to Alexandria. He left Palestine while Constantius yet reigned, but after his departure from thence Julian had succeeded to the empire. If Antonius died Jan. 17, which is fixed by Pagius as the day of his death, this in the year 2372 will be 17 Jan. 357, almost 5 years before the death of Constantius. Which is consistent with Hieronymus in his Life of Hilarion.

358 1111 Datianus et Neratius Cerealis. Constantii II 22 from May 22.

Julian having wintered at Paris, and being desirous of anticipating the Alamanni, without waiting for the month of July, the usual season for commencing a campaign in Gaul, moved early from his winter quarters. He invaded the Salian Franks and the Chamavi, passed the Rhine, plundered the Alamanni, and returned to winter quarters.

Constantius, having wintered at Sirmium, after the vernal equinox 358 passes the Danube. He grants peace to the Sarmatæ and Quadi, and then subdues the Limigantes. He arranges Illyricum and is named Sarmaticus. After this campaign he returns to Sirmium.

Sapor negotiates with Constantius, who sends Eustathius the sophist with other ambassadors to Ctesiphon. This negotiation failed, and Lucillianus and Procopius are sent into the East.

An earthquake at Nicomedia, described by Ammianus and others, happened 24 Aug. 358.

Victor the author of the Cæsars flourished. He mentions as living in his time Diocletian, Constantius Chlorus, Constantine and his sons, and Anatolius who was præfect in 359. Victor wrote in 360.

Libanii monodia de Nicomedia. Nicomedia is now a ruin. Since the earthquake happened in August, this oration may be placed at the close of the year.

Liberius returns to Rome 2 Aug. 358. See 357.

Phœbadius a Gallic bishop flourished. He preserved his constancy at the synod of Ariminum in 359. He was still living in 392.

359 1112 Flavius Eusebius Flavius Hypatius. Constantii II 23 from May 22.

Julian at the proper season for action moves to Mogontiacum, passes the Rhine for the third time, and lays waste the country of the Alamanni. After this Julian winters at Paris.

Persian war. Sapor moved in the spring 359, and entered Mesopotamia when the corn was nearly ripe. Passing Nisibis, he proceeded to Amida. The siege of Amida, which was bravely defended by 7 legions, consumed 73 days. It was taken by Sapor, who lost 30,000 men in this siege. It was taken in the autumn, about Oct. 7, and the siege commenced about July 27. Sapor might occupy two months in Mesopotamia after he had passed the Tigris.

Constantius, who had wintered at Sirmium, marches early in spring 359 on account of the movements of the Limigantes Sarmatæ. He received their ambassadors at Acimincum, returned to Sirmium, and proceeded to CP. in the autumn, after the capture of Amida. At Constantinople at the close of 359 Constantius appoints Honoratus the first præfect of that city.

Birth of Gratian the future emperor, 18 Ap. 359.

Euanthius an eminent grammarian dies at CP. in the 22nd of Constantius. He is succeeded by Chrestus from Africa.

Delphidius the orator is mentioned at this date by Ammianus.

Ammianus and Ursicinus are at Samosata in 359, then in Thrace, then at Nisibis and Amida. Ammianus is at Amida when the enemy approach, and during the siege. After the capture he escapes to Antioch.

Synods are assembled at Ariminum and Seleucia. The bishops to the number of 400 met at Ariminum in May, when the Arian party produces a creed agreed upon at Sirmium 22 May 359. Taurus the prætorian præfect is present, who by the emperor's command is not to dismiss them till they are agreed. They are detained till the winter. The synod of Seleucia in Isauria met in September, at which Hilarius (still an exile in Phrygia) was present. The Arian party prevails both at Ariminum and at Seleucia. But the orthodox bishops afterwards withdraw their concession.

360 1113 Fl. Julius Constantius Aug. X Fl. Claudius Julianus Cæsar III. Constantii II 24 from May 22.

While the Cæsar Julian is still in winter quarters at Paris, the incursions of the Picts and Scots into Britain require his attention, and Lupicinus while it is still winter is sent into that province. Meanwhile before Lupicinus had passed into Britain Constantius had sent to require that a part of the Gallic forces should be transferred to the East, to be ready in the spring for serving in the Persian war. The legions of Gaul being dissatisfied proclaim Julian Augustus at Paris, while he was still in his winter quarters. He wrote to Constantius to make known what had been done, and his messengers find the emperor at Cæsarea in Cappadocia. Julian, now Augustus, passes the Rhine, attacks the Franci, and, after an expedition of 3 months, winters at Vienne, where he celebrated the quinquennalia. The 5th year was completed 5 Nov. 360.

Helena, who was still living when Julian became Augustus, died in 360, and was buried at Rome.

Sapor takes Singara and Bezabde. He retires before the winter.

Constantius, having wintered at CP., moves in the spring of 360, and occupies Edessa. Repulsed from Bezabde, he retired to pass the winter at Antioch.

Victor de Cæsaribus ends at this year. His work comprehends the space from the end of Livy's history to the 10th consulship of Constantius. He concludes at the beginning of 360, in the 23rd year of Constantius, and before Julian was declared Augustus.

Hilarius, who attended the Synod of Seleucia, finding that the deputies of the synod at CP. were constrained to yield to their Arian adversaries, presents a memorial to Constantius himself, desiring to be heard against the Arians: Constantius without remitting his exile, allows him to return to Gaul. But Hilarius was not fully reestablished in his diocese till after the death of Constantius.

	A synod of 72 bishops is held by order of Constantius at CP. Macedonius is deposed, and Eudoxius bishop of Antioch is appointed to CP. 27 Jan. 360. After which the church of St. Sophia, which Constantine had begun many years before, was consecrated 15 Feb. 360. Acacius of Cæsarea (see 340) composed the acts of this council.

He returned to Hierapolis, and arriving at Antioch prepared for a civil war with Julian. Late in the autumn he came to Tarsus, and, seized with a slight fever, reached Mopsucrenæ, where he expired 3 Nov. 361. From his elevation as Cæsar 8 Nov. 323 he had reigned 38 years wanting 4 days, and 24y 5m 12d from the death of his father 22 May 337. For his character see F. Rom. Euzoius at this time held the episcopate of Antioch, and Georgius bishop of Laodicea, an Arian, had great influence. Compare upon this synod Socrates II. 45 Sozomen IV. 29. 30, Nicephorus IX. 49 p. 804 c Georgius Alex. vel Capadox.

362 1115 Mamertinus et Nevitta. Juliani 2 from Nov. 3.

Julian is at Constantinople Jan. 1. After May 12 he proceeds through Nicomedia and Pessinus to Antioch, where he arrives at the time of the Adonia which were in the summer. Julian dates a law from Antioch 28 July 362, and a letter to the Bostreni Aug. 1, and is present at a festival in the month Lous. Julian resided at Antioch a whole summer and a winter. He staid there nine months. But as he quitted Antioch in March 363, he arrived in June 362.

After the arrival of Julian, the great temple of Apollo at Daphne, which was built by Antiochus Epiphanes, is burnt, 22 Oct. 362.

It appears from the testimony of Julian that the four great Hellenic festivals, the Olympic, the Pythian, the Isthmian, the Nemean, are still celebrated in Greece.

Proæresius the Athenian sophist who was a Christian refuses to accept the indulgence of Julian, who offered to permit him to teach rhetoric to the Christians when other Christian teachers had been prohibited from teaching by law.

Claudii Mamertini pro consulatu gratiarum actio. Pronounced at CP. Jan. 1. Mamertinus had held other offices, and is now advanced in years.

Himerii or. V. Delivered at Thessalonica in his progress to join Julian in the East, before Musonius the proconsul of Greece, and Calliopius. Or. VI. Delivered at Philippi during the same journey. Or. VII. Pronounced at CP. still in his progress to the East. Himerius is now grey headed. He had left Athens before Eunapius had arrived there.

Juliani or. VII ad Heraclium cynicum. Written after the death of Constantius. He mentions Anatolius, Memmorus, Asclepiades, Sallustius, Serenianus, Chytro. He inveighs against the Christians. This piece was composed before Julian left CP. and may be placed in the beginning of 362. Or. V in matrem Deorum. Composed at the same time, and in one night. After these two orations he proceeded to Syria, which confirms the account that they were written at CP.

Juliani or. VI. Adversus imperitos canes. Composed at the summer solstice; and Julian boasts that it was composed in the leisure hours of two days. He makes a similar boast in or. IV. The testimony of the orations themselves shew that or. VII preceded or. VI. Or. VII was composed at CP. and therefore before the end of May: or. VI was written near midsummer, and therefore after he had quitted that city.

Libanii προσφωνητικὸς ad Julianum. Addressed to Julian upon his arrival at Antioch, and pronounced there after his arrival.

Libanii monodia de Apollonis templo ad Daphnen. Composed in this year after October.

Juliani Cæsares. Written at the Saturnalia Oct. 17, after he was emperor, and after the death of Constantius. As Julian only reached CP. in December 361, and was engaged in affairs in the beginning of his reign, we may refer this piece to Oct. 362, while he was at Antioch.

Juliani libri III contra Christianos. Written in this winter at Antioch—the winter of 363.

Libanii pro Aristophane. Composed while Julianus is at Antioch. The sacrifices of Julian at Antioch are mentioned. Composed therefore before 5 March 363, perhaps in the beginning of 363.

Eunapius came to Athens in his 16th year in the reign of Julian. He arrived when the Sun was in Libra, which determines his arrival to autumn 362. He remained at Athens 5 years.

Oribasii epitomæ Galeni libris LXX. Dedicated to Julian when emperor.

Eusebius of Vercellæ and Lucifer of Caralis return from exile.

Titus is banished by a letter of Julian written to Bostra 1 Aug. 362.

Aëtius is recalled from exile by a letter of Julian, who remitted their exile to all of all sects that he might create dissensions among the Christians.

Georgius of Cappadocia (see 356) is murdered by the populace at Alexandria, and Athanasius returns. But he is again expelled by Julian in letters to the people of Alexandria and to Ecdicius governor of Egypt. The letter of Athanasius ad Antiochenos, addressed to Eusebius of Vercellæ, to Lucifer, to Asterius, Cumatius, and Anatolius, calling upon them to assent to the Nicene doctrine, was composed and signed while Athanasius was yet at Alexandria in this year.

363 1116 Fl. Claudius Julianus Aug. IV et Sallustius.

Julian in the beginning of this year is at Antioch. He attempts to rebuild the temple of Jerusalem. But the undertaking is abandoned on account of fire bursting forth from the foundations. See the testimonies in F. Rom. Vol. I p. 454, and the explanations of Michaelis quoted in Milman's Gibbon Vol. 4 p. 100.

Julian sets forth to the Persian war, 5 March 363. Passing the Euphrates he arrived at Carræ March 19, at Callinicum March 27. On the 7th of April he passed near the tomb of Gordian. After which he entered Assyria, and after two days' march approached Dura. Anatha is stormed, Pirisaboras taken. Then Maogamalcha is besieged and taken. The fleet of Julian is transported by a canal from the Euphrates to the Tigris (Ammian. 24. 6, 2), and the army passes the Tigris (Ammian. 24. 6, 4—6). The enemy is defeated on the eastern bank of that river, but Julian declines the siege of Ctesiphon, and burns his fleet, with the design of penetrating into the interior of Persia. It is however determined to return. On the 16th of June they commence their retreat towards Corduena. Ten days afterwards Julian is slain. He was wounded in the battle June 26, and expired at midnight. Julian died in his 32nd year. He had reigned 7y 7^m 21^d from his appointment as Cæsar 6 Nov. 355, about 3y 3^m from his assumption of the purple, and 1y 7^m 24^d from the death of Constantius. For his character see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 105.

Jovian is proclaimed the next day, June 27. Ammianus relates the retreat of Jovian, the ignominious peace, the cession of the five provinces and of Nisibis. But Libanius admits that Julian left the army in a bad condition. Jovian proceeded from Antioch through Tyana to Ancyra. He was probably still at Antioch Dec. 21. He had reached Ancyra before 1 Jan. 364.

Libanii ad Julianum imp. consulem. Pronounced at Antioch 1 Jan. 363.

Juliani Misopogon. Written in the 7th month of his residence at Antioch, and after the death of his uncle Julian, who was lately dead in the beginning of 363. His death may be referred to the middle of January, and this piece may be placed at the end of that month, when Julian was preparing to leave Antioch.

Julianus Jamblichus Ep. 61. He mentions his march into the Upper Pannonia, and his movement to the Strait of Chalcedon. These were at the close of 361, after the death of Constantius. Ep. 61 was therefore written after Dec. 361. Jamblichus Ep. 40. Written in the third year after Julian had left Pannonia, and mentioning his arrival at Nicomedia. Julian was at Nicomedia in May 362, from whence he had written to Jamblichus. Three other letters passed between them. He left Pannonia in 361, and Ep. 40, in the 3rd year after, was written in 363.

Eutropius and Ammianus the historians served under Julian in the Persian war.

Maximus and Priscus the sophists were also in Persia. They had been received at CP. by Julian in 362, and were with him at Antioch at the close of that year. Chrysanthius, who had been also invited to CP., remained in Lydia.

Libanii ad Antiochenses de ira Juliani. Written after Julian had set forth, and while he was now advancing upon Persia. Libanius interceded for the city with Julian before he left Antioch.

Libanii presbeuticus ad Julianum. Intended to be delivered to Julian after his expedition, from which he is supposed to be returned victorious. Written therefore after 5 March 363, and before the death of Julian. This oration was prepared only but not spoken. The oration ad Antiochenses appears to have been really delivered to the senate of Antioch.

Themistii oratio de Juliano. An oration not now extant, but described by Libanius.

Libanii monodia de Juliano. Composed after the funeral of Julian. The orator alludes to the presbeuticus, which he had prepared before Julian's death. In the monodia he records that Julian was slain by a Persian. Whence it would seem that he had not yet heard of the report which he afterwards adopted in the Epitaphius.

Hieronymus describes himself at the death of Julian as puer, and in grammaticæ ludo. After this date, when resident among the Treviri he transcribed Hilarius de synodis, he is adolescentulus. Later still he is adolescens et pæne puer in eremo. The great earthquake 21 July 365 happened in his infantia. But yet Hieronymus was old to Augustine a youth, and therefore born many years before 354. And according to Prosper he was 32 in 363. These terms then—adolescens, puer, infantia, are used by Hieronymus in a vague and general sense, and supply no argument for rejecting the account of Prosper.

Titus bishop of Bostra flourished in 363.

Athanasius is restored by Jovian.

A synod is held at Antioch, when Jovian is there. Therefore after September 363; for Jovian at the end of that month was still at Edessa in his retreat from Persia. And reached Antioch in October.

Gregorii Nazianzeni adversus Julianum orationes duæ. In the second oration he mentions the first. The orator describes Julian's Persian expedition; his progress, successful at first; the burning of the ships; the various accounts of his death; the ignominious peace concluded through necessity by his successor; the funeral of Julian at Tarsus; whither he was conveyed by Procopius. These honours were paid to his tomb by Jovian, and Jovian was at Tarsus at the close of 363. Which will place these orations at the end of 363 or beginning of 364. As the death of Jovian is not noticed, they preceded 17 Feb. 364.

364 1117 Flavius Jovianus Augustus Flavius Varronianus.

Jovian is at Ancyra Jan. 1. He died suddenly at Dastana 17 Feb. 364, in the 33rd year of his age, and the 8th month of his reign.

After the death of Jovian the army moved to Nicæa, and unanimously elected Valentinian emperor, who had remained at Ancyra. Valentinian upon receiving the message hastened to Nicæa, and assumed the empire Feb. 26, on the tenth day after the death of Jovian.

Valentinian passing through Nicomedia arrived at Constantinople, and there on the 28th of March declared his brother Valens Augustus, and associated him in the empire, a month after his own elevation. The two emperors proceeded through Thrace together to Naissus. At Mediana near Naissus they divided the provinces and the great offices between them. Valentinian assigned to his brother Constantinople, Egypt, Thrace and the East. He reserved for himself Italy, Gaul, Spain, Britain, Africa. After this the brothers entered Sirmium together and then separated, Valens proceeding to CP. and Valentinian to Milan. In these cities the two Augusti assumed the consulship 1 Jan. 365.

Themistii Or. V consularis. To Jovian. The son of Jovian, who is colleague in the consulship, is an infant. Themistius in this oration claims liberty of worship both for Christians and for Pagans. He remarks that the Christians themselves were divided into sects.

Themistii Or. VI Philadelphi. Addressed to the brothers Valentinian and Valens on their accession to the empire. Valens alone is present at CP. when this oration is recited.

Libanius is in his 50th year when the Olympic games of Antioch are celebrated. These were instituted at Antioch in the 92nd year A. D. 44, and restored in the 260th year A. D. 212. The Olympia mentioned by Libanius followed the death of Julian, and were therefore the Olympia of A. D. 364, which were celebrated in the 412th year of Antioch in the months Panemus and Lous, as appointed in A. D. 212. And Libanius is in his 50th year in July 364.

Eutropius concludes his history at the year 364. His work is dedicated to Valens Augustus, and therefore was composed before 378.

Festus ends his breviarium at the accession of Valentinian and Valens.

Priscus the sophist at the accession of Valens returned in security to Greece. But Maximus was fined and put to the torture, and finally put to death. Eunapius now in his 18th year is studying at Athens.

365 1118 Ol. 286 Flavius Valentinianus Augustus Flavius Valens Augustus. Valentiniani 2 from Feb. 26. Valentis 2 from March 28.

Valentinian enters on his consulship at Milan, Valens at CP.

The Alamanni in 365 ravaged Gaul and Rhætia; the Sarmatæ and Quadi Pannonia; Britain was harassed by the Picts, the Saxons, and the Scots; Africa by the Moors; the Goths plundered Thrace; the Persians invaded Armenia.

Procopius revolts at CP. 28 Sept. 365. Valens hears the news in Cappadocia, Valentinian in Gaul. The conduct of Valentinian, which is misrepresented by Zosimus, was generous patriotic and prudent.

An inundation and earthquake affected Alexandria, Greece, Sicily, Palestine, Libya, and many other provinces, 21 July 365.

Libanii epitaphius Juliani. Composed after the death of Jovian, and after the earthquakes which happened in July. He also mentions the danger from the Goths and barbarians. The attempt of Procopius is not noticed. Whence we may conclude either that this revolt was not yet known at Antioch, or that the issue was still doubtful. This oration then may be dated in 365. Libanius mentions that the remains of Julian were brought to Tarsus.

366 1119 Flavius Gratianus Valentiniani f. et Dagalaiphus. Valentiniani 3 from Feb. 26, Valentis 3 from March 28.

Procopius is defeated and slain near Nacolia in Phrygia 27 May 366.

The Alamanni in Gaul in 365. Dagalaiphus, being sent to oppose them from Paris, delayed an encounter with the barbarians. He was recalled before 1 Jan. 366, and replaced by Jovinus, who gained a victory over the Alamanni at the time when the news arrived of the defeat of Procopius. The victory of Jovinus then was gained about June 366.

Apollinarius bishop of Laodicea flourished, whom Hieronymus in his youth had often heard at Antioch. For the testimonies to Apollinarius see F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 465. 467. Vol. 2 p. 440. Apollinarius was contemporary according to Suidas with Basil and Gregory, "those celebrated men of Cappadocia," to both of whom he was known. Probably Gregory of Nazianzus may be intended in this passage. Apollinarius had corresponded with Basil, while they were both yet laymen, in A. D. 350, that is, 25 years before A. D. 375. Apollinarius and his father, who was an Alexandrian and a presbyter, are described by Socrates at A. D. 362. Apollinarius therefore, though not yet a bishop, was already distinguished in A. D. 362. He lived to the reign of Theodosius. He flourished therefore A. D. 362—380, and might have lived two or three years below 380.

Damasus succeeds Liberius, who died 24 Sept. 366. Damasus was elected bishop of Rome 366, presided 187 2^m 10^d, and died 10 Dec. 384. His election was carried by violence, which Ammianus describes: confirmed by the testimony of Hieronymus in Chronico, and of his presbyters, who witnessed the transactions. Ammianus relates that Damasus and Ursinus fiercely contended for the episcopate; that the contest proceeded to the death and wounds of the two parties; that Juventius the præfect of the city was compelled to withdraw into the suburbs; that the party of Damasus prevailed; and that 137 persons were found dead in the basilica of Sicinnius,

	where the Christians held their meetings. The presbyters add that the doors of the basilica were burnt, the roof untiled, that Damasus marched at the head of his own clergy, with hired gladiators and others; that none of his party were slain, but that 160 dead bodies were found.

Lastly Theodosius (the father of the future emperor) is sent into Britain. Theodosius, who had been appointed to the service in Britain at the close of 367, passing over from Bononia to Rutupiaë, marched to London, repulsed many of the barbarians, and recovered their plunder from them.

Mogontiacum is surprised by Rando an Alamannic chieftain at the time of a Christian solemnity, either the Epiphany, 6 Jan. 368, or Easter of that year.

Soon after this capture Valentinian in the summer of 368 with Gratian passed the Rhine and routed the Alamanni. After a successful campaign the army is placed in winter quarters, and the emperors return to Treveri.

An earthquake at Nicæa is mentioned at 11 Oct. 368.

Libanius is marked by Hieronymus at the 4th of Valentinian.

Themistii or. VIII Quinquennalibus. Delivered at Marcianopolis. He observes that these quinquennial festivals are grateful periods at which the subjects pray for length of life for a good emperor.

Himerius returned to Athens after the death of Proseresius.

Gregorii Nazianzeni epitaphius in Cæsarium fratrem. Cæsarius, who held office in Bithynia, had escaped in the late earthquake, and died soon after. The earthquake happened in the autumn of 368, and the death of Cæsarius may be placed at the end of the year. If the account reported by Fabricius is true, that Cæsarius died Feb. 25, his death will be determined to 25 Feb. 369.

Gregory in early life had been educated in Palestine, and Cæsarius at Alexandria. Afterwards Gregorius from Athens and Cæsarius from Alexandria met at CP., and returned together to their parents and their country. Cæsarius returned to court, and was in favour as a physician with the emperor Constantius II. Gregory at this time calls himself young. See 326.

369 1122 Ol. 287 Fl. Valentinianus Valentis f. et Victor. Valentiniani 6 from Feb. 26. Valentis 6 from March 28. Gratiani 3 from Aug. 24.

Valens in his third campaign with the Goths passes the Danube, defeats the Creuthungi and Athanaric a powerful chief, and returns to Marcianopolis to winter quarters. A peace is then negotiated, and after concluding it Valens returns to Constantinople.

Theodosius in Britain advancing from London gave effectual aid to the Britons. He suppresses the conspiracy of Valentinus a Pannonian, at that time an exile in Britain. Valentinus is slain with a few of his followers. Theodosius at the close of this year returns to Valentinian, by whom he is honourably received and promoted.

Valentinian fortifies the Rhine from Rhætia to the ocean.

Valens in 369 is at Marcianopolis in March, May, December; and at the end of December at CP. Valentinian in this year is in Treveris.

Themistii or. IX. Addressed to young Valentinian on his consulship, in which his colleague was Victor. This Valentinian was the son of Valens. Marked by Themistius himself, who calls Valens the father and Gratian the cousin of the consul. The son of Valens was born 18 Jan. 366.

(Gregorii Nazianzeni or. VIII epitaphius in Gorgoniam sororem. Gorgonia died after Cæsarius, in the lifetime of both her parents. She was married and left children and grandchildren, and yet died not old in years. The death of Gorgonia and this oration must be placed after the end of 368, when Cæsarius probably died, and before 1 Jan. 374, when the father died. Gregorius in his poem mentions the order in which he lost them; first his brother, then his sister, then his father, and not long afterwards his mother Nonna.)

(Joannes Chrysostomus was descended from a good family at Antioch, and was the disciple of the sophist Libanius. Chrysostom was at least 20 years of age when he quitted the school of Libanius. After which he was 3 years with Meletius, then 6 years in retirement, then 5 years a deacon, then 12 years a presbyter. These numbers terminate in 398, and will place his separation from Libanius at 372.)

370 1123 Fl. Valentinianus Aug. III Fl. Valens Aug. III. Valentiniani 7 from Feb. 26. Valentis 7 from March 28. Gratiani 4 from Aug. 24.

Valens is at Nicomedia, where his transactions occupied much time. From Nicomedia, in his way to Antioch he came to Cæsarea in Cappadocia.

Arinthæus, who had been employed in the Gothic war in 369, is sent into Armenia. The Persians are repulsed, and a king is restored to Iberia. Upon this Sapor, complaining of violated treaties, prepares for war.

The Saxons invade the coasts of Gaul, and are routed by Severus. But Valentinian, pressed by the Alamanni, seeks aid from the Burgundii: whose advance to the Rhine and march back again are described by Ammianus. While the Alamanni are alarmed by this new enemy they were attacked in Rhætia and routed by Theodosius. Those who were captured in this war were transferred to Italy and planted near the Po. Valentinian himself is in Treveris in 370.

Troubles are produced at Rome by the cruelties of Maximin the præfectus annonæ.

A famine in Phrygia occurred in 370, which extended to Cappadocia.

Themistii or. X de pace. Delivered in the senate of Constantinople before Valens, in honour of the peace granted to the Goths at the end of 369. He observes that the war had lasted three whole years.

The deaths of Eusebius of Vercellæ and of Lucifer of Caralis are placed at the year 370.

Basilus is not yet bishop of Cæsarea: for Valens, who was at Nicomedia in this year, and afterwards proceeded to Cæsarea, found Eusebius bishop. Basilus had retired into exile, but upon the visit of Valens to Cæsarea had returned, accompanied by Gregory of Nazianzus, (who describes these transactions), and was reconciled to Eusebius. Then followed the famine, and then the succession of Basil. The appointment then of Basilus could not have occurred before the end of 370 or the beginning of 371; and the date of his death assigned by Amphilochius, 1 Jan. 380, places the appointment in 371. At the next visit of Valens Basilus has succeeded Eusebius. Gregory cooperated in this appointment.

See F. Rom. Vol. I p. 475 for a law of Valentinian addressed to Damasus (I. 20 de episcopis) published at Rome 29 July 370.

371 1124 Flavius Gratianus Aug. II Sex. Petronius Probus. Valentiniani 8 from Feb. 26. Valentis 8 from March 28. Gratiani 5 from Aug. 24.

The Theodosian Code attests that Valens was at Constantinople in Jan. and February 371, and till April 7. At Ancyra in July. He entered Antioch 10 Nov. 371. On the time of his visit to Antioch see F. Rom. Vol. I p. 476 Vol. 2 p. 120. 121.

After the operations of Arinthæus in Armenia in 370, Sapor prepared to invade the empire: and, when the winter had passed, A. D. 371, a Persian army in the spring of 371 approached the confines of the Roman territory. Against this army Trajan and Vadamarius are sent with a strong force to act upon the defensive: at last a battle is fought in which the Romans are victorious. Sapor returned to winter at Ctesiphon, and Valens entered Antioch.

Valentinian in 371 passing the Rhine, and taking with him Severus and Theodosius, attempted to surprise and seize Marcrianus king of the Alamanni. He failed in the attempt, and after wasting the country of the enemy, returned to Treveri. It appears from the Theodosian Code that Valentinian in 371 was at Treveri Feb. 11, May 19, 29, June 28; at Magontiacum Sept. 6; at Treveri again Dec. 11. See F. Rom. Vol. I p. 477.

Libanius had completed his 57th year when Valens arrived at Antioch, and by his own account of his own age in 364, his 57th year might be completed in autumn 371; which confirms the account that Valens arrived at Antioch in November 371.

Optatus bishop of Milevi, the author of six books against the Donatists, flourished in the reigns of Valentinian and Valens. He probably died before 392. He was certainly dead before the year 400.

	Aquillius Severus, the author of a work described by Hieronymus Catal. c. 111, died in the reign of Valentinian. Martinus is appointed bishop of Tours. See 381.
372	1125 Modestus et Ariatheus. Valentiniani 9 from Feb. 26, Valentis 9 from March 28, Gratiani 6 from Aug. 24. Valens in 372 is probably at Cæsarea Jan. 6. It appears from the Code that he was at Seleucia Apr. 4, at Antioch Ap. 13. In this year he approaches the Euphrates; and perhaps the visit of Valens to Edessa, described by Socrates and Sozomen, may be referred to 372. His cruelties at Antioch and the death of Theodorus occurred not long after his arrival. Valens as he reposed in the middle of the day in a shady retreat between Antioch and Seleucia narrowly escaped assassination. This incident and the enquiries that followed may be placed in 372. The affair of Theodorus is described by Ammianus, Victor, Sozomen, Socrates. It is placed by Socrates about the time of a journey to Edessa. In Africa the subjects of Valentinian, not being able to endure the tyranny and corrupt administration of Romanus and his confederate Remigius, join in a revolt led by Firmus a Moorish chief. Theodosius is sent against him. Landing unexpectedly in Africa at Igilgitis on the coast of Mauretania he hurries Firmus into the interior of the country. The revolt of Firmus is fixed to 372, because Theodosius was employed in Germany in 371; and because Remigius the accomplice of Romanus perished in 373. Valentinian, according to the Theodosian code in 372, in February, March, April, November, is at Treveri. See F. Rom. Vol. I p. 479. (Maximus of Ephesus the sophist, the favourite of Julian, was put to death soon after the affair of Theodorus.) Basilus is bishop of Cæsarea in Cappadocia at the second visit of Valens. Some time after the first visit. The second visit of Valens was at the Epiphany, 6 Jan. 372. Athanasii epistolæ ad Joannem Antiochum et Palladium presbyteros. Basil is now a bishop. Not written therefore before 372. Eunomius bishop of Cyzicus, the disciple of Aëtius, and the author of the Eunomian heresy, flourished at this date. He still lived in 392. Eunomius was answered by various writers; by Apollinarius, Didymus, Basilus of Cæsarea, Gregorius of Nazianzus, and Gregorius of Nyssa. Didymus of Alexandria, who became blind at 5 years of age, and who dictated numerous works, is now 63 years old, and was known in the time of the monk Antonius. See 350.
373	1126 Ol. 288 Fl. Valentinianus Aug. IV Fl. Valens Aug. IV. Valentiniani 10 from Feb. 26, Valentis 10 from March 28, Gratiani 7 from Aug. 24.

Remigius, who had been the confederate of Romanus in plundering Africa, had been recalled, and deprived of his employment, and lived in retirement near Mogontiacum. There in order to escape from the searching enquiries of Maximinus the prætorian præfect he destroyed himself in 373.

The war with Firmus continues. Theodosius conducting that war, moved to Tipata in February 373.

Themistii Or. XI decennialibus. Addressed to Valens in Syria. Pronounced 28 March 373, when the 10th year of Valens began. Themistius had been present with Valens at Constantinople and on the Danube. He alludes to the war with Sapor. He records that Valens had received the purple at Constantinople.

Augustine describes his studies in his 19th year, two years after the death of his father. In that year he read the Hortensius of Cicero. For nine years æt. 19—28. he inclines to the Manichees. Augustine entered his 19th year 13 Nov. 373.

The death of Athanasius is determined by many testimonies to 2 May 373. See F. Rom. Vol. I p. 477. 481. He had entered the 48th year of his episcopate. See 326. Petrus succeeds Athanasius.

Ephrem Syrus died in the reign of Valens, on the 9th or the 19th of June 373.

The death of Faustinus bishop of Iconium is mentioned by Basil of Cæsarea among the events of this year. His successor was Amphilochius, whom Basil addresses on his appointment. Amphilochius succeeded Faustinus towards the close of 373.

Lucius an Arian expels Petrus, immediately after his succession, and held possession of the episcopate of Alexandria till (during the absence of Valens from Antioch) Petrus returned with letters from Damasus of Rome, and the people of Alexandria expelled Lucius and restored Petrus. See Socrates IV. 37 quoted in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 445 r. who adds that Lucius sailed to CP. and that Petrus surviving but a short time was succeeded by his brother Timotheus.

374 1127 Fl. Gratianus Aug. III et Equitius. Valentiniani 11 from Feb. 26, Valentis 11 from March 28, Gratiani 8 from Aug. 24.

While Theodosius was engaged against Firmus in Mauretania and Africa, the Quadi invade Illyricum. They had two causes of complaint; Valentinian had erected fortresses beyond the Danube upon their lands, and their king Gabinius had been murdered. The Quadi are joined by the Sarmatæ. Theodosius the future emperor, then in early youth, commanded in Mœsia and repulsed and drove out the Sarmatæ.

Valentinian, after ravaging some districts of Alamannia, was erecting a fortress near Basilia when he heard of this invasion of Illyricum late in the autumn of 374. He departed to winter at Treveri. This irruption of the Quadi was therefore in the summer of 374, and in that summer Theodosius still continued the war with Firmus.

During these troubles excited by the Quadi in the west, Para king of Armenia is assassinated in the east by the order of Valens. This event is followed by negotiation with Sapor in the winter. The winter of 374, for it is followed by other negotiations in 375, and the death of Para is fixed to 374.

Valens according to the testimonies in the Theodosian code is at Antioch in February, March, and May 374.

Gregorii Nazianzeni Or. XVIII epitaphius in patrem. Delivered in the presence of Basilus. The death of Gregorius the father, bishop of Nazianzus, happened at the time of the appointment of Amphilochius to Iconium. The death of the elder Gregorius is placed in the Menæa at Kal. Jan. We may therefore assign his death to 1 Jan. 374, consistently with the appointment of Amphilochius at the close of 373. The elder Gregory was near 100 years old, and had been 48 years a bishop. Which carries back his appointment to 329. His wife Nonna died not long after him.

375 1128 Post consulatum Gratiani III et Equitii. Valentiniani 12 from Feb. 26, Valentis 12 from March 28, Gratiani 9 from Aug. 24.

Valentinian, setting forth from Treveri in the spring, reached Carnuntum, and was employed there three summer months in preparing for the invasion of the Quadi. In the autumn, sending Merobaudes forwards with a body of infantry into the enemy's country, he moved to Acincum on the banks of the Danube. Then passing that river he entered the country of the Quadi, burned their habitations, and destroyed the inhabitants, without any loss to his own army. Returning to Acincum, he moved his quarters from thence to Bregetio on the Danube, when he received ambassadors from the Quadi soliciting peace, to whom the emperor replied with angry and vehement expressions, when suddenly he was struck with apoplexy, probably produced by the violence of his passion. He was borne into an inner chamber, and knew those who surrounded him, but was incapable of speech, and almost immediately expired. He died 17 Nov. 375, in the 55th year of his age, and Ammianus and Victor add that he reigned 12 years wanting 100 days. This computation is exact. He died 100 days before 25 Feb. 376, when his 12th year would have been completed.

Gratian his eldest son, now in the 9th year of his reign as Augustus, was absent at Treveri, and the army on the Danube under the management of Merobaudes and Equitius sending for the empress Justina and her son Valentinian, then 4 years old, to the camp, proclaimed him Augustus on the 6th day after the death of his father. Gratian accepted him as his associate in the empire.

In the beginning of 375 Victor and Urbicius were sent as ambassadors to Sapor. But this negotiation failed, and Valens prepared for war with Persia; but this design was interrupted by the Goths, who entered Thrace in 376.

Ambrosius, upon the death of Auxentius the Arian bishop, is appointed bishop of Milan. Placed by Prosper in 375. He was elected in the lifetime of Valentinian. If therefore the day reported for his ordination, Dec. 7, may be trusted as authentic, his ordination is carried back to 7 Dec. 374, because Valentinian died before December 375. Ambrosius was the son of a præfect of Gaul, had received a liberal education at Rome, and was an eminent pleader of causes. He had received the consular ornaments, and had governed the provinces of Liguria and Æmilia.

The bishops who flourished at this time are named by Theodoret:—the two Gregories, of Nazianzus and Nyssa, the former the friend and companion, the latter the brother, of Basil of Cæsarea; Petrus a monk, the brother of Basil, was also eminent, and Amphilochius bishop of Iconium, Optimus a Pisidian bishop, Damasus of Rome, Ambrosius of Milan. Gregory of Nyssa was still living 29 Sept. 394.

Epiphani de hæresibus. Published in this 12th year of Valentinian and Valens, and the 8th year of Gratian; therefore between March 27 and Aug. 24 A. D. 375.

Chrysostom after 3 years with Meletius is 6 years in retirement, then 5 years a deacon. He was deacon in 381, then after those 5 years a presbyter in 386 and bishop in 398, which determines his retirement to 375.

376 1129 Fl. Valens Aug. V Fl. Valentinianus junior Aug. Valentis 13 from March 28, Gratiani 10 from Aug. 24, Valentiniani II 2 from Nov. 22.

The Huns, who dwelt beyond the lake Mæotis, expel the Goths, who are permitted by Valens to cross the Danube and settle in Thrace.

Theodosius, who had restored Mauretania and Africa to security and order, is slain at Carthage by the ministers of Gratian.

Death of Photinus in Galatia.

Epiphani hær. 66 contra Manichæos. Composed in the 13th of Valens, the 9th of Gratian, and the 1st of Valentinian II. Therefore before Aug. 24, when the 10th of Gratian commenced. Epiphanius was still living in 402. See 403.

377 1130 Ol. 289 Fl. Gratianus Aug. IV et Merobaudes. Valentis 14 from March 28, Gratiani 11 from Aug. 24, Valentiniani II 3 from Nov. 22.

The Goths, who had been disposed in winter quarters

	A. D. 376 near Hadrianople, being required to move to the Hellespont, request a supply of provisions, and by the misconduct and avarice of the Roman governors Lupicinus and Maximus are driven to rebellion. Seizing their arms, they fill Thrace with fire and slaughter. The collected forces of the Goths, commanded by Fritigernus, are encountered by Richomer, whom Gratian sent with the forces of Gaul to the aid of Valens; a battle ensued with doubtful success, and Richomer returned to Gaul. These events happened in Thrace late in the autumn of 377. Valens in 377 is at Antioch Jan. 25, Ap. 4, at Hierapolis July 6, Aug. 9. Themistii Or. XIII amatoria. Gratian, recalling the troops which he had sent to Pannonia, and collecting others which had been retained in Gaul, engaged and defeated the Alamanni at Argentaria. In this battle their king Priacius was slain with 30,000 men. By this seasonable victory Gaul was secured. Gratian grants peace to the Alamanni, and hastened his march to succour the emperor of the east. Valens at length moved from Antioch, and on the 30th of May 378 arrived at Constantinople. Staying there only a very few days, he advanced to Melanthias, where he heard of Gratian's victory. Jealous of the fame of Gratian, he moved his army from Melanthias to Nice, and from thence to Hadrianople. Being joined by Richomer, whom Gratian had sent forward, he engaged the Goths near Hadrianople 9 Aug. 378. The Gothic army was commanded by Fritigernus, and the Romans were routed with a great slaughter. Valens was slain. He perished in the 50th year of his age. He had reigned from 28 March 364 14y 4m 13d. After the death of Valens the Goths during the remainder of the year occupied and plundered Thrace and Mœsia. They had been joined by bands of Huns and Alani, and their combined forces encamped near Perinthus, and approached Constantinople, from whence they were repulsed. . Gratian at the time of the battle was in Mœsia. In February 379 he is at Sirmium. Ammianus Marcellinus concludes with the year 378. His history began with Nerva in 97 and ended with the death of Valens. He continues the narrative after the death of Valens præfect of Gaul. He recounts his dignities,—comes and quæstor, and præfect of Gaul, Libya, and Latium.

The Chronicon of Marcellinus begins at this date. It embraced 140 years, from the accession of Theodosius to A. D. 518. To which he added 16 other years (making 156 in all) which terminated at the 4th consulship of Justinian A. D. 534.

Priscillian, a bishop of Gallæcia, founds a heresy upon the dogmas of the Manichees and Gnostics.

Pacianus, a bishop of Barcelona, died in extreme old age in the reign of Theodosius.

Gregory of Nazianzus is at Constantinople. After the deaths of both his parents he resided for some time at Seleucia. He retired to that city after 374. He is called to CP. and is advised by Basil of Cæsarea to obey the call. Gregory might come to CP. in the middle of 379, about 6 months before the death of Basil.

Gregorii Nazianzeni Or. XXV in Heronem philosophum. In praise of Maximus the cynic. Delivered at Constantinople in the presence of Maximus. Maximus had been banished to the Oasis, and returned after 4 years' exile. After this discourse Maximus proceeded to Alexandria, deceived Gregory, and procured himself to be appointed bishop of CP. but he was rejected by Theodosius in 380, and condemned by the council in 381. Gregory Carm. de vita sua describes Maximus and alludes to his own panegyric upon him.

According to Theodoret H. E. V. 8 Maximus was ordained bishop by Timotheus of Alexandria the successor of Petrus. But other testimonies establish that he was ordained by Petrus himself, who was accordingly still living at the close of 379. See 373.

Idatius begins his Chronicle at this year. See 427.

380 1133 Fl. Gratianus Aug. V Fl. Theodosius Augustus. Gratiani 14 from Aug. 24, Valentiniani II 6 from Nov. 22, Theodosii 2 from Jan. 19.

It appears from the Theodosian Code that in 380 Theodosius was at Thessalonica in Jan. Feb. March, May, and June, in July, and November. His illness at Thessalonica (when he was baptized by the bishop Ascholius) is related by Sozomen in the beginning of the year, before the edict de fide, dated 28 Feb. 380. Socrates places the illness of the emperor near November, not long before his entrance into Constantinople 24 Nov. 380. New encounters with the Goths are mentioned in this year.

Theodosius expels the Arians and restores the churches to the catholics 26 Nov. 380. Followed by a law issued 10 Jan. 381.

Pappus and Theon, both of Alexandria, flourished in the reign of Theodosius.

Basilus of Cæsarea dies in the 9th year of his episcopate :

1 Jan. 380, in the 5th year of Valentinian II. But he died also 9 months before a council of Antioch, which was accordingly held about Oct. 380. He had been appointed to the episcopate in 371. See 370.

Theophilus of Alexandria composed a Paschal cycle for 100 years which he addressed to Theodosius in 380. Theophilus however is not yet bishop, for his predecessor was present at the Council of CP. in 381, whom Theophilus succeeded in 385.

Ambrosius of Milan is mentioned at 380 by Prosper.

A synod is held at Cæsar Augusta against Priscillian in October 380. Idacius, his chief adversary, procured the death of Priscillian in 385.

Maximus the cynic, ordained bishop of CP. by Petrus of Alexandria, repairs to Theodosius at Thessalonica, by whom he is rejected.

Gregorii Nazianzeni Or. XXVI. Gregory, after Maximus had been repulsed by the emperor, returns to CP. and addresses the people in this discourse.

Gregory receives the church of Constantinople from Theodosius. The church was given to him and the Arians were dispossessed, 26 Nov. 380. The circumstances are described by Gregory himself, Carm. de vita sua.

381 1134 Ol. 290 Fl. Eucherius Fl. Syagrius. Gratiani 15 from Aug. 24, Valentiniani II 7 from Nov. 22, Theodosii 3 from Jan. 19.

Athanasius, the king or judge of the Goths, had been opposed to Valens in the first Gothic war in 369. His reign of 13 years is computed by Isidorus from 369. See F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 167. He comes to Constantinople 11 Jan. 381, and is honourably received by Theodosius. Athanasius died 15 days afterwards, 25 Jan. 381, and was splendidly interred by the emperor.

The Council of Constantinople, at which 150 bishops were present, was assembled in May 381. Their session was continued till July. Of the seven canons of this council the first confirms the doctrine of the 318 Nicene fathers; the 2nd confines each bishop to his own diocese; the 3rd enacts that the bishop of Constantinople shall have precedence next after the bishop of Rome; the 4th declares that Maximus the cynic is not a bishop; the 5th acknowledges the Trinity in Unity; the 6th treats of the order of preferring charges against bishops; the 7th determines the order of receiving heretics back again, who abjure their errors.

In this summer, after the death of Athanasius, successes are obtained against the barbarians by the forces of the emperor on the Danube.

Themistii Or. XV ad Theodosium: on kingly virtues; that the duties of a king as a dispenser of the laws at home are more noble than his duties as a warrior. Delivered in the 3rd year of Theodosius. He mentions the pacific views of Athanasius at Constantinople. He addresses Theodosius and Gratian as the two pilots of the state.

Libanii in eos qui superbum Libanium appellaverant. Written in his 67th year, which he entered before July 381. He celebrates the times of Julian, and contrasts them with the present, of which he draws a gloomy picture. He notices an earthquake at Cyprus and the battle in which Valens was slain.

Chrysostom is ordained a deacon by Meletius in the beginning of 381, before April when Meletius left Antioch. See 398.

Cyril of Jerusalem is restored by Theodosius about December 380, and holds the episcopate 8 years current till his death in 388. Cyril had been first appointed in 348, had been thrice expelled, and thrice restored. See 348. He now occupies the bishopric of Jerusalem for the fourth time.

Euzoius being expelled from Cæsarea in Palestine about December 380, is succeeded by Gelasius, who was still living in 392.

A council is held at Aquileia 5 Sept. 381 against Palladius and Secundianus.

Among the bishops who were present at the Council were Timotheus of Alexandria, Cyril of Jerusalem, Meletius of Antioch, Ascholius of Thessalonica, Helladius of Cæsarea the successor of Basil, Gregory of Nyssa the brother of Basil, Otreius of Melitene in Armenia, Amphilochius of Iconium, Optimus of the Pisidian Antioch, Pelagius of Laodicea, Diodorus of Tarsus, Acacius of Beroea, Eulogius of Edessa, Isidorus of Cyrus, Gelasius of Cæsarea in Palestine. Thirty-six bishops were of the Macedonian party, of whom the greater part were from the cities of the Hellespont.

Gregory of Nazianzus is declared bishop of CP. and Maximus is condemned. During the session (between May and July) Meletius dies and Flavianus is appointed to Antioch. Gregory of Nazianzus withdraws into retirement, and Nectarius is chosen in his stead. Gregory himself describes these events in this order, Carm. de vita sua—the death of Meletius, his own remonstrance to the bishops, his retirement with the emperor's permission, the election of Nectarius.

Gregorii Nysseni epitaphius de Meletio.

Gregorii Nazianzeni Or. XLII ad episcopos. Towards the conclusion he urges them to restore him to his retirement. Oratio XLIII in Basileium Cæsareæ. Delivered at Cæsarea after his retirement. Gregory quitted CP. in July 381, and might deliver this discourse at the close of the same year, nearly two years after the death of Basil.

Martinus bishop of Tours is named by Prosper at 381. Martinus was a native of Sabaria in Pannonia, and was born

	according to Gregory of Tours in 316, was bishop of Tours A.D. 371—397, and died at the age of 81. See 397. Sulpicius Severus seems to give different dates for the birth and death of Martinus. See F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 511. 513. Vol. 2 p. 547.

Gratian entered the 25th year of his age 18 April 383. See 359. In 374 he married the daughter of Constantius II. He had also a second wife, Læta, who survived him. 384 1137 Richomeres et Clearchus. Valentiniani II 10 from Nov. 22. Theodosii 6 from Jan. 19.

A treaty of peace is concluded with the Persians. Birth of Honorius 9 Sept. 384.

Symmachus is præfectus urbis Romæ. He addresses Valentinian, Theodosius, and Arcadius, urging them to replace the altar of Victory in the Senate.

Themistii or. XVII. He had been appointed præfect of CP. about 1 Sept. 384, and returns thanks in this speech. He had been in other employments, and had been offered the præfecture before. Libanius Ep. 38 written in 384 congratulates Themistius on this appointment.

Themistii or. XVIII. Composed in the 6th of Theodosius. He mentions his præfecture of CP. which brings this oration to the close of the 6th year. He refers to his old age, and observes that when Theodosius proceeded to the west Arcadius was committed to the charge of Themistius. He describes the splendour of Constantinople, and mentions an expedition of Theodosius to the Rhine.

Ambrosii epist. XVIII Valentiniano Aug. In reply to the address of Symmachus. His answers were read in the presence of Bauto and Rumoridus. The appeal of Ambrosius was successful.

Death of Damasus at Rome 10 Dec. 384. If he had reached his 80th year, he was born in 305.

Death of Agelius. He had been 40 years (A. D. 345—384) Novatian bishop of CP. He had been persecuted by Macedonius and by Valens. He conferred in 383 with Nectarius.

Agelius recommended as his successors first Marcianus and then Sisinnius.

385 1138 Ol. 291 Fl. Arcadius Aug. et Bauto. Valentiniani II 11 from Nov. 22. Theodosii 7 from Jan. 19.

Themistii or. XIX. Delivered in the senate of CP. He observes that Trajan and the Antonines are countrymen of Theodosius, that is, Spaniards. This oration alludes to Flaccilla and Arcadius. Flaccilla therefore is still alive. She still lived at the first consulship of Honorius 1 Jan. 386: F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 124 c.

(Themistii or. XXXIV. Written in his old age, in the reign of Theodosius; after his præfecture, which was only of a few months. He mentions his other public offices, and his embassy to Rome. He had been princeps senatus, and præfectus annonæ. He had already mentioned his old age in 379, 381, and 383. Before his præfecture he had been appointed to ten embassies.)

Augustine is at Milan when he addresses the consul Bauto 1 Jan. 385.

Therefore in 387. Early in the year, while it was still winter, and before Lent; Theodosius being at Constantinople, and on the eve of war. The statues were overthrown of Theodosius, his sons, his wife, and his father. Flavianus bishop of Antioch proceeded to CP. Ellebichus and Cæsarius are sent to Antioch. Flavianus set out a few days after the sedition, and met Ellebichus and Cæsarius on their way. Libanius describes the two days of enquiry at Antioch; the return of Cæsarius to CP. which he reached on the 6th day; the pardon obtained; the emperor's letter forwarded to Ellebichus, who had remained behind, and read the letter to the people. According to Chrysostom the pardon was obtained through Flavianus, whose interview with Theodosius preceded the return of Cæsarius, and who sent the news before him to Antioch. Both accounts are consistent. Libanius, though he names Flavianus on the day of the sedition, suppresses the share which he had in the pardon. The pardon reached Antioch between the 40th day of Lent and Easter day, and therefore between 50 and 60 days after the sedition had begun.

Maximus occupying Italy, Valentinian with his mother Justina and his sister Galla fled to Thessalonica. Valentinian was still at Milan Sept. 8, and his flight to Thessalonica was after that date. At Thessalonica he is met by Theodosius who prepares for war with Maximus.

Libanii ad Theodosium de seditione. Composed soon after the sedition, about March 387. In this discourse he notices Maximus who had slain Gratian. He refers to the victory over the Goths in 386. He describes the sedition and its cause. He entreats Theodosius not to imitate Diocletian in the matter of Eugenius, but rather Constantius upon the sedition of 353 and at Edessa. He notices the Persian embassy for peace in 384.

Libanii in profugos. Against those who had fled from Antioch in the sedition, especially the women, and some of his own scholars. Written during the sedition and after the first measures and before Theodosius had relented.

Libanii ad Theodosium. He relates the origin of the sedition, the mission of Ellebichus and Cæsarius, the letter of pardon. He mentions again Constantius in the matter of Edessa, and the treaty with Persia in 384.

Libanii ad Cæsarium. An address of thanks for the pardon obtained from Theodosius. The sedition is described, the two days of enquiry, the return of Cæsarius, and the letters of pardon despatched by a special messenger.

Libanii ad Ellebichum. After the history of the sedition, the arrival of Ellebichus is described and his enquiry in Court. Ellebichus and Cæsarius had only the power of enquiry. The senate of Antioch is imprisoned and is treated by Ellebichus with kindness, who executes the order of pardon and is then recalled by the emperor. He is consequently not present at this discourse. These three orations were composed after the end of April.

Libanius himself was present at Antioch during the sedition. He interceded with Cæsarius. He mentions his old age. He is near the close of life. He was now in his 73rd year. See 361. It appears from an oration addressed to his pupils after the sedition, that it lasted 34 days, and that Libanius closed his school during that period.

Joannis Chrysostomi de statuis orationes XXI ad Antiochenos. Or. I a little before Or. II. Or. II on the 8th day after the sedition. Or. III the day before Or. IV. After the departure of Flavianus, when many days had passed since the sedition began. The approaching Lent is mentioned. Or. IV on the first day of Lent; and four weeks to come are marked. Or. V on the second day of Lent. Or. VI on the third day. At this time, the third day of Lent, messengers to Theodosius are still on the road, and they set forth on the day of the sedition, which fixes the time of the sedition not long before the beginning of Lent. Or. VII on the fourth day of Lent; for Or. VI was delivered the day before. Orationes VIII—XIX were delivered in their order between the fourth and fortieth days of Lent. Or. XXII was delivered on the 40th day of Lent, and the letters of pardon had not yet arrived. Or. XX on Easter day, when Flavianus had returned. He returned before Easter; therefore in the interval between the 40th day of Lent and Easter: a space of 8 days exclusive of both extremes, and in this interval the letters of pardon arrived at Antioch. Or. XVII was pronounced after the arrival of Ellebichus and Cæsarius, and after the return of Cæsarius to CP., and they had now hopes. Easter day being placed at 25 April in 387, the first day of Lent, 49 days before, (for the whole period was 7 weeks: Sozomen. VII. 14), will be at March 8, and the sedition is determined to the end of February. Chrysostom affirms that he is now in the 2nd year of his preaching at Antioch. Which agrees with his ordination as presbyter in the beginning of 386. For the testimonies of Libanius and Chrysostom see F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 512—515.

Augustine in his 33rd year loses his mother Monica. He composes the work de Academicis before his baptism, and in his 33rd year; a little before his birthday. Therefore a little before 13 Nov. 387.

388 1141 Fl. Theodosius Aug. II et Cynegius. Valentiniani II 14 from Nov. 22, Theodosii 10 from Jan. 19.

In a sedition at Constantinople the populace of the Arian party assaulted and burned the house of Nectarius.

The Franci are in Gaul: at the time when Maximus is shut up in Aquileia.

Theodosius after the death of Cynegius (who died in March) was still at Thessalonica 30 Ap. 388. After that date he advanced against the enemy. He is at Stobi June 14 and 16. He overthrows the forces of Maximus in two battles in Pannonia. Maximus himself is slain three miles from Aquileia 28 July 388. Andragathius also perished, and Victor son of Maximus, who had been created Augustus by his father, was slain by Arbogastes. Theodosius restores the whole Western empire to Valentinian. After his victory he is at Milan, and then at Rome. See 389.

Vararam IV king of Persia, the son of Sapor. He succeeds his brother Sapor III in 388, and reigns 11 years. See 399.

(Libanii de non delirando. Against Eutropius who is named. Eutropius had imputed decay of faculties to Libanius, who repels the charge in this discourse, asserting that his own powers are undiminished by age, and that age does not necessarily bring loss of mental vigour. The fall of Maximus is noticed as a recent event. Libanius then attacks Eutropius himself, who had been governor of Syria, and is charged with maladministration at Chalcis and Apamea.)

(Libanii in Thrasydæum. Addressed to his friend Nicocles. He relates what had been done in the sedition of 387. He mentions Maximus, and alludes to Julian's expedition in 363. At this time there is peace with Persia.)

Symmachus had addressed a discourse to Maximus, and was in danger on that account after the fall of the tyrant. He now writes an apology to Theodosius, by whom it is accepted.

Palladius begins his monastic life. In 388 at Alexandria he conversed with Isidorus, then 70 years of age, (who survived this period 15 years.) By Isidorus he is recommended to Dorotheus a monk who had passed 60 years in the desert. With Dorotheus Palladius passes 3 years. Palladius composed the Lausiac history in the 33rd year after 388 at the age of 53, when he had been 20 years a bishop. These characters will determine his birth to 367, his episcopate to 400, and his history at the age of 53 to A. D. 420.

Ambrosii Ep. XL Theodosio imp. Ep. XLI sorori suæ. The bishop and populace and the monks of an obscure town in the East, on the frontiers of Persia, had burnt a conventicle of the Valentinians and a Jewish synagogue. The court of the East had reported this to the emperor, who commanded the bishop to rebuild the synagogue, and directed that the monks should be punished for this act of sedition and riot. Ambrosius, then at Aquileia (the emperor being at Milan), interposed to vindicate the outrage, and obtained from Theodosius that the order for rebuilding the synagogue should be rescinded, and that the monks should remain unpunished. Maximus had been now defeated. The sedition of Antioch was now forgiven. We may place these epistles after August: towards the end of 388.

He had therefore already published parts of his history before the work de vita Sophistarum, and designed to record the present events; a design which was afterwards fulfilled. Beronicianus the disciple of Chrysanthius is still living.

At the beginning of the year. Claudiani in Rufinum libri duo. After the death of Rufinus, and after the plunder of Peloponnesus, and after the Goths had retired, which will bring these books to 396. The poet supplies the following facts. He describes the acts of Rufinus after the death of Theodosius. The barbarians are excited against the empire. Armenia and Syria are ravaged: Europe, Dalmatia, Thessaly, Pannonia, Thrace, Moesia. Stilicho moved in the spring; having crossed the Alps he reached Thessaly, where he was stopped by an imperial order. He sends his forces through Thessalonica to Heraclea. They kill Rufinus. These transactions and the march of Stilicho were in 395. Stilicho was stopped in Thessaly before Alaric had entered Southern Greece. Orosius is named at 396, and yet Orosius was still a young man in 415. The author of the martyrium Pauli (prefixed to Œcumenius) composed his account in 396. This author fixes the martyrdom of St. Paul at 29 June 66, and supposes the 69th year from the Nativity and the 36th from the Passion to be current at that date; which would place the Nativity at Dec. 25 B.C. 4 (for Dec. 25 was now assumed as the day of the Nativity) and the Passion at Easter A.D. 31, in the 34th year from the Nativity, and would leave 3 years for the Ministry.

Hieronimi Pammachio de optimo genere interpretandi. Written about 20 years after the Chronicon A. D. 378, and yet before the epitaph on Nepotianus, which is placed after it by Hieronymus himself in two enumerations of his works. Therefore 20 years in round numbers for 18 years.

Hieronimi Epitaphium Nepotiani. After the death of Rufinus, and the year after the irruption of the Huns into Asia. Having described the fates of Constantius, Julian, Jovian, Valentinian, Valens, Gratian, Valentinian II, Procopius, of Maximus, and Eugenius, he proceeds "Abundantius is now an exile at Pityus, the head of Rufinus has been borne on the point of a lance at CP. Timasius is living inglorious in Asia." The inroad of the Huns in 395 determines this piece to 396. He mentions 20 years and upwards of devastation, which ascend to the first appearance of the Huns in 376.

397 1150 Ol. 294 Flavius Caesarius et Nonius Atticus. Arcadii et Honorii 3 from Jan. 17.

Eutropius treated with Gildo, the brother of Firmus; who had been appointed to the command of the provinces of Africa, for effecting a transfer of those provinces from the western to the eastern empire. Gildo, who had been for 12 years master of Africa, which he oppressed with every form of tyranny, defied the power of Stilicho, and withheld from Rome the accustomed supply of corn. For Constantinople received its corn from Egypt, and Rome from Africa. Through the measure of Gildo Rome in the autumn of 397 felt the evils of scarcity. The present scarcity is removed by the diligence of Stilicho, and an armament is prepared to be sent against Gildo in the following winter.

Birth of Flaccilla the daughter of Arcadius and Eudoxia 17 June 397.

Symmachi Ep. IV. 4 Stilichoni. Stilicho had referred the acts of Gildo to the senate of Rome, which had declared him an enemy of the republic. Symmachus in this letter reports the opinion of the senate, and then requests that the government in the want of the supply of corn from Africa would provide for the food of the people of Rome.

Martin of Tours died, according to Gregory of Tours, in 397 in the 81st year of his age after having held the episcopate 25y 4m 10d.

Ambrosius of Milan died about 3 years after the death of Theodosius, at Easter 397. His successor Simplicianus was already bishop of Milan 1 Sept. 397.

Hieronymus Ep. 61 Pammachio adversus Joannem Hierosolymitanum. Hieronymus had translated Ecclesiastes and Pauli ad Ephesios ten years before. He writes 13 years after he had been at Antioch, thirteen years after 385, or towards the close of 397, a few months after Pentecost. The work on Pauli ad Ephesios is placed by other notices 18 years before 402, which would carry back that work to 385. But it was written in his solitude, and after he had seen Didymus at Alexandria. Therefore not before 386. Whence we may collect that these three numbers, 10 and 18 and 13 years, are used in a general and not in a precise and accurate sense. The first period was more than 10 years, the second less than 18, the third less than 13. See the testimonies in F. Rom. Vol. I p. 541. 855. Hieronymus Ep. 62 professes his willingness to be at peace with John; and defends his own translation of Origen.

Joannes had defended himself in a treatise. Hieronymus Ep. 61 affirms of Joannes that his apology was addressed to Theophilus of Alexandria, although he was really subject to Antioch or Cæsarea. Joannes asserted of himself that he had spoken well against Arius, against Photinus, against the Manichees. He was, compared with Epiphanius, ætate filius.

Death of Nectarius of CP. 27 Sept. 397. Chrysostom succeeds him.

398 1151 Fl. Honorius Aug. IV et Eutychianus. Arcadii et Honorii 4 from Jan. 17.

Maria the daughter of Stilicho is married to Honorius. These nuptials preceded the defeat of Gildo.

Stilicho commits the war against Gildo to Mascezel the brother of Gildo. Mascezel lands in Africa in the winter in the beginning of 398, with 5000 men. Gildo, who had collected an army of 70,000, is overthrown, and captured, and strangles himself in prison. This war was of short duration, begun in the winter and ended in the spring. Gildo according to Claudian, is the third tyrant, the third after Maximus and Eugenius. He was the brother of Firmus, and had now reigned 12 winters in Africa. He is described by the poet as now aged. Gildo and Mascezel the brothers of Firmus are mentioned by Ammianus at 373.

Claudian de IV consulatu Honorii panegyris. In the beginning of the year, before the marriage of Honorius, which is yet future, and before the war with Gildo was ended.

Claudian epithalamium Honorii Aug. et Mariæ.

Claudian de bello Gildonico. He describes the armament prepared at a port in Tuscany. the voyage of the fleet to Sardinia. And here the extant poem concludes. The sequel of the war is described by Claudian in another poem in A. D. 400. The war was decreed according to ancient form by the senate. A small force is sent forward, with which Stilicho is not present. Gildo is defeated and taken.

Chrysostom succeeds Nectarius as bishop of CP. 26 Feb. 398. He had been now 12 years a presbyter, and before that period 5 years a deacon: ordained a deacon by Meletius in the beginning of 381, before April, when Meletius left Antioch, and a presbyter by Flavianus in 386. According to the author of the dialogue ascribed to Palladius he is now in his 44th year, but by his own testimony two or three years older.

Eutropius (now consul) at first conceals the mischief. Then deliberates with Hosius and Leo. The march of Leo is described by the poet, his defeat and death, the terror of the court. These events are fixed to the consulship of Eutropius. At the conclusion of the poem Stilicho is called to the rescue of the eastern empire. But this was to be performed by Fravitta in 400, after this poem had been written. Yezdejerd I king of Persia succeeds Vararam IV (see 388) and reigns 21 years. One day's interval followed, and then, on the 6th day, being Good Friday, the Circensian games. On the 7th day the theatre. This discourse was delivered 3 days after the inundation; therefore on the Saturday, the

Chrysostomi Hom. IX in theatra. At Easter 399.

Chrysostomi in Eutropium eunuchum. Socrates and Sozomen affirm that Chrysostom on this occasion not only shewed no pity for Eutropius, but even insulted over him in his calamity. But the discourse itself will prove that it was unfairly criticized. The orator indeed paints strongly the offences of Eutropius and the greatness of his fall, and remarks that he who had deprived the church of the privilege of granting asylum now sought it there himself; but he not less strongly urges the people to forgiveness. He represents that this is the time for compassion. Let them intercede for him with the emperor. He entreats them to snatch the suppliant from the danger.

Chrysostomi Hom. I apud Montf. tom. XII. Delivered 30 days after the fall of Eutropius.

Synesii de regno. Synesius was ambassador from Cyrene to Arcadius. He remained 3 years in this mission. He quitted CP. at the time of an earthquake and in the consulship of Aurelianus. This mission is accordingly fixed to A. D. 398—400 inclusive. In this period he addressed to Arcadius the discourse de regno, in which Pagi discerns an allusion to Tribigildus, which places it in 399. Synesius Epist. LVII mentions his own origin. The successive generations from Eurysthenes, who placed the Dorians in Sparta, to his father, were inscribed on the public pillars at Cyrene.

400 1153 Fl. Stilicho et Aurelianus. Arcadii et Honorii 6 from Jan. 17.

Revolt of Gainas the Goth, who had been in the service of Stilicho and of the eastern empire. He rebelled after the death of Eutropius, and in the consulship of Aurelian. He is overthrown by Fravitta and retires beyond the Danube. Fravitta, a Goth and a pagan, carried on the war with Gainas in 400, for in the next year he received the consulship as a recompence. The date of the overthrow of the Goths in the Hellespont, after which Gainas retreated to the Danube, may be placed at 14 Dec. 400. See F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 548. Gainas beyond the Danube was slain by Uldas king of the Huns.

Birth of Arcadia. Her mother Eudoxia was created Augusta 9 Jan. and Arcadia was born 3 Apr. 400.

Alaric having been elected by his countrymen king of the Visigoths, collecting his forces traversed Pannonia, and entered Italy in the year 400: Jornandes Get. c. 29. At the same year in Prosper and Cassiodorus.

Claudian in primum consulatum Fl. Stilichonis V. C. libri duo. The poet records the preceding occurrences, the marriage of Honorius and defeat of Gildo in 398, the fall of Eutropius in 399. He describes the peace negotiated with Persia in 384, Promotus revenged: (see Zosim. IV. 51). He marks the consulship of Stilicho which follows the year of Eutropius. The progress of Stilicho to Rome is described. That Stilicho entered Rome in his first consulship appears from VI Cons. Honor. 431. The dissensions between the two courts are touched upon. At this period Britain had been threatened by the Irish, the Scots, the Picts, the Saxons. The poem was composed in the beginning of the year, and at this time, the beginning of 400, the west is tranquil. The march of Alaric into Italy therefore happened later in the year.

Asterii homilia adversus festum Calendarum. In the year after the consulship of Eutropius; therefore 1 Jan. 400. He mentions the death of Eutropius.

Sulpicius Severus flourished. A presbyter of Aquitania, known to Martin of Tours and to Paulinus of Nola. His Sacred History terminates at A. D. 400.

Palladius at the age of 33 is appointed bishop of Helenopolis. See 388. He was already bishop in the 13th Indiction which commenced 1 Sept. 399, for in the acts of Chrysostom at CP. in the 13th Indiction Palladius was employed. He might be appointed in the beginning of 400.

401 1154 Ol. 295 Vincentius et Fravitta. Arcadii et Honorii 7 from Jan. 17.

The head of Gainas, sent by Uldas king of the Huns, is brought to Constantinople Jan. 3 or rather perhaps Jan. 11 A. D. 401, 20 or 28 days after the victory of Fravitta at the Hellespont. See 400.

Theodosius II the son of Arcadius and Eudoxia is born 10 Nov. 401.

Eusebius, the disciple of Troilus the sophist and a spectator of the war with Gainas, described that war in an epic poem in four books.

Troilus the sophist of Constantinople is mentioned by Suidas, and again described by Socrates at A. D. 408.

Theophili ep. I Paschalis. In this epistle he largely censures Origen, and concludes with appointing March 4 for the beginning of Lent, and Ap. 14 for Easter Sunday. Easter-day was at Ap. 14 in 401, which determines the year of that Paschal letter.

Joannes bishop of Jerusalem, oppressed by Theophilus of Alexandria, was driven into exile into Pontus, although the greater part of the bishops, following the example of the Roman pontiff, remained in communion with Joannes. Recorded by Prosper at 400.

(Cassianus, a native of Scythia, ordained a deacon by Chrysostom at Constantinople, founded when a presbyter a monastery and a convent at Massilia. He was the author of some work, and died at Massilia in the reigns of Theodosius II and Valentinian III.)

Anastasius of Rome is yet alive. Written in the beginning of the year. He sends the second Paschal Epistle of Theophilus. Anastasius, who had succeeded Siricius in the episcopate of Rome in March 398, died 27 April 402, and was succeeded in May by Innocentius, who presided 15y 2m 21d and died 28 July 417. Hieronymi adv. Rufinum libri tres ad Pammachium et Marcellam. The first book was written 18 years after Comm. in Ephesios. But the Commentary in Pauli ad Ephesios was at the earliest not before 386 (see 397) from whence the 18 years would be 403. The second book was written ten years after Dexter had requested him to write the Catalogus; and this would place these books against Rufinus at 402. See 392. The third book is in reply to a letter of Rufinus. Fabiola and Oceanus are named. He also mentions Anastasius bishop of Rome in lib. II. Again in lib. III viventis Anastasii, that is, living when Rufinus wrote; and we may understand in the same manner other passages concerning Anastasius. A recent letter of Anastasius is referred to. The dispute with Rufinus had begun 3 years before. Rufinus is at this time at Aquileia. And both are now in old age.—duos senes digladiari. Hieronymus mentions in lib. III that he had translated above 2 years before a Paschal Epistle and other letters of Theophilus of Alexandria. The first Paschal Epistle was written in the beginning of 401. This third book against Rufinus may be placed at the close of 402. A space consistent with the general term ferme biennium. Hieronymus refers to these books against Rufinus in 410 and in 415.
403	1156 Fl. Theodosius Aug. et Fl. Rumoridus. Arcadii et Honorii 9 from Jan. 17. Stilicho, who had collected forces from all the provinces of the western empire to rescue Italy from Alaric, attacked the Goths in their camp at Pollentia on Easter day 403. What was done after the battle is told by Claudian VI Cons. Honor. He relates the retreat of Alaric upon terms. He alludes to actions at Verona and at Asta. He mentions that Alaric recrossed the Po in the summer season, that he was attacked in his retreat by Stilicho, that his army suffered by famine and disease, in that summer. Meanwhile during the flight of Alaric, Honorius is desired at Rome. It was now harvest time, and Honorius moved from Ravenna and entered Rome a little before his consulship. Therefore towards the close of 403, and these incidents determine the battle of Pollentia to the Easter of 403.

Birth of Marina the daughter of Arcadius and Eudoxia 10 or 11 Feb. 403.

Claudian de bello Getico. An interval of years had passed since his last poem in 400. This is written at Rome, where his other poems were composed. He affirms that the Getae had now been 30 years in the empire. The Goths were received into the empire in 376. Thirty years therefore in round numbers. Claudian describes their course through Thrace, Macedonia, Thessaly, Thermopylae, and the isthmus of Corinth, into Peloponnesus (in 396), and the terror inspired by their present irruption into Italy. He relates the forces collected by Stilicho, his arrival at Rome, the march of Alaric to Liguria, the battle, and the victory of Stilicho. Pollentia repairs the losses of 30 years. Alaric at this time is still juvenis. Rapuit te flamma juvenæ.

The empress Eudoxia procures the exile of Chrysostom through the synod which she caused to be assembled by Theophilus of Alexandria, who collects many bishops at Chalcedon (the synod ad Quercum). Chrysostom is cited to appear before them, and on his non-appearance is deposed. This excited a formidable sedition at Constantinople. Chrysostom to stay this sedition privately surrendered himself and withdrew from CP. into Bithynia. The tumult becomes still more serious, and Chrysostom is recalled. This first exile happened nine or ten months before Lent 404; therefore about July 403. After his return commotions ensued between the Alexandrian party and the party of John; and Theophilus fled to Egypt: he fled immediately; and two months after the return of Chrysostom was at Alexandria plotting new troubles. Specimens of the gross and vulgar abuse with which Theophilus insulted Chrysostom are preserved by Facundus pro tribus capit. VI. 5. Of these passages Facundus adds that they were contained in a bulky volume, which Hieronymus gave to the western world in a Latin version: inormem librum, non solum contumeliis sed ipsa quoque sæpe repetita maledictorum recapitulatione nimis horribilem, ab Hieronymo presbytero translatum; de quo idem beatus Theophilus expectavit ut per ejus eloquium qualis Joannes fuerit Latini cognoscerent.

Chrysostom after his return to Constantinople preaches against the statue of Eudoxia, and the empress is again excited to anger. Another synod is assembled not long before 25 Dec. 403, and tumults followed, which continued till Easter 404.

Epiphanius one of the adversaries of Chrysostom died on his way back to Cyprus, at the close of 402 or the beginning of 403. He had been a bishop 36 years, and was already in extreme old age in 392.

Prudentii in Symmachum libri duo. After the battle of Pollentia, and before the visit of Honorius to Rome, which places this poem in 403.

A synod against the Donatists is held at Carthage. In the Acta Conciliorum tom. 3 are the dates of many former councils, held during the episcopate of Auxentius of Carthage. 1 at Hippo regius 8 Oct. 393. 2 at Carthage 26 June 394. 3, 4 at Carthage 28 Aug., and another 26 June 397. 5 at Carthage 27 Ap. 399. 6 at Carthage 18 June 401. 7 at Milevi 27 Aug. 402. 8 at Carthage 25 Aug. 403. 9 at Carthage 16 June 404.

404 1157 Fl. Honorius Aug. VI et Aristænetus. Arcadii et Honorii 10 from Jan. 17.

About June 404 news arrived at Constantinople that the Isaurians descending from their mountains had ravaged the provinces of Pamphylia and Cilicia. Arbazacius is sent against them, and has some success, but is charged with treachery. But by purchasing the protection of the empress Eudoxia with a part of the spoils of the campaign, he is acquitted. This campaign and the incursion of the Isaurians were in the year 404, before the death of Eudoxia. About the same time the Huns passing the Danube pillaged Thrace.

Eudoxia died in childbed 6 Oct. 404.

Claudiani de VI consulatu Honorii Aug. panegyris. Claudian had some time ago celebrated the defeat of Gildo (namely in 398), and lately the defeat of Alaric at Pollentia (namely in 403). The poem is composed in the beginning of the year. The poet describes the events which followed the battle of Pollentia; Alaric's retreat; the rivers which lay in his way are mentioned, the Po, the Ticinus, the Addua, the Athesis, the Mincius, the Timavus. He arrives within sight of the Alps. Claudian then proceeds to tell the progress of Honorius from Ravenna to Rome. Honorius had declined to come after the victory in Africa in 398, and is now invited after the Getic war. His entrance is described, the rejoicings that followed, and the opening of his 6th consulship at Rome. On the approach of Alaric the walls of Rome had been restored. According to Claudian Alaric, when he entered Italy, threatened Honorius with a siege, and interrupted the approach of Stilicho, holding the bridge of the Addua between Stilicho and the emperor. Honorius was therefore at Milan. He was, according to the Code, at Ravenna 6 Dec. 402, and again 20 Feb. 403. But in the interval between he might have visited Milan, and during his stay there the enemy approached, whose approach was in the winter.

Eunapius ends his history. He began at the reign of Claudius, and ended at the appointment of Arsacius to the episcopate of Constantinople, and the death of Eudoxia, in 404. But some passages were written after 414.

Theophili ep. Paschalis III. At the end he appoints the time. Lent was to begin March 7, and Easter day was to fall upon Ap. 17, which happened in 404.

Prudentius is in his 57th year in A. D. 404.

Hieronymi epitaphium Paulæ. He relates that she died 26 Jan. 404, at the age of 56^y 8^m 21^d, after residing at Bethlehem 20 years. But Paula was still at Rome in August 385 (see 385), from which epoch January 404 is only the 19th year current.

Chrysostom is ordered to quit the church at CP. at Easter. The proceedings of the synod against him were a little before. He departed five days after Pentecost. Tumults ensued, and he is ordered into exile. His adherents (called the Joannitæ) burn the church at CP. 20 June 404. Arsacius, now above 80 years of age, brother of Nectarius, was appointed bishop in the place of Chrysostom 27 June 404, and Eudoxia died 6 Oct. following.

405 1158 Ol. 296 Fl. Stilicho II et Anthemius. Arcadii et Honorii 11 from Jan. 17.

The ravages of the Isaurians are renewed in the spring and summer of 405. Attested by Chrysostom in Ep. 107. 110. 109 written from Cucusus.

Radagaisus with an army of 200,000 men composed of Celts, Germans, Sarmatians, and Goths, passed the Upper Danube and invaded Italy in 405. He was opposed by Stilicho, who collected the remaining forces of the empire, with auxiliaries; the Alani, the Huns under Huldin, the Goths under Sarus. The troops of Radagaisus were blockaded at Fæsulæ, wasted by famine, and finally destroyed or captured. Radagaisus himself surrendered, or was taken prisoner, and was put to death by Stilicho, who took into his own service a select body of the followers of Radagaisus.

(Claudiani de (II) consulatu Fl. Stilichonis V. C. Probably a third book upon the past consulship of Stilicho. See F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 561.)

Chrysostom after his exile from CP. 20 June 404 set out from Nicæa July 4. His way was through Cæsarea in Cilicia. In his journey he was afflicted with a fever which lasted 30 days, and the Isauri beset the country. He reached Cucusus in 70 days from Nicæa, and accordingly arrived at Cucusus about 12 Sept. 404. The following letters of Chrysostom, Ep. 87, 215, 133, 155, 174, 192, were written soon after his arrival, in the autumn of 404, or the winter following. In Ep. 143 he mentions his successor Arsacius. Theodorus had been employed to bring him to Cucusus. Chrysostom remained there a year, or rather more than a year; for he arrived in September 404, and was removed in the middle of his second winter. For the letters of Chrysostom in 404, 405. see F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 560—563.

Arsacius dies 11 Nov. 405; after an episcopate from 27 June 404 of more than 16 months.

Constantius, to whom Chrysostom addressed Ep. 145 July 4 A. D. 404, is himself at Cucusus in the winter, when the Isaurians were quiet. The winter of 404.

Concilium Africanum III adversus Donatistas. Held at Carthage 23 Aug. 405.

406 1159 Fl. Arcadius Aug. VI Anicius Probus. Arcadii et Honorii 12 from Jan. 17.

The Vandals, the Alani, and Suevi passing the Rhine enter Gaul 31 May 406. See F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 564 Vol. 2 p. 134.

The Isaurians continue in 406 their devastations, which are marked in the letters of Chrysostom.

Chrysostom in the beginning of 406, about 15 months after his arrival at Cucusus, (see 405) was removed to Arabissus, a town of Cappadocia, about 30 English miles N.E. of Cucusus. His letters quoted in F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 564, 566 attest his removal, and the terror inspired by the incursions of the Isaurians. Chrysostom in his exile is described by Sozomen: "Joannes in his exile became still more eminent: for having abundance of wealth, he ransomed from the Isaurians many captives and restored them to their friends; he supplied to many who were necessitous the means of life; those who had no need of money he won by his discourse. He was especially beloved by the Armenians among whom he dwelt, and by the inhabitants of the neighbouring countries. Numbers resorted to him from Antioch and from the rest of Syria and from Cilicia."

Atticus, an enemy of Chrysostom, in the fourth month after the death of Arsacius is appointed to the episcopate of Constantinople, in Feb. 406. Atticus was liberal to the Novatians.

Hieronymi adversus Vigilantium. Written two years after the epistle to Riparius, and within the reign of Arcadius. Jovinian was now dead. Vigilantius, a presbyter of Barcelona, had condemned celibacy, fasts, vigils, and the veneration of relics; whom Hieronymus endeavours to refute in his letter to Riparius (Ep. 53) in 404, and in this discourse in 406. Vigilantius an interpreter of Daniel, who took part with Rufinus in the matter of Origen, and to whom Hieronymus addressed Ep. 75 in 396, appears to be a different person from the presbyter of Barcelona.

407 1160 Fl. Honorius Aug. VII Fl. Theodosius Aug. II. Arcadii et Honorii 13 from Jan. 17.

The Quinquennalia of Theodosius II are celebrated 11 Jan. 407, after the completion of the 5th year.

The army in Britain had rebelled in 406, and proclaimed one Marcus emperor: whom they immediately slew, and then appointed Gratianus in his stead. Gratianus also after four months is put to death, and Constantine in the year 407 is declared emperor by the soldiers. Constantine passing into Gaul gains the army of Gaul, and is master of the whole country as far as the Alps. His son Constans is created Cæsar. Honorius heard of these events at Rome.

The Isaurians still continue their depredations, in the third year of the exile of Chrysostom.

Chrysostom in the third year of his exile is to be removed from Arabissus to a more distant prison, to Pityus, a desolate spot in the country of the Tzani, on the north eastern coast of the Euxine sea. But exhausted by disease and fatigue he died at Comana on his way thither, 14 Sept. 407. The accounts of his biographers are given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 569. He died just three years after his arrival at Cucusus. He quitted Arabissus 3 months before his death, therefore in June; about 18 months after he had come thither. From Chrysostom's account of himself we may collect that he was born about 352, and was about 55 at his death. See 369. 375.

Idatius in his early youth had seen Hieronymus, whom he mentions at 407.

Dorotheus the Arian bishop, who had been transferred from Antioch to CP., and who is said to have lived 119 years, died 6 Nov. 407. He was succeeded by Barbas. Demophilus had died in 386, after whom Marinus was bishop, whom Dorotheus succeeded before the war with Maximus in 388.

Sisinnius the Novatian bishop died in 407, and Chrysanthus was appointed in his stead.

408 1161 Bassus et Philippus. Honorii 14 from Jan. 17. Theodosii II 1 from May 1:

Maria the daughter of Stilicho, who had been betrothed to Honorius, being dead, the emperor marries her sister Thermantia.

Arcadius died 1 May 408 at the age of 31 years. He had reigned from his elevation 16 Jan. 383, 25y 3m 16d, and from the death of his father 17 Jan. 395 13y 3m 15d. At the time of this event Honorius is at Rome, Constantine at Arelatum, and Alaric in Noricum.

Olympius, who was indebted to Stilicho for his own introduction to the emperor, by false charges procures the death of Stilicho, who is slain at Ravenna by order of Honorius 23 Aug. 408. Stilicho had been 23 years in command. After his death, his daughter Thermantia is dismissed, and her son Eucherius is put to death.

Alaric after the death of Stilicho moved from Noricum, passed through Aquileia, Ariminum, the Picene district, and advanced to Rome, reinforced by 30,000 of the troops of Stilicho. He besieged Rome the first time, but withdrew upon terms into Tuscany a little before Honorius began his 8th consulship. This siege of Rome therefore happened in the autumn, between August and December 408. During this siege Sirena the niece of Theodosius, the wife of Stilicho, is put to death by the Senate.

Constantine sends his son the Cæsar Constans into Spain, who gains that country, and siezes Didymus and Verenianus, the kinsmen of Honorius. These two are put to death towards the close of 408.

Troilus the sophist flourished. He was consulted by Anthemius the prætorian præfect, who was consul in 405, and ably administered the Eastern empire at the accession of Theodosius II. Troilus was a native of Side in Pamphylia. Among his disciples was Ablabius a Novatian bishop of Nicæa, and Silvanus bishop of Philippopolis.

The dialogue on the life of Chrysostom, ascribed to Palladius, was held at Rome with Theodorus a Roman deacon before the death of Chrysostom was known at Rome. The author was one of the bishops who voted for Chrysostom at the synod in 403. He has now grey hairs, and is at Rome for the first time.

Two synods against pagans and heretics are held at Carthage in 468, June 16 and Oct. 13.

409 1162 Ol. 297 Fl. Honorius Aug. VIII Fl. Theodosius Aug. III. Honorii 15 from Jan. 17, Theodosii II 2 from May 1.

Honorius is at Ravenna 1 Jan. 409, and early in the year, before he had heard of the death of his kinsmen, receives an embassy from Constantine. Being pressed by the approach of Alaric, he agrees to the request of Constantine, and continues him in the sovereignty of the western provinces. A second embassy from Constantine was sent at the time of Alaric's march to Rome, promising aid with the forces of the west.

Gerontius had been left in command in Spain by Constans at the close of 408. And during the absence of Constans in Gaul Gerontius revolts and proclaims Maximus emperor early in 409.

Alaric negotiates with Honorius who rejects his demands. Indignant that his offers are refused, Alaric marches with his whole army to Rome, which is besieged a second time. The seaport of Ostia is occupied, and the city threatened with a famine. Wherefore the senate complied with his conditions. Alaric nominates Attalus emperor, who appoints Alaric himself master general of the cavalry and infantry, Ataulphus the brother in law of Alaric count of the domestics, and Tertullus consul for the ensuing year.

The Vandals, the Alani, and Suevi enter Spain on the 28 Sept. or the 13 Oct. 409. After the return of Constans from Spain in the close of 408, which opened a way to the barbarians through the Pyrenees, and three years after their occupation of Gaul in 406.

Hieronimi ad Ageruchiam. Composed after the siege of Rome, and before the Vandals entered Spain. Therefore between the close of 408 and October 409. From the silence of Hieronymus we may conclude that it was before the second siege of Rome and the appointment of Attalus. He describes the calamities of Gaul, "Moguntiacum had been captured: Tolosa rescued only through the merit of the bishop Exuperius: Rome had been besieged through the guilt of a semibarbarous traitor:"—an allusion to the pretended treachery of Stilicho. Hieronymus in this piece quotes his treatise against Jovinian of the year 393. His ad Eustochium (383), ad Furiam (396), ad Salvinam (400). Salvina was the daughter of the tyrant Gildo, and the widow of Nebridius.

Cælestius is a disciple of Pelagius about 20 years before 429. Pelagius himself had written commentaries on St. Paul at Rome ante vastationem urbis Romæ. See Marius Mercator quoted in F. Rom. Vol. I p. 595.

A synod de cognitione episcopi held at Carthage 14 June 409.

410 1163 Fl. Varanes et Tertullus. Honorii 16 from Jan. 17, Theodosii II 3 from May 1.

Alaric being at Ariminum deposed Attalus and treated with Honorius. The deposed emperor, who had not enjoyed his elevation a year, remained with the Goths. But Sarus the Goth, the enemy of Ataulphus, joining Honorius repulsed Alaric from Ravenna. Alaric upon this marched for the third time to the assault of Rome. The Goths entered it by the Salarian gate, which was betrayed to Alaric: Procop. Vand. I. 2 p. 179, 180. The city was taken on the 24th or the 26th of August 410, and an immense booty fell into the hands of the conqueror. On this occasion Placidia the sister of Honorius was captured. On the sixth day after he had entered, Alaric withdrew his forces from the city. Advancing from Rome into Southern Italy, in the autumn of 410 he occupied Campania with its cities Capua and Nola; he ravaged Lucania and entered the country of the Bruttii. There the Goths halted a while, with the intention of passing into Sicily and from thence to Africa, when Alaric suddenly expired after a short illness at Consentia. His body was deposited by his faithful followers, in the bed of the river Buentus or Barentinus: Jornand. Get. c. 30 Paulus Diac. XIII. p. 535. He had reigned according to Isidorus 28 years A. D. 382—410. Ataulphus the brother of the wife of Alaric was elected king of the Visigoths in his stead at the close of 410.

The history of Zosimus ends at the year 410. The 6th book ended, according to Photius, with the approach of Alaric to Ravenna and the interruption of the treaty by the hostile measures of Sarus. Zosimus therefore did not include the sack of Rome in August, and his history terminated about the middle of 410.

Proclus the philosopher is born about April 410. He died at the age of 75 years 17 April 485. See F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 577. 579.

A synod is held at Carthage against the Donatists 14 June 410.

411 1164 Fl. Theodosius Aug. IV. Honorii 17 from Jan. 17, Theodosii II 4 from May 1.

The decennalia of Theodosius are celebrated at CP. and the vicennalia of Honorius at Rome. The 10th year from the elevation of Theodosius began 10 Jan. 411, but the 20th from the elevation of Honorius did not begin till the 10th Jan. 412, and was therefore anticipated.

Gerontius invading Gaul caused Constans to be slain at Vienne, and besieged Constantine in Arelate, when Constantius and Ulphilas withdrew from Italy and advanced against the Gallic usurpers. Upon their approach Gerontius fled, was besieged by his own soldiers, and slew himself. Meanwhile Jovinus in another part of Gaul assumes the purple, and with an army composed of Burgundians, Alamanni, Franks, and Alani is marching to Arelate. Constantine, who had now been besieged for 4 months current, on hearing this intelligence, and also learning that Edobichus, who was marching to his aid was defeated and slain, surrenders to Constantius, is sent into Italy and slain near the river Mincius 18 Sept. 411.

Conferences with the Donatists are held at Carthage on the 1st, 3rd, and 8th of June 411.

Augustini breviculus collationis cum Donatistis. The number of Donatist bishops was 279, of catholic 266. The bishops who managed the conference for the catholics were Aurelius, Alypius, Augustinus, Vincentius, Fortunatus, Fortunatianus, Possideus: for the Donatists, Primianus, Petilianus, Emeritus, Protasius, Montanus, Gaudentius, Adeodatus.

412 1165 Fl. Honorius Aug. IX Fl. Theodosius Aug. V. Honorii 18 from Jan. 17, Theodosii II 5 from May 1.

Ataulphus and the Goths enter Gaul in 412. At this time Jovinus, who had rebelled in Sept. 410, at Moguntiacum, held authority in Gaul. The Vandals and Alani had evacuated Gaul and entered Spain in 409. Maximus, who had been proclaimed emperor by Gerontius, being deposed and deserted by his soldiers, lives in obscurity and exile in Spain. Ataulphus at first negotiated with Jovinus, but when Sarus, the enemy of Ataulphus, was received into the service of Jovinus, and Sebastian was proclaimed Augustus, the Gothic king proceeded to hostilities, and Sarus is slain.

Annianus and Panodorus the chronographers flourished in the time of Theophilus of Alexandria and in the reign of Arcadius. Annianus, (who was more concise) placed the Nativity in the 5501st year of the world, and the Resurrection in the 5534th year. Panodorus, (who was more copious) placed those events in the 5493rd and 5526th years. Theophilus is placed at the year 5904, by Syncellus. According to Panodorus the year 5904 will fall upon A. D. 412, in which Theophilus died Oct. 15. It is therefore probable that Syncellus has given the date of Panodorus, and that Panodorus ended his chronology at the death of Theophilus.

Augustini Ep. 141 (152) Sylvanus senex Valentinus, &c. Augustinus Donatus et ceteri episcopi de concilio Zertensi ad Donatistas.—Dated 14 June 412.

Hieronymi epitaphium Marcellæ. Two years after her death, and Marcella died in the beginning of Sept. 410. The sack of Rome by Alaric in 410 is described. Hieronymus joins together in his description the previous events; the siege of 408, the famine of 409.

Cyril succeeds Theophilus at Alexandria. Theophilus died Oct. 15, and his nephew Cyril was appointed 18 Oct. 412. The works of Cyril are given from Gennadius in F. Rom. Vol. I p. 583. Add his extant work against Julian, contra Julianum libri X. addressed to Theodosius II. Mentioned by Theodoret ep. 83 p. 1150, and by Nicephorus H. E. XIV. 146. 465 C δ κατὰ Ἰουλιανοῦ ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἱεροῦ εὐαγγελίου συνέταξεν.

413 1166 Ol. 298 Lucius. Honorii 19 from Jan. 17, Theodosii II 6 from May 1.

Ataulphus acting for Honorius in Gaul put Sebastianus to death, and besieged Jovinus in Narbona, who is captured about the time of vintage in 413, sent prisoner to Honorius, and slain by Dardanus the prætorian præfect.

Heraclianus, who had rebelled in Africa, and had invaded Italy with 700 ships, is repulsed, driven back to Africa, and slain at Carthage, in 413.

Pelagius, a Briton, publishes his dogmas aided by Coelestius and Julianus. See the testimonies from Prosper and Marius Mercator in F. Rom. Vol. I p. 585. Julianus bishop of Capua, who wrote against Augustine upon the Pelagian question, was still living in 439.

414 1167 Fl. Constantius Fl. Constans. Honorii 20 from Jan. 17, Theodosii II 7 from May 1.

The marriage of Ataulphus and Placidia is celebrated at Narbona in January 414. This date is assigned by Olympiodorus. Placed also at the 20th of Honorius by Idatius, at the 5th of Ataulphus by Isidorus. But as his 1st year began at the close of 410, his 4th commenced at the close of 413, and was still current in January 414. Orosius VII. 40. 43 seems to place this marriage before the march into Gaul: In ea irruptione Placidia—et Ataulpho Alarici propinquo capta est, atque in uxorem adsumta. Gothorum tum populis Ataulphus rex præerat, qui post irruptionem urbis et mortem Alarici Placidia, ut dixi, captiva—in uxorem adsumta Alarico in regnum successe- rat. And Jornandes Get. c. 31 places it in Italy: Placidiam—in Foro Livii Æmilie civitati suo matrimonio copulavit, ut gentes, hac societate comperta, quasi renata Gothorum republica, efficacius terrerentur. This account would assign 411 for the date.

Attalus is again created emperor by the Goths.

Ataulphus passes into Spain 4 years after the sack of Rome, and, as Rome was taken in 410, the march into Spain will be in 414.

Pulcheria, who entered her 16th year 19 Jan. 414, is declared Augusta at Constantinople 4 July 414.

Yezdejerd I king of Persia (see 399) begins a persecution of the Christians, which according to Theodoret H. E. V. 38 lasted for 30 years, A. D. 414—443; for Vararam V, who succeeded in 420, and Yezdejerd II, who succeeded in 440, continued the persecution.

Eunapius noticed in his history the acts of Pulcheria, and records the venality and corruption which prevailed under her administration, when all offices were publicly sold. But, as Pulcheria's government did not commence till this year, the historian who recorded these acts must have written two or three years later, which will extend the life of Eunapius to 416 or 417. Eunapius, who was born in 347, (see 362), is now 67 years of age.

415 1168 Fl. Honorius Aug. X Fl. Theodosius Aug. VI. Honorii 21 from Jan. 17, Theodosii II 8 from May 1.

Quinquennalia are celebrated by Theodosius 11 Jan. 415. The third celebration. See 407. 411. His 15th year was anticipated, which did not commence till 10 Jan. 416. See 402. 411.

Thermantia the daughter of Stilicho and the wife of Honorius dies 30 July 415.

The death of Ataulphus is reported at Constantinople 24 Sept. 415. Ataulphus and Placidia have a son born to them in 415, who is named Theodosius. But the child died, and soon afterwards Ataulphus himself is assassinated at Barcelona by a follower of Sarus, in revenge for the death of that chief. Singerichus the brother of Sarus assumes the kingdom, but is slain in 7 days and Wallia succeeds as king of the Visigoths.

As Ataulphus began to reign in the close of 410, and was slain at least two or three weeks before 24 Sept. 415, he reigned not quite 5 years.

Hypatia the daughter of Theon, the wife of Isidorus, celebrated for her learning and accomplishments, is murdered by the populace at Alexandria in March 415. Some charge this upon Cyril the bishop, as the instigator of the riot. See the authorities referred to in F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 589.

Orosii apologia contra Pelagium de arbitrii libertate. He describes a synod at Jerusalem, at which he was present, and writes his treatise at the encænia of the church at Jerusalem 47 days after the synod. The encænia was on Sept. 17, see 335, and that synod is placed at the end of July. Hieronymus had lately written the epistle in Ctesiphontem adversus Pelagianos, and was then composing the dialogues adversus Pelagianos. Hieronymus himself proæm. in dialogos mentions the epistle to Ctesiphon, and quotes in lib. III Augustine ad Marcellinum de peccatorum meritis, written long before, and also Augustine's book lately addressed to Hilarius.

Augustini Hieronymo ep. 28 (106) de animarum origine, et de parvulorum non baptizatorum damnatione. Augustini Hieronymo ep. 29. He mentions the books of Hieronymus contra Jovinianum. These two epistles were not published till after the death of Hieronymus. Augustine is now old, though much younger than Hieronymus. Orosius is a young man.

416 1169 Fl. Theodosius Aug. VII Junius Quartus Palladius. Honorii 22 from Jan. 17, Theodosii II 9 from May 1.

Wallia the new king of the Goths makes peace with Honorius and restores Placidia in 416.

Attalus is again deposed and given up to the court of Ravenna. The fact was reported at Constantinople 28 June 416.

Theodosius visits Heraclea 30 Sept. 416.

C. Rutilii Numatiani Itinerarium. Written in the 1169th year of Rome. If Rutilius adopted the Varronian era, which is probable, his poem is determined to A. D. 416.

Augustini Ep. 90 (175) Patres Concilii Carthaginensis Innocentio pontifici Romano de actis adversus Pelagianos. Ep. 92 (176) Augustinus et ceteri episcopi Milevitani concilii Innocentio de cohibendis Pelagianis. The two councils are mentioned again Ep. 95 (177) Aurelius alique episcopi, inter quos Augustinus, Innocentio de Pelagio. Ep. 94 (178) Augustinus Hilario.

Pelagius is now in Palestine, where Hieronymus is still alive. Marius Mercator, quoted in F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 591, gives the circumstances.

Orosius is mentioned in this year by Marcellinus. Gennadius places him at the close of the reign of Honorius. The History of Orosius was completed in 417. He attests that he writes in the reign of Theodosius II and before the death of Honorius.

Thus far we learn from certain accounts that the Alani, the Vandals, the Suevi, the Goths in daily combats are destroying one another; and they relate that Wallia is especially desirous of effecting a peace." The shipwreck in the straits of Gibraltar was in 416 before the restoration of Placidia. Wallia died in 418. An army is sent with them under their commanders, Ardaburius and his son Aspar. When they arrived at Thessalonica, Elion the master of the offices, by command of Theodosius invests Valentinian with the ensigns of Cæsar. If the inscriptions in the Theodosian code are correct, Valentinian was created Cæsar between the 10th and 16th of October 424. Aspar with the cavalry, taking with him Placidia and Valentinian, by a rapid march occupies Aquileia. But the fleet of Ardaburius is dispersed by a storm, and Ardaburius himself falls into the hands of his enemy, who treats him liberally. The soldiers of the usurper are won over by Ardaburius to return to their allegiance, Joannes is seized, sent prisoner to Aquileia, and put to death. After this success Valentinian, then in his 7th year, was created Augustus by Theodosius 23 Oct. 425. Castinus, who seemed to have connived at the usurpation of Joannes, was banished. Aëtius, who had taken service under the usurper, and brought 60,000 Huns to his aid, but who by advancing them their pay persuaded them to return to their own country, was received into favour by the new government, and created a military count. These transactions, the campaign with Joannes, his defeat and death, the march and retreat of the Huns, might occupy the spring and summer of 425, and Valentinian is proclaimed Augustus in October. Aëtius, now in the service of Valentinian III proceeds to Gaul where he recovers Arelate, which was threatened by the Goths. Olympiodorus concludes his history. I. 3), and who had been now informed of the treachery by which himself and Placidia had been mutually deceived, (Procop. Ibid.) endeavoured too late to repair his error, and to persuade the Vandals to withdraw from Africa. But Genseric, who had combined forces of Vandals, Alani, and Goths, held possession of his conquest. Bonifacius is defeated in a battle and besieged in the city of Hippo Regius. The Vandals commenced the siege of Hippo about the end of May 430. The city was defended for 14 months, and was taken in July 431. Augustine, who entered his 76th year 13 Nov. 429, was in Hippo at this time. Possideus attests that he died 3 months after the siege began, and Prosper records that the day of his death was 28 Aug. 430. At the time of the death of Augustine only three cities of Africa remained that were not in the possession of the Vandals, Carthage, Hippo, and Cirta. Augustine at the time of his death was employed upon his second reply to the Pelagian Julianus, which he began in 428. He had answered formerly a work of Julianus, he now prepared to reply to another work of Julianus. Theodosii II 41 from May 1, Valentiniani III 24 from Oct. 23. Four embassies are sent by Attila to Constantinople, with various demands. All his demands were complied with ; for the imperial government in addition to the war with the Huns, expected war from the Persians, the Vandals, the Isaurian robbers, the Saracens, and the Ethiopians. The ambassadors Edeco and Orestes were the bearers of letters from Attila to Theodosius. Upon their arrival the eunuch Chrysaphius proposed to Edeco a plot for murdering Attila by the hands of his own guards, who were to be bribed with money supplied for that purpose. Edeco pretended to concur : Theodosius himself is a party to the plot. Edeco returns from his mission, and Maximinus is sent as ambassador to Attila. But Edeco disclosed to his master the intended assassination. Priscus the historian accompanies Maximinus in his mission to the camp of Attila. At this time Zeno is consularis ; who was consul in this year ; and Areobindus is still living, who died in 449. Wherefore this embassy is rightly placed by Labbe in the close of 448. Priscus describes their journey to Naïesus, their arrival at the camp of Attila, their interview, their advance northwards, their meeting with ambassadors from the west. The ambassadors sup with Attila. They are dismissed and return to Constantinople. Priscus the sophist, a native of Panium in Thrace, wrote a Byzantine history, embracing the wars of Attila, in 8 books. In Spain the death of Rechila king of the Suevi and the succession of his son Rechiarus are placed by Idatius in August 448. Idatius then proceeds to this effect. " In 449, Rechiarus having married the daughter of Theodores king of the Visigoths, plunders Vasconia in February 449. In July 449, after having visited his father-in-law, he ravages the country of Cæsaraugusta in his return." But, as Idatius himself places these events in the year before the consulship of Asturius, and two years before the death of Theodosius II, we may rectify his chronology, and refer the death of Rechila to August 447, and the expeditions of Rechiarus to February and July 448.

To appease Attila Nomus and Anatolius are sent to his camp beyond the Danube; for Attila himself had named these, or senators, men of consular rank, as the only ambassadors whom he would receive. Their mission was successful, Attila consented to observe the peace upon the terms already agreed to. He forgave the authors of the plot; he abandoned to the Romans some countries south of the Danube which he had already conquered; he restored many prisoners without ransom, he dismissed the ambassadors with honour and gifts. From the narrative of Priscus it appears that the plot was discovered to Attila at the close of the embassy of Maximinus, and that the mission of Nomus and Anatolius was after his return, and therefore in 449. The deaths are recorded in this year of Marina the sister of Theodosius on the 3rd of August, and of the patricians Areobinda and Taurus. Sebastianus, who had unfortunately taken refuge with Genseric (see 444, 445) was soon after slain by his order. Sidonius Apollinaris is now in early youth in the consulship of Asturius. Another council upon Eutyches is held at Constantinople 8 April—27 April 449. The second council of Ephesus, called "the plundering council," is assembled through the interest of Chrysaphius, the favourite eunuch of the palace, on the 8th of August 449. He entered the 50th year of his age in April 450, and had reigned 48y 6m 19d, from his elevation 10 Jan. 402, and 42y 2m 28d from the death of his father 1 May 408. Attila determines on the western war, in which he should have to contend not only against the Italians, but also against the Goths and Franci. The cause of the war with the Franci was this. Their king dying had left two sons, competitors for the succession. The elder had sought the aid of Attila, the younger, of Aëtius.

Aëtius collecting the forces of the empire, and forming an alliance with Theoderic king of the Visigoths advanced to encounter the Huns. Attila on their approach withdrew from Aureliani into a more open country, and prepared for battle in the Catalaunian plains. The three brothers, kings of the Ostrogoths, Walamir, Theodemir, and Widemir, served under Attila; the Visigoths, the other branch of the Gothic people, were the allies of Aëtius. After an obstinate conflict the Huns were repulsed, through the aid of the Goths, when king Theoderic fell in the action. His son Torismond was proclaimed his successor on the field of battle. Attila was deliberating upon the attack of Rome, when an embassy approached his camp at the junction of the Mincius and the Po, composed of Avienus, Trigetius, and the Roman bishop Leo. Attila is persuaded to grant peace to Italy, and to return to his own country beyond the Danube. His army began to suffer by disease, and was harassed by Aëtius, who had been reinforced by auxiliaries sent by Marcian from the east. The followers of Attila reminded him that Alaric did not long survive the sack of Rome. Optila and Thraustila, the faithful followers of Aëtius. Valentinian III, whose vices had rendered him unpopular with the army, the people, and the senate, was slain in the Campus Martius at Rome in the presence of his army, 16 March 455. He had lived 35y 8m 14d; he had reigned 29y 4m 22d.

Maximus was proclaimed emperor 17 March 455, and married Eudoxia the widow of Valentinian. But Eudoxia by a private message called Genseric to her aid. At his approach Maximus prepared to fly, but was slain by the Roman populace 11 June 455.

On the third day after the death of Maximus Genseric entered Rome. He plundered the city for 14 days, and, having first ravaged the coasts of Campania, carried off with him to Carthage, with his booty, Eudoxia and her two daughters, Placidia and Eudoxia, with many thousands of other captives. Marcian by an embassy interceded in vain for the wife and daughters of Valentinian.

Genseric was at Rome about June 13—26, and on the 75th day after this captivity according to Victor, or on the 10th of July according to another account, Avitus is proclaimed emperor in Gaul, first at Tolosa, supported by the Visigoths, and then at Arelate, from whence he proceeds to Rome and assumes the government.

Leo of Rome went forth to meet Genseric at the gate of the city, and interceded for the inhabitants. Genseric treated Leo with respect.

Prosper continued his Chronicle to this year, and included the death of Valentinian, and the sack of Rome by the Vandals. His Chronicle commenced with Adam and not merely from A. D. 378.

Marii Aventicensis episcopi Chronicon. He begins thus: "Thus far Prosper. What follows is written by Marius. In the consulship of Anthemius Avitus was proclaimed emperor in Gaul, and Theoderic king of the Goths with his brothers entered Arelate in peace."

456 1209 Joannes et Varanes. Marciani 7 from Aug. 25.

Avitus is acknowledged by Marcian.

The emperor Avitus and his ally Theoderic king of the Visigoths had sent ambassadors to the Suevi of Gallæcia. After the return of these ambassadors, the Suevi invade Tarraconensis. Ambassadors from the Goths are again sent to the Suevi, on whose arrival Recharius king of the Suevi marches into Tarraconensis. But Theoderic the Goth assembling a great army with the sanction of the emperor Avitus invades Spain. He is met by Recharius near Asturia, who is defeated by the Goths 5 Oct. 456. Theoderic on the 28th Oct. with his victorious army enters and plunders Bracara, a city within the borders of Gallæcia. Recharius who had fled from the field of battle was captured, brought before Theo-deric and put to death. After which the king of the Goths in December 456 marched from Gallæcia into Lusitania. The Suevi who remained in the extreme parts of Gallæcia elected Maldra for their king, who began to reign in 457.

While the army of Theoderic lay in Gallæcia he was informed that the patrician Ricimer, who had been sent by Avitus against Genseric, had routed the fleet of the Vandals, and that Avitus had proceeded from Rome to Arelate. The victory of Ricimer and the journey of Avitus are fixed by this coincidence to about September 456.

Avitus is deposed by Ricimer at Placentia. His life was spared and he was made bishop of Placentia; but soon afterwards he was slain. As he still reigned in September 456, he reigned at least 13 months from 25 Aug. 455, the date of Victor, and a longer period, from 10 July 455, the date of an anonymous author for his elevation.

The Heruli appear on the northern coast of Spain in 456.

Sidonii Carm. VII Panegyricus Avito socero dictus. Addressed to Avitus on his consulship, which was assumed 1 Jan. 456. The poet, after touching upon the early history of Rome and the former emperors, describes Avitus, his early education, his favour with Constantius in 411, 412. He then refers to the transactions with Theoderic the Gothic king. Avitus aided Aëtius. The victory and death of Littorius are described. Avitus was living in retirement, when Attila burst into Gaul in 451. Avitus in that war assisted Aëtius. The poet describes the death of Aëtius in 454, and the elevation of Maximus in 455, and the dangers that ensued. Maximus appoints Avitus master general of cavalry and infantry. Maximus is slain and Rome taken by Genseric (the fourth Punic war.) Avitus urged by Theoderic and an assembly of Goths accepts the empire. On the third day after the Council he is invested. Avitus before his elevation had been four times præfect. Sidonius was his son-in-law. Hence the poem is inscribed Avito socero. Papianilla the daughter of Avitus still lived in 474.

This message may be referred to 467. Vast preparations are made for this war, a large fleet is collected, and the army is said to have amounted to 100,000 men. Marcellinus and Heraclius are employed; both eminent commanders. But the command of the whole armament is given to Basiliscus the brother of the empress Verina, and the expedition fails through his misconduct or treachery. He was said to have taken bribes from Genseric, by the secret advice of Aspar. The patrician Marcellinus, who was a pagan, had been a companion of Aëtius, after whose death he held Dalmatia for a time. Afterwards, in the service of Anthemius, he successfully combated the Vandals in Sardinia. In the present expedition he is assassinated in Sicily in August 468. See the testimonies to this expedition in F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 670. Sidonii Carm. II. Panegyricus quem Romæ dixit Anthemio bis consuli. The poet gives the following facts. Anthemius was sent by Leo. His father Procopius, who had married the daughter of Anthemius who was consul in 405, was descended from that Procopius who was Augustus in 364. The education and early years of the young Anthemius are described: his marriage with the daughter of Marcian; his offices, his triumphs. After the death of Severus, when the fleets of Genseric annually ravaged Italy. Ricimer was unequal alone to the defence, and Rome demanded Anthemius. The marriage of Ricimer is mentioned. The poet describes the preparations for the African war. In the beginning of this year the war was yet to come, and the expedition is fixed by this testimony to the beginning of 468. It appears from Candidus and Idatius that Anthemius contributed supplies to this war. The chronicle of Idatius concludes with the events of 468. "The ambassadors who return from the emperor state that in their presence a great armament under their chosen leaders was proceeding against the Vandals: that Marcellinus had under him an allied force sent by Anthemius: that Ricimer had been created patrician, and had become the son-in-law of Anthemius: that Aspar had been degraded and his son slain, on a charge of corresponding with the Vandals. Hilarus being dead after an episcopate of 6 years Simplicius succeeds him. The Aunonenses make peace with the Suevi: the Goths ravage parts of Lusitania." Idatius includes the whole of 468, of which he marks the winter, the spring, the summer, the autumn. We may observe that Idatius, who was seated

	in Gallæcia, had not yet heard of the death of Marcellinus, who was slain in August. Nor had he heard that the report concerning Aspar and his son was inaccurate. Hilarus of Rome presided 6y 3^m 10^d. He was appointed 12 Nov. 461, and the term of his episcopate was accomplished 21 Feb. 468. His successor Simplicius presided 15y and 7 days. The funeral of Simplicius was on the 2 March 483. We may therefore assign his death to 1 March 483, which will place his appointment at 23 Feb. 468, two days after the death of his predecessor, 2 March 483.

472	1225 Festus et Marcianus. Leonis 16 from Feb. 7. The patrician Ricimer made war upon Anthemius in 472. Proceeding from Milan he encamped near Rome, and proclaimed Olybrius emperor, who had now arrived from the east. Billimer, who had advanced to Rome with an army from Gaul to support Anthemius, is overthrown in battle at the bridge of Hadrian and slain by Ricimer. After this victory Ricimer storms the city. This civil war between Anthemius and Ricimer is alluded to by Gelasius of Rome Ep. adversus Andromachum apud Acta Concil. tom. 5 p. 364 A. Ricimer puts Anthemius to death 11 July 472, and 39 days afterwards dies himself on the 18th of August. Anthemius at his death 11 July 472 had reigned 5y 3^m 29^d from his accession 12 Ap. 467. Olybrius survived his elevation only 7 months, and died 23 Oct. 472, which carries back his appointment to April preceding. An irruption of Vesuvius is marked at Constantinople at 6 Nov. 472.
473	1226 [Ol. 313] Fl. Leo Aug. Widemir in the reign of Glycerius enters Italy, and dying is succeeded by his son, also named Widemir, whom Glycerius by gifts and promises transfers from Italy to Gaul, where the Ostrogoths form a junction with their brethren the Visigoths. Thus combined into one body the Goths held possession of Gaul and Spain. Meanwhile the elder brother Theodemir who has reserved for himself the more difficult war with the eastern empire, entering Illyricum occupies Naissus, supported by his son Theoderic. Theoderic son of Triarius makes a treaty with Leo, by which it is agreed that the Goths should receive annually 2,000 pounds of gold, and that Theoderic should be general of the empire in the place of Aspar, and should aid Leo against all enemies except the Vandals. Leo in October 473 associates in the empire his grandson Leo the son of Zeno and Ariadne.

	The Byzantine history of Malchus in 7 books begins at the 17th year of Leo. The 7th book ended, according to Photius, at the death of Nepos in 480. But Malchus continued his history to the reign of Anastasius. See 491.
474	1227 Fl. Leo junior Aug. Julius Nepos being sent by Leo to reign in the west, deposes Glycerius, whom he causes to be ordained bishop of Salona. Nepos was the son of Nepotianus; his mother was the sister of Marcellinus. Although named emperor by Leo before February, his elevation is dated 24 June 474. Euric king of the Visigoths perceiving so rapid a succession of emperors, Olybrius, Glycerius, Nepos, occupies Arverna in 474. A peace follows between Euric and Nepos, negotiated by Epiphanius bishop of Ticinum. The emperor Leo, having appointed his grandson Leo his successor, died 3 Feb. 474. He had reigned from his accession 7 Feb. 457, 16y 11^m 28^d. Zeno the son-in-law of the late emperor causes his own son the child Leo to inaugurate him emperor 9 Feb. 474. After this the young Leo dies at 7 years of age, in the eleventh month of his consulship, Nov. 474. Zeno flies to his native country Isauria with Ariadne. He was still at CP. 11 Oct. 475, and reached Isauria in the winter towards the close of the year. We collect from Malalas that Zeno fled after he had reigned 2y 10^m, which determines his flight to the end of November 475. The first book of Candidus ended with the winter of 475. Gelasii Cyziceni de synodo apud Nicæam libri III. The author mentions that he lived at the time of the usurper Basiliscus.

	Scyri, Heruli, Turcilingi, and other nations. In 476 he overpowered Orestes, who fled to Ticinum. That city was taken by the enemy, and Orestes himself was captured and conveyed to Placentia. The authority of Odoacer was acknowledged on the 23 Aug. Orestes was slain at Placentia 28 Aug. and his brother Paullus at Ravenna 2 Sept. 476. Romulus Augustus was banished. Ennodius Vit. Epiphan. p. 349. 350 attests the destruction of Ticinum and the death of Orestes at Placentia. Odoacer fixing his seat at Ravenna, reigned in Italy with the title of king, but without assuming the purple and imperial ensigns. The last Augustus had worn the purple only 10 months, from 31 Oct. 475 to 22 Aug. 476. Zeno is besieged by his adversaries in July 476.
477	1230 [Ol. 314] Post consulatum Basilisci II et Armati. Zenonis 4 from Feb. 9. Bracila, a military count, is put to death by Odoacer at Ravenna 11 July 477. Zeno in 477 returns to Constantinople from Isauria, 20 months after his expulsion. Basiliscus, being betrayed by Armatus, falls into the power of Zeno, who sends him, with his wife Zenonis and his son Marcus, into exile to Cappadocia. They perish there from want and hardships. Zeno was expelled in November 475, he returned in July 477. Basiliscus died in his exile in the winter following. Armatus was put to death by Zeno; and his son, who had been created Cæsar, was deposed and compelled to become a monk. Genseric died in 477. From his occupation of Carthage 19 Oct. 439 he reigned 37y 3m 6d, which will place his death at January 477. This date is confirmed by the reign of Huneric his son, whose 8th year was current in February 484. Therefore his 1st was current in February 477. But Genseric from the death of his brother Gunderic at the close of 428 had reigned something more than 48 years. Malchus in his history relates the negotiations of Odoacer and Nepos with Zeno after the return of Zeno, and the expulsion of Basiliscus. Odoacer desires from Zeno the rank of patrician; Nepos desires his aid for the recovery of the western empire: Zeno supports the claim of Nepos. These negotiations belong to the autumn of 477, Indict. 1, in the 4th year of Zeno.
478	1231 Illus. Zenonis 5 from Feb. 9. Theoderic the Ostrogoth the son of Triarius, who was connected by marriage with Aspar, and had supported Basiliscus, and had been hostile to Zeno, sends an embassy in 478 inviting the emperor to a treaty. He reminds him of what the empire had suffered from him as an enemy, and of the evils which the son of Theodemir, although the general and ally of the empire, had inflicted upon the cities and provinces. Zeno and his council decline these offers, and continue to hold the son of Triarius as an enemy. After this rejection of his overtures Theoderic marched to Constantinople in 478 and carried devastation and alarm to the entrance of the harbour.

The other Theoderic, the future king of Italy, now only 24 years of age, had assisted Zeno against Basiliscus, and is now in the service of the empire, and is called upon by Zeno to arm in its defence. Theoderic replies by an embassy that the emperor and senate must first engage to make no peace with the son of Triarius. This is conceded; and it is agreed that Theoderic shall move his army from its station at Marcianapolis, and that at the passes of Mount Hæmus the general of Thrace shall meet him with the forces of the empire; that after Hæmus shall have been surmounted, another force of Romans shall join him at Hadrianople. But when the Goths arrived at these positions they met with no forces of the empire either at the passes of Hæmus or at Hadrianople. At this juncture the son of Triarius in a personal interview with the son of Theodemir charged him with folly, and called him an inexperienced boy not to perceive that Zeno desired to arm them against each other, that, without any effort of his own, the Goths might be weakened and destroyed by mutual contests. After these representations, the two Theoderici make peace with one another. And Zeno on this account, removing the son of Theodemir from his command, appoints the son of Triarius general of the empire in his stead. Perhaps in the beginning of 479.

Theodulus a presbyter of Coele-Syria flourished. He died in the last year of the reign of Zeno.

479 1232 Fl. Zeno Aug. III. Zenonis 6 from Feb. 9.

Marcian was the son of the emperor Anthemius, and had married Leontias the sister of Ariadne. In 479 he revolted, assisted by his brothers Romulus and Procopius. But Zeno by the aid of Illus prevailed against Marcian, who is surprised and captured. He is ordained a presbyter, and confined in a castle in Cappadocia. Procopius escaped to Theoderic the son of Triarius, who refused to give him up, alleging that it was not the practice of the Goths to betray suppliants. Upon the revolt of Marcian, the son of Triarius, now in the service of the empire, advanced to Constantinople with his army to the aid of Zeno. This revolt preceded the death of Nepos which was in 480.

Theoderic son of Theodemir, who had been dismissed by Zeno, commences hostilities against the empire in 479. He is opposed by Sabinianus the master general of the cavalry and infantry. Malchus describes Stobi taken by Theoderic, Thessalonica besieged, the march of Theoderic to Heraclea, the acquisition of Epidamnus by a stratagem. Meanwhile Adamantius arrives at Edessa where Sabinianus then lay, and

	brings him his commission as general. Adamantius holds a conference with Theoderic, who desires to winter in Epirus, the winter of $4\frac{7}{8}$ $\frac{9}{8}$. Sabinianus gains an advantage, and the negotiation is broken off by Zeno. It appears that the Goths in Thrace are at this time hostile to Zeno, and that Nepos is still living. Eustathius of Syria described the revolt of Marcian. The history of Eustathius ended at the 12th of Anastasius inclusive, at the beginning of 503.

481	1234 [Ol. 315] Placidus. Zenonis 8 from Feb. 9. Theoderic son of Triarius marched within 4 miles of Constantinople, but returned without inflicting any damage. On his way to Illyricum he is accidentally wounded by a spear against which he is impelled by his horse, and dies of the wound. The son of Triarius thus approached Constantinople with his army, first in a hostile manner in 478; secondly as an ally in 479, at the time of the revolt of Marcian; thirdly as an enemy in 481. After his second approach he retired to Thrace; after his third he was marching to Illyricum, when he received the wound of which he died. By this accident the sole dominion over the Ostrogoths passes to the young Theoderic son of Theodemir, of the royal race of the Amali. Odoacer in 481 entering Dalmatia overthrows and puts to death Odiva or Ovida the murderer of Nepos. Sabinianus died in 481, before he could render any effectual service to the empire.

Agathias computed 78y 4m from the death of Sapor II at the close of 379 to the accession of Firoze. These numbers will place the accession of Firoze at the beginning of 458. We may assume that his 24 years were nearly completed, which will bring his death to the beginning of 482, and not later. Palasch reigns 4 years. But Cabades did not begin to reign till the autumn of 486; an in-

The Goths are victorious in the battle 28 Aug. 489, and Odoacer retires to Verona. Theoderic pursues, and in a second battle in the plain of Verona 27 Sept. Theoderic is again victorious. Odoacer took refuge in Ravenna 31 Sept. 489. Milan is occupied by Theoderic, and the greater part of the army of Odoacer surrenders, together with Tufa, whom Odoacer had appointed Ap. 1 489 his master general of the forces. Tufa, now in the service of Theoderic, is sent to besiege Ravenna, but Odoacer, issuing from that city, gains an advantage over Tufa.
490	1243 Longinus II et Faustus. Zenonis 17 from Feb. 9. Odoacer had taken post at Cremona, from whence he marches towards Milan to encounter the Visigoths. Theoderic had now been reinforced by auxiliaries from his brethren the Ostrogoths of Gaul; and a third battle is fought 11 Aug. 490 at the river Addua, in which many fall on both sides, among others Pierius count of the domestics. But the Goths gained a third victory, and Odoacer flies to Ravenna. Theoderic pursued him, crossed the Po, and encamped 3 miles from Ravenna, where he held Odoacer besieged for 3 years. Theoderic now despatched Faustus as his ambassador to Zeno to announce his success, and to solicit the royal ornaments from Zeno.

The cruelties of Zeno in 490 in the matter of Pelagius and Arcadius are related by the Paschal Chronicle, by Malalas, Theophanes, and Marcellinus.

The death of Theodulus (see 478) was within the reign of Zeno, and therefore before 9 Ap. 491.

491 1244 Olybrius. Anastasii 1 from Ap. 11.

Zeno dies 9 April 491. He had reigned from his elevation 9 Feb. 474 17y 2^m. After his death his brother Longinus, aided by the Isaurians in Constantinople, and by another Longinus, excited a sedition; but, by the influence of the empress Ariadne, Anastasius whose father was a native of Dyrrachium, whose brother was of the Arian creed, and who filled himself at this time the post of Silentiarian, is raised to the empire and marries Ariadne. Anastasius was inaugurated 11 April 491, two days after the death of his predecessor.

In the third campaign in Italy in 491 Odoacer attacked the camp of Theoderic by a sally in the night with the Heruli. After an obstinate contest the Heruli were repulsed, Libilla Odoacer's master general of the forces was slain, and Odoacer driven back into Ravenna on the 10th or 15th of July. On the 22nd of August Theoderic is at Ticinum.

Joannes Laurentius of Lydia is born in 491. See 511.

Malchus continued his history to this time. It began with Constantine and ended with the accession of Anastasius. The Byzantica read and described by Photius contained only 8 years A. D. 473—480, and probably was not a distinct work, but formed a part of the larger history.

Eustathius in his history quoted by Evagrius treats of this epoch. He gives five periods, ending with the elevation of Anastasius.

1. "From Diocletian 207 years." This period is exact.

2. "From Augustus 532 years." This period gives 532—490=42=Sept. B. C. 43 for the commencement of Augustus.

3. "From the reign of Alexander 832." 832—490=342=Sept. 343. The true interval from the beginning of Alexander's reign in Asia in the autumn of B. C. 331 was 820y 7^m.

4. "U. C. (1052) 1252." 1252—490=762=Sept. B. C. 763. The true period would be expressed by 1242y 7^m.

5. "From the fall of Troy 1686 years." 1686—490=1196=Sept. B. C. 1197. The author probably gave 1676 years.

Theophanes marks the accession of Anastasius by these

	characters. "From Adam according to the Roman computation 5999, according to the Alexandrian 5983 years, from Diocletian 207, from the Nativity 483, and in the 14th Indiction." The Indiction and the year of Diocletian are accurate. The 207th year, and the 14th Indiction both commenced in Sept. 490, and were current in April following. But A. M. 5983 A. D. 483 fell upon the sixth Indiction, and Theophanes has committed a prochronism of 8 years. See 284. The actual period from the elevation of Diocletian 17 Sept. 284 to the elevation of Anastasius 11 April 491 was 206y 6m 26d, and the years assigned to the successive reigns by Theophanes (given in F. Rom. Vol. I p. 707) are nearly exact.
492	1245 Fl. Anastasius Aug. et Rufus. Anastasii 2 from Ap. 11. The emperor dismisses the Isaurians from Constantinople; and these people, excited by Longinus the master of the offices, an Isaurian by birth, and by Cyrus bishop of Apamea, also an Isaurian, rebel and take up arms against Anastasius. He sends against them Joannes Scythia and Joannes Cyrtus, with Diogenianus and other eminent commanders. The Isaurian army is defeated at Cotyæum in Phrygia, in 492, but the war is continued for 6 years. In Italy Theoderic 29 Aug. 492 returned to his camp before Ravenna, where Odoacer is still blockaded, who in vain harasses the enemy by frequent sallies, for Theoderic is now master of all Italy. Nicolaus the sophist reached the reign of Anastasius. Odoacer had held out 3 years in Ravenna, while his garrison was daily wasting by war or famine. He was slain almost 17 years after he had deposed Augustus in August 476. He was first overthrown by Theoderic in 489, when he had completed the 13th year of his reign. Theoderic now assumes the royal habit as king of Italy. In the east in 493 Constantinople is disturbed by popular

But being attacked by Joannes Cyrtus, while Diogenianus falls upon their rear, the Isaurians are routed with great slaughter, and Conon the bishop is mortally wounded in the battle. The two parties combat each other in the midst of the city, and many presbyters and clergy, and numbers of Roman citizens are slain. Both the competitors proceed to Ravenna and appeal to Theoderic, who decides in favour of Symmachus, a Sardinian by birth, the son of Fortunatus. Symmachus held the episcopate 15^y 7^m 27^d, which commenced 22 Nov. 498, and terminated 18 July 514. The 4 days preceding his election Nov. 18—21 were exclusive of the two extremes.

Brucker (who is followed by Gibbon) supposes that the preceptor of Damascius visited Persia in the reign of Chosroes. But the companion of Damascius in Persia was Isidorus of Gaza, who was still living in 533. His preceptor was of Alexandria, and was already dead before 526. Chosroes succeeded, by the combined testimony of Malalas and Procopius, in September of the 5th year of Justinian,—September 531; from whence $41 + 4 = 45$ years will carry back the accession of Cabades to the autumn of 486. To these were added Justin the future emperor, Patriciolus with his son Vitalianus, Pharesmanes the Colchian, Godidiscus and Sbesas, the Goths. 507 1260 Fl. Anastasius Aug. III et Venantius. Anastasii 17 from Ap. 11.

A sedition at Constantinople in 507 is suppressed by military force. Juliana the daughter of Olybrius and Placidia was married to Areobindus; and the people in the circus pronounced the name of Areobindus, who withdrew from the city to avoid the invidious honour which they designed for him. Anastasius at length appeased the populace by a conciliatory harangue.

Anastasius in 507 builds the wall named the Anastasian wall, at the distance of 40 miles from Constantinople, two days' journey in length (50 miles according to Suidas, 420 stadia according to Evagrius), extending from the Euxine to the Propontis, and rendering the space within secure from the barbarians.

Anastasius also fortifies in 507 Daras, a strong post in Mesopotamia, which he named Anastasiopolis.

Clovis engages in battle with Alaric king of the Visigoths, 10 miles from Poitiers. The Goths were defeated, and Alaric was slain. His son Amalaric then in minority was conveyed into Spain. The 22nd year of Alaric was current 11 Sept. 506. His first year was therefore current in September 485, when he succeeded Euric, and he fell in his 23rd year. The Ostrogoths from Italy were moving to his aid, but were too late to assist him.

Malalas marks the times of some seditions at Antioch in the reign of Anastasius. A tumult of the green faction was put down in the circus at Antioch by Constantius in the 543rd year of the city, which began in Autumn 494. He records a tumult between the green and blue factions at Antioch in the third consulship of Anastasius, and soon afterwards another sedition at the time of the Olympia at Daphne; probably at the Olympia of July 508. On this occasion Procopius count of the east was compelled to fly; Menas was slain, and the green faction prevailed. Anastasius sent Irenæus count of the east, who quelled the sedition. Irenæus was still in that office in September 518. See 519.

508 1261 Celer et Venantius. Anastasii 18 from Ap. 11.

The counts Romanus and Rusticus with 100 ships of war, and as many smaller vessels carrying 8000 soldiers, ravage the coasts of Italy, and proceeding as far as Tarentum return to Constantinople.

Theoderic in 508 sent an army under Hibba against the Franks, to avenge the death of Alaric. The Franks were routed with the loss of 30,000 men. The treasures contained in the city of Carcassone were removed to Ravenna; and, although Clovis by his victory had acquired the greater part of the dominions of the Visigoths in Gaul, yet Theoderic still retained, and held for his grand-son Amalaric Narbonne and the country from the Pyrenees to the Rhone, and Arelate to the east of that river.

After the death of Geisaleicus, the illegitimate son of Alaric, in 511, Theoderic took possession of the territories of the Visigoths in Spain, which he held and administered by his lieutenant Thiodes. After the death of Theoderic Amalaric reigns over these territories for 5 years. When he was slain in 531, Thiodes again governed the Visigoths of Spain. He still governed Spain at the time of the Vandalic war in 535, and of the Gothic war in Italy in 540: Thiodes was slain in 548.

Cassiodorus in the name of Theoderic writes to Anastasius. He sets forth the advantages of peace between the two empires. This letter may be referred to the war between Anastasius and Theoderic which lasted A. D. 505—508. He also addresses a letter to "all the Goths," appointing them to be ready for the expedition into Gaul 24 June 508.

Anastasius in 508 compelled Flavianus bishop of Antioch to subscribe the Henoticon of Zeno. See F. Rom. Vol. I p. 725. The dissensions of the churches in the beginning of the reign of Anastasius are marked by Evagrius. "The Council of Chalcedon in these times was neither openly accepted, nor wholly rejected. Each of the bishops followed his own opinion. Some boldly defended its dogmas; others not only did not receive the council, but condemned both the council and the epistle of Leo of Rome. Others adhered to the Henoticon of Zeno. So that all the churches were divided into factions, and the bishops would not hold communion with each other. Hence arose many divisions in the east, and in the west, and in Africa. For neither would the bishops of the east agree with those of the west or of Africa, nor these again with those of the east. But what was still more absurd, the bishops of the east would not agree among themselves, nor would the European bishops hold communion with one another; nor could the African bishops mutually agree together; much less could any of these agree with foreign bishops, who lay beyond the limits of their own territories."

511	1264 Secundinus et Felix. Anastasii 21 from Ap. 11. Geisaleicus the illegitimate son of Alaric, after the death of his father in 507, occupied Narbonne and the Spanish dominions of the Visigoths. Narbonne being taken by the Burgundians, he fled to Barcino in Spain, where he was deposed by Theoderic. He then went to Africa to solicit aid from the Vandals. This being refused, he returned from Africa and lay for a year concealed in Aquitania, a province now in the possession of Clovis. From Aquitania he returned to Spain, and engaged in battle against Ebba the general of Theoderic, 12 miles from Barcino. He was defeated and escaped into Gaul, where he was slain beyond the river Druentia. All these adventures happened within the space of 4 years, and in 511 Theoderic occupied the dominions of the Visigoths in Spain and administered them for 15 years till his death in 526, when he left them to his grandson, as already related at 508. From the provisions contained in the letter apud Cassiod. Var. V. 39 addressed to Ampelius and Severius, it seems that the authority of Theoderic extended over the whole of Spain: per universam Hispaniam. Clovis died after a reign of 30 years at the age of 45 in the end of November 511, in the 5th year after the death of Alaric. If Clovis was 45 in November 511, he was born in 466. His father's children recovered his position in Gaul in the time of Ægidius, within 460—463; and Clovis was born after that period. Theoderic himself had married Audeflada the sister of Clovis, before the year 497; and Amalasuentha was the issue of that marriage. Athalaric, who succeeded his grandfather in Italy in September 526, was the son of Eutharic and Amalasuentha. Macedonius, who was living in exile at Euchaita, fled in 515 at the approach of the Huns to Gangra. 518	1271 Magnus. Justin 1 from July 9. Anastasius dies at the age of more than 80 years in July 518. Justin began to reign July 9. If the death of Anastasius and the accession of his successor were on the same day, Anastasius reigned 27y 2^m 29^d from 11 Ap. 491 to 9 July 518. 519 1272 Fl. Anicius Justinus Aug. Eutharicus Cillica. Justini 2 from July 9.

Theoderic in the consulship of his son-in-law Eutharicus triumphed at Rome and at Ravenna. Eutharicus died before Theoderic, that is, before August 526.

The Chronicon of Cassiodorus ends with these consuls. Having reckoned after Eusebius the periods from the Creation to the Flood, from the Flood to Ninus, from Ninus to Latinus, from Latinus to Romulus, he concludes "From Romulus to the first consuls 240 years; from the first consuls to the year of Eutharicus 1031 years; and the total amount of years to the consulship of Eutharicus is 5721." This last rightly expresses the sum of all his numbers, and gives $5721 - 518 =$ B. C. 5203 for the Creation, which is nearly the date of Eusebius. See F. H. I p. 291.

As Severus had not ceased to anathematise the council of Chalcedon, Justin, at the suggestion of Irenæus, at this time governor of the East, or, as some say, of Vitalianus, orders his tongue to be cut out. Severus was condemned by the synod of July 518, and deposed in September of 518: September of the first year of Justin. Paulus was appointed his successor, but Paulus was not chosen till May 519. See two letters to Hormisdas of Rome given in F. Rom. Vol. I p. 739.

520 1273 Vitalianus et Rusticus. Justini 3 from July 9.

Justin the better to deceive Vitalianus created him consul in 520. Vitalianus is slain in the palace in the beginning of his consulship with his followers Celerianus and Paulus.

Justin puts an end to the Olympic games of Antioch. Malalas reckons 77 alytarchæ, who presided over the games, from Afranius who was the first, in 212. The 78th Olympia, which were celebrated in Indict. 13 Ol. 324. 4 in July A. D. 520 (when the 568th year of Antioch was current) appear to have been the last; and from and after the 14th indiction (commencing 1 Sept. 520) they were to cease.

Tumults excited by the blue faction of the circus prevailed at Antioch and in other cities of the east from 519 to 524. Marked by Malalas in Ind. 1 (commencing 1 Sept. 522) when Theodotus was præfect of CP. who fled to Jerusalem in Indict. 3 (commencing 1 Sept. 524), and Theodorus was appointed præfect of CP. in his stead. Ephraimius of Amida was appointed præfect of Antioch, and repressed the blue faction in the east.

Anazarbus in the second Cilicia is overthrown by an earthquake. Edessa is overwhelmed by the waters of the Scirtus.

The earthquake at Antioch began in October 525, the city was overthrown in May 526.

Symmachus, who was the chief of the Roman senate and whose daughter had been married to Boëthius, is summoned from Rome to Ravenna in 525. Theoderic, fearing that Symmachus might attempt to revenge the death of his son-in-law Boëthius, who had been unjustly put to death in 524, upon some pretended charge caused him to be slain.

Damascius composes the life of Isidorus in the reign of Theoderic. Isidorus therefore died and this life was written at least before September 526. Damascius of Damascus was taught rhetoric 3 years by Theon, and taught rhetoric himself 9 years. He studied geometry and arithmetic under Marinus at Athens; and philosophy under Zenodotus at Athens, and under Ammonius son of Hermeius at Alexandria.

(Joannes Philoponus was born about A. D. 525. See 617, 640, and Vol. 2 p. 164. 177.)

Joannes of Rome proceeds to Constantinople in 525, with Ecclesius of Ravenna and four other bishops, and with the senators Theodorus, Importunus, and Agapetus, and Agapetus the patrician. They are sent by Theoderic to obtain from Justin for the Arians of the eastern empire the use of their own churches, and permission to live in peace. But Joannes and Justin refuse any concessions to the Arians.

1279 Fl. Anicius Olybrius. Justini 9 from July 9.

Antioch is overthrown by the earthquake 29 May 526. Euphrasius the bishop perished in this calamity. The fifth, according to Malalas, which Antioch had suffered. According to Procopius, 300,000 persons were destroyed in this earthquake, or 250,000, according to Malalas.

Theoderic died on Sunday Aug. 30 A. D. 526, having appointed his grandson Athalaric, then about 8 years old, his successor. Theoderic had reigned, from his entrance into Ravenna 5 March 493, 33^y 5^m 26^d, and 37 years from 489, when he entered Italy. Theoderic at his death had lived 72 years, for he was born in 454.

Joannes rhetor closes his history at this period. Joannes has mentioned facts at Antioch in the reign of Theodosius II, the earthquake at Antioch in 458, the death of Stephanus bishop of Antioch in 488. He described Mammianus of Antioch in the time of Zeno.

Cassiodorus at the death of Theoderic is magister.

Procopius is in Armenia with Belisarius. This campaign against the Persians, in which Belisarius, now in early youth, had a command, was between 524 and 527, and may be referred to 526. Procopius was the companion of Belisarius in almost all his wars. He was of Cæsarea in Palestine. Belisarius himself was an Illyrian. Joannes of Rome, on his return from Constantinople in 526, is cast into prison by Theoderic at Ravenna, and dies at Ravenna 25 May 526; on the 98th day before the death of Theoderic himself. The see remained vacant 48 days, May 25—July 11 (for the dies interpontificiales sometimes excluded the two extremes, and sometimes included one or both of them), and Felix a Samnite, son of Castorius, is elected bishop 12 July 526. The body of Joannes was removed from Ravenna to Rome, and interred there, with much respect from the people, June 23. Euphrasius, who was killed in the earthquake at Antioch 29 May 526, succeeded to the episcopate upon the abdication of Paul, in 521. Euphrasius was hostile to the Council of Chalcedon.

527	1280 Mavortius. Justinian, who was born at Bederiana, a place in Illyricum, and was the son of Vigilantia the sister of Justin, is elevated to the empire 1 April 527. Agapetus compliments both emperors, and refers to the empress Theodora. Ephraimius was count of the East at the time of the earthquake at Antioch 29 May 526, and was appointed to the episcopate vacant by the death of Euphrasius. The two emperors nominate Zacharias to be count of the East in his stead. Ephraimius held the episcopate 18 years. As he was appointed after the elevation of Justinian, his appointment is brought to April 527, eleven months after the death of his predecessor, and his 18 years are completed in 545.
528	1281 Fl. Anicius Justinianus Aug. II. Justiniani 2 from Ap. 1. The Lazi apply for aid against the Persians. Three generals are sent, who are defeated and recalled. Petrus is sent, who routs the enemy. Procopius at this period does not name the Lazi, but gives the following facts: "The emperor commanded Belisarius to build a fortress on the left of the road leading to Nisibis. The Persians threatened to obstruct the work, and the emperor sent an army under Kutzes and Buzes two brothers, Thracians. A sharp combat ensued, and the Persians were victorious." He then passes to the campaign of 530. Malalas has this account: "The Persians in 528 invaded Mesopotamia with 30,000 men under Xerxes the king's son (for Firoze the elder son was in Lazice and

Persamenia with a large force). The imperial generals Kutzis, Sebastianus, Proclianus, Basilius went forth against Xerxes. Belisarius was also with them. The Persians were victorious, and Belisarius escaped by flight."

Ztittas in 528, who had married the sister of the empress Theodora, is appointed to command in Armenia.

Antioch is visited with another earthquake, the sixth calamity which had befallen this city, 29 Nov. 528, twenty months after the earthquake of 526.

Malalas reckons several periods down to the second consulship of Justinian inclusive, 31 Dec. 528. "From Augustus 559 years," giving, B. C. 31 for the first year of Augustus. "From Adam 6497, according to Clemens, Theophilus, and Timotheus the chronographers, but 6432 according to Eusebius." The first number places Adam at B. C. 5969, the second, at B. C. 5904. The Eusebian Chronology however places Adam at B. C. 5201. Malalas then computes "from the foundation of Rome 1280 years." The Varronian year 1280 was completed in Ap. 20, of this consulship. "From the foundation of CP. to the end of Indict. 7 199 years." The 199th year was completed 10 May 528, in the ninth month of that indiction.

Malalas adds that at this epoch A. D. 528 "Cabades son of Firoze reigned in Persia, Atalaric the descendant of Valerius at Rome, Gilderic the descendant of Genseric in Africa, Andas at Auxum, and Zamanazus over the Iberes." Zamanazus king of the Iberes visited CP. with his people and became an ally in the 8th of Justinian.

529 1282 [Ol. 327] Decius. Justiniani 3 from Ap. 1.

These events are recorded in 529. Alamundarus the Saracen entered Syria March 21, and laid waste that province as far as the borders of Antioch. In April the emperor sends an army and appoints Belisarius to succeed Hypatius in the command. May 12 Hermogenes entered Antioch on his way to Persia as ambassador to treat for peace. In June the Samaritans and Jews revolted, and proclaimed one Julianus emperor. Julianus is slain by Theodorus. It is said that 20,000 Samaritans fell in this war. After this, Theodorus was dismissed, and Irenæus appointed his successor in 530. Hermogenes has an interview with Cabades in July 529, but returns without obtaining the peace.

Edicts of Justinian against philosophy and against pagans and heretics are issued in 529.

The Code of Justinian is published by an edict dated 7 April 529.

530 1283 Postumus Lampadius et Orestes. Justiniani 4 from Ap. 1.

	Belisarius having the command is joined by Hermogenes and proceeds with a great army to Daras. The Persians advance with 70,000 men, are defeated in June 530, and escape to Nisibis. After the battle and the victory Rufinus has a conference with Cabades in August 530. Rufinus and Hermogenes then returned to CP. and the winter ended, and the 4th year of Justinian, that is, March 531. Mundus had attached himself to Theoderic king of Italy (see 505). Thence passing eastwards, he offered himself to Justinian, who made him general of Illyricum in 529, and Mundus in 530 defeated the Huns and Bulgarians and secured the tranquillity of Thrace. Jornandes is placed by Trithemius at 530. His two works were published in 551, 552. Jornandes was at first a notary, and afterwards bishop of Ravenna. Felix of Rome, who had been appointed 12 July 526, dies 18 Sept. 530 after an episcopate of 4y 2m 7d. An interval of three days followed, Sept. 18—20, and Bonifacius is ordained bishop of Rome 21 Sept. 530.
531	1284 Post consulatum Lampadii et Orestis. Justiniani 5 from Ap. 1. The Persians in the beginning of spring 531 advance into Commagenē. They are aided by Alamundarus the Saracen, who had now harassed the empire 50 years. Belisarius is forced into a battle Ap. 19, the day before Easter Sunday, and is defeated. Justinian concludes a league with the Abyssinians and Homerites. The Homerites are to invade the Persian territory. Meanwhile Hermogenes negotiates in vain with Cabades. Belisarius is recalled to conduct the Vandalic war, and Cabades dies at the end of this campaign 13 Sept. 531. The elder brother is set aside, and Chosroes reigns by the will of Cabades. Chosroes or Khoosroo began to reign in September 531. Gelimer, a descendant of Genseric, impatient of delay, deposes Ilderic and reigns in Africa in June 531. Ilderic had reigned from the death of Trasamund 8 years and 8 days. After the edict against the philosophers, Damascius of Damascus, Simplicius of Cilicia, Eulamius the Phrygian, Priscian of Lydia, Hermeias and Diogenes Phœnicians, and Isidorus of Gaza, withdrew to Persia. But being disappointed in their expectations they returned quickly after a short stay in Persia. They departed from Persia at the time of a negotiation. The treaties with Chosroes were in 533, 545, 551, 557. But their return cannot be placed at 545 at the distance of 15 years from the edict of Justinian. They might arrive at the court of Chosroes in the beginning of 532, and depart in the beginning of 533.

Hypatius, Pompeius, and Probus, nephews of the emperor Anastasius (see 518), on the 13th Jan. 532 attempt to elevate Hypatius to the empire. For 5 days the city is exposed to rapine and fire. On the 5th day Hypatius and Pompeius assault the palace, but were repulsed. Justinian was defended by Belisarius and Mundo and Narses; and more than 30,000 persons were slain in the circus. On the 6th day, Jan. 19, Hypatius and Pompeius were slain. At the time of the 3 months' peace with Persia the Huns passing through the Caspian gates penetrated into Armenia, Mesopotamia, and Cilicia. Dorotheus the governor of Armenia pursued them in their retreat and recovered most of their plunder. Hermogenes and Rufinus, the ambassadors of Justinian, conclude a treaty of peace with Chosroes in 532, 31 years after the war of 502, which was begun by Anastasius. Justinian ratifies this treaty in the beginning of 533. Tribonian the lawyer is described at this time by Procopius, and in the edict of Justinian in 533. Anthemius of Tralles and Isidorus of Miletus flourished. They were employed by Justinian in rebuilding the church of St. Sophia, which had been burnt in the sedition of 532. Metrodorus the brother of Anthemius was an eminent grammarian. Their three brothers were also distinguished. Olympius a lawyer, Dioscorus and Alexander physicians. Anthemius in December 557 had long been dead. Zeno an orator was contemporary with Anthemius. The funeral of Bonifacius of Rome, who presided 2y and 26 days, was on 17 Oct. 532. After his death an interval followed of 76 days Oct. 17—Dec. 31; and Joannes a Roman, son of Projectus, is ordained bishop of Rome 1 Jan. 533, who held the episcopate 2y 4^m 26^d, and was buried 27 May 535.

Justinian in an edict dated 16 Dec. 533, which is given in F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 758, refers to the peace with Persia, the conquest of Africa, and the compilation of the Code of Laws.

Damascius, Simplicius, and their companions return from Persia. See 531.

(Cassiodori Historia Gothica libris XII. Written before 533. But, as the history was brought down to Athalaric, it was perhaps not completed till after 525. Jornandes in 552 composed an abridgment of this history.)

534 1287 Fl. Anicius Justinianus Aug. IV Fl. Theodorus Paulinus junior. Justiniani 8 from Ap. 1.

Gelimer about 2 years and 9 months after he had deposed Ilderic, surrenders in 3 months to Belisarius, the winter of the 7th year of Justinian being ended. Belisarius conducts Gelimer a prisoner to Constantinople, and is honoured with a triumph. The Vandals had held Carthage 95 years. It was taken by Genseric in October 439, from whence the 95th year commenced in October 533. War is carried on in Africa with the Moors in the summer of 534.

Athalaric the grandson of Theoderic dies of sickness in the 8th year of his reign, and his mother Amalasuentha soon after is assassinated by Theodahadus. The 8th year of Athalaric began 1 Sept. 533. His death may be placed in the spring of 534, and the death of Amalasuentha a few months afterwards in the same year.

Theoderic son of Clovis died in the 23rd year of his reign. The 23rd year from the death of Clovis commenced in November 533, and the death of Theoderic may be placed in the beginning of 534. He was succeeded by his son Theudebert.

In 534 according to Marius the three kings of the Franci, Childebert, Chlothare, and Theudebert invaded Burgundia, expelled Gudomar, and divided his territories among them.

Justinian publishes an edict dated 16 Nov. 534, given in F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 762, on a supplement to the Code.

The Chronicle of Marcellinus ends at 534. See 379.

Cassiodorus is appointed prætorian præfect in the 12th indiction A. D. 534. He held this office at least till 538. Var. lib. XI. XII contain the letters which he wrote in his office of prætorian præfect in the names of Athalaric, Amalasuentha, Theodahadus, and Witiges. Cassiod. Var. X. 1 Justiniano imp. Amalasuentha regina. Fæsulæ, pressed by famine, surrenders to Belisarius; and Auximum, which he had besieged in the beginning of this 5th campaign also surrendered in the 7th month, about October 539. During that siege the Franks were in Italy, and they had retired before Auximum surrendered. Belisarius, after the capture of Auximum, collecting all his forces for the siege of Ravenna approached that city. At that juncture another expedition of the Franks in aid of the Goths was in preparation. Eraric makes himself king, and is slain in 5 months; and Totilas otherwise called Baduila (whence in Jornandes regn. p. 718 for Totila cum Baduila we must read Totila qui Baduila) is appointed king of the Goths. Totilas therefore began to reign in the autumn of 541. The actual space between the capture of Witiges and the reign of Totilas might be 20 months. Chosroes in this campaign led his army into Colchis. Belisarius is in Mesopotamia at the summer solstice, and after the campaign being called to Constantinople by Justinian winters there. The fourth synod of Aurelia is held between January and September 541.
542	1295 Post consulatum Basilii. Justiniani 16 from Ap. 1. In the beginning of 542 the Roman leaders assemble at Ravenna. They besiege Verona. Artabazes the Persian, who had been captured by Belisarius at Sisaurium in the summer of 541 is present at the siege. Totilas is victorious in two battles, and the winter ends and the seventh year of the war, March 542. In the campaign of the 8th year Totilas occupies Cæsena, Petra, and Beneventum, and the provinces of Bruttia, Lucania, Apulia, Calabria : and besieges Naples before the winter.

He therefore wrote in 593. Evagrius ended his history in the 12th year of Mauricius commencing Aug. 593. He wrote after the history of Joannes Epiphaniensis had been published, and that history described the year 592. These notices will bring the work of Evagrius to the close of 543. He wrote at Antioch.

Cyrus and Sergius sons of Bacchus the brother of Solomon had been appointed to command the cities of Africa. Cyrus governed the Libyan Pentapolis. 544	1297 Post cons. Basilii III. Justiniani 18 from Ap. 1. Justinian when the 9th year of the Gothic war closed, in March 544, was in great perplexity. He determined to send Belisarius again into Italy. Belisarius had already been recalled from the Persian war for this purpose at the end of 542. This interval of a year of inaction justifies the account which has been transmitted to us that he was detained at Constantinople by factions and court intrigues against him. He is at length sent without supplies, and with insufficient forces. He could only collect 4000 men. He sends succours to Dryus, proceeds to Pola, and enters Ravenna. Meanwhile Totilas takes Tibur.

	Chosroes in a fourth expedition enters Mesopotamia in 544, but retires from the siege of Edessa. The war in Africa continues. Procopius describes the recovery of Adrumetum by Paulus, the success of Stotzas and the Moors, the deaths of Joannes and Stotzas, both slain in action. These events happened in 544, after the death of Solomon in 543, and before the rise of Gontharis in 545.

Totilas having left the greater part of his forces near Rome (from which he had withdrawn all the inhabitants) marches with the rest of the army against Joannes and the Lucanians, and from thence to Ravenna. Belisarius in his absence restores the fortifications of Rome in 25 days. Totilas marches against him: three battles are fought under the walls of Rome, and Totilas being repulsed retires to Tibur. Belisarius completed the fortifications, and the winter ended and the 12th year of the war, which was the 20th year of Justinian, March 547.

In the 13th campaign Totilas marched against Joannes with an army ten times more numerous than the forces of Joannes, to whom Justinian sends reinforcements; among others Sergius the nephew of Solomon. Valerian conducts reinforcements at the winter solstice, promising to come over in the spring of 548.

In the winter of the 13th year of the war the Sclavonians make an irruption into Illyricum, and in that same winter Procopius records earthquakes, and an inundation of the Nile.

Vigilius after more than two years in Sicily arrives at CP. 5 Feb. 547. He promises the emperor to anathematise the three Chapters, and suspends Menas for four months. Menas in return suspended Vigilius: Niceph. H. E. XVII. 26. But at the desire of the empress Theodora Vigilius restores Menas on the 29th of June 547.

548 1301 Post cons. Basilii VII. Justiniani 22 from Ap. 1.

Belisarius proceeded to Crotona and Tarentum, and Totilas began the siege of Ruscia, when the winter ended and the 13th year.

In the 14th campaign in 548, the garrison of Ruscia agreed to surrender in the middle of the summer. Belisarius sailed to relieve it, the day for the surrender now approaching; but Totilas prevented his landing, and Ruscia surrendered.

Death of the empress Theodora 28 June 548. After her death Antonina arriving at Constantinople obtained from the emperor the recal of her husband; and Belisarius after five unprofitable years in Italy, 544—548, arrived at CP. at the close of 548. During his passage thither through Illyricum a plot was formed against Justinian.

Theudebert king of the Franci dies in 548. See the time of his death examined in F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 788.

Vigilii Judicatum. Vigilius who had suspended and condemned Menas in 547 for condemning the 3 Chapters, now in his Judicatum, issued at Easter 548, condemns them himself. See F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 481 p. For this document he "anathematizes Theodorus of Mopsuestia with all his impious writings; he anathematizes the impious letter which was ad-

550	1303 Post cons. Basilii IX. Justiniani 24 from Ap. 1. The emperor after much uncertainty appoints his cousin Germanus, a man of eminent qualities both for peace and war, to command in Italy. Germanus marries Matasuentha, the granddaughter of Theoderic and widow of Witiges. It was expected that her presence in the camp of Germanus would conciliate the Goths, and that they would respect the descendant of Theoderic. Germanus is sent after the surrender of Rhegium. He makes his preparations, and Diogenes, who held Centumcellæ expects Germanus, when the winter ends, and the 15th year of the war, March 550. In the 16th year of the war, which was the 24th of Justinian, Germanus assembled his forces at Sardica in Illyricum; and the Sclaveni who were in that province retired at his approach. But the expectations of Justinian were frustrated by the death of Germanus who died after a short illness at Sardica. After this event, Joannes and Justinian are appointed to the command; who advanced into Dalmatia, and proposed to winter at Salona, and proceed in the spring of 551 to Ravenna.

The Sclaveni, after the death of Germanus made another irruption, approached within little more than a day's march of CP., wintered in the empire, and retired with their booty in the spring of 551.

Totilas after the death of Germanus returned to winter in Italy, with the intention in the spring of repassing into Sicily.

In the east Chorianes a Persian led an expedition into Lazica in the 5th year after the truce. That 5th year being now completed in April 550, ambassadors are sent to treat;—Petrus of Thessalonica (see 534) to Chosroes, and Isdegunas to Justinian.

Bessas among the Lazi besieged Petra towards the close of 550.

A synod is held at Mopsuestia 23 May 17 June 550 by order of Justinian. They find that "the name of Theodorus does not appear in the list of bishops of Mopsuestia, but that the name of Cyrillus, who had not been bishop of that see, had been inserted. A younger Theodorus appears at the end of the list, who died 3 years ago."

Oath of Vigilius. He swears that he will endeavour to procure the condemnation of the Three Chapters. This oath—juramentum—is dated 15 Aug. 550.

551 1304 Post cons. Basilii X. Justiniani 25 from Ap. 1.

Joannes wintered at Salona. The Roman forces in Italy were inactive in expectation of his coming; and the winter ended and the 16th year of the Gothic war, March 551.

In the 17th year, being the 25th of the reign of Justinian, Narses was appointed to the command. His progress through Thrace was impeded by the Huns. Totilas restores the senate at Rome.

In Colchis Mermeroes on his march to relieve Petra, when winter was over, heard that Petra was taken; which therefore surrendered to Bessas in the beginning of 551. Mermeroes marches to Archæopolis, is repulsed, occupies the country, and prepares to build a fort, the winter setting in. Gubazes and the Lazi prepare to pass that winter in the mountains.

Isdegunas at Constantinople concludes another truce, 18 months after the former truce had expired. The whole period was to be 11y 6^m. The first truce therefore terminated in spring 550, the second began in autumn 551. Isdegunas, after the winter had passed, returns into Persia in 552.

The Lombards sent succours to Narses for the war against the Goths. These succours were with him in 552 in the battle with Totilas, and after the death of Totilas were dismissed. Paulus Diaconus gives the following account of the Lombards: They issued from Scandinavia led by two brothers about ten generations before the present period. In the time of their 5th king, Odoacer reigned in Italy, and after his victory over the Rugi (see 487) the Lombards occupied Rugiland. Their 7th king conquered the Heruli. After whom an usurper, Wacho, governed the Lombards, who is not numbered by Paulus among the kings. For his son Waltari is called the 8th king, who was in reality the ninth. Audoin the 9th king (properly the 10th) led the Lombards into Pannonia in 526 (see 568). Paulus relates a battle with the Gepidæ and a victory of the Lombards in the reign of Andoin, which was in the time of Justinian. Alboin, called the 10th king (though in reality the 11th) succeeded his father and made war upon the Gepidæ again. Then followed the preparations of Narses in the spring of 551 for his war with Totilas. From this narrative we learn that Wacho reigned while the Lombards were yet in Rugiland, that Audoin was king in 526, that the great war with the Gepidæ was in the reign of Alboin and preceded the expedition of Narses. We learn from the Chronicle of Sigebert that Audoin (whom Sigebert properly calls the 10th king) died and that the 11th king succeeded in 543. The war then with the Gepidæ in the reign of Audoin preceded that year. In the narrative of Paulus the Lombards dwelt in Rugiland 40 years current A. D. 487—526; but according to Sigebert, who assigns them 47 years in Rugiland, they entered that country in 479, eight years before the victory of Odoacer. Prosper places the first appearance of the Lombards at 379, and their first king at 389.

Jornandes de regnorum successione. Composed in the 44th year of Justinian, and after the death of Germanus. Totilas is still living and successful. Jornandes does not notice the appointment of Narses to the command in Italy. We may therefore assign this history to the close of the 24th year. Jornandes mentions the war between the Lombards and Gepidæ. That great victory obtained by the Lombards over the Gepidæ, which is placed by Procopius in the 25th year of Justinian, the summer of 551, is determined by Jornandes to the 24th year, confirming the time assigned by Paulus Diaconus; and we may refer that victory to the summer or the autumn of 550. Paulus mistakes the war of 550 for the final war in which the Gepidæ were destroyed. But their king Cunimund survived that period many years, and remained to the time of Justin II. The final war in which Cunimund was slain and the Gepidæ utterly destroyed was in 567, the year before the Lombards entered Italy.

Vigilius pronounces the deposition of Theodorus of Cæsarea in Cappadocia, (who contrived the condemnation of the Three Chapters; see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 479). He also suspends Menas of Constantinople. But this sentence, dated 14 Aug. 551, was not immediately published, but reserved for a fitting time. A letter from the Italian clergy, written in Italy at the close of 551, and addressed to deputies from the Franci, who were proceeding to CP., sets forth some facts concerning Vigilius: that he went unwillingly to CP. in 547; that he refused in 551 to concur in condemning the Three Chapters, because the Illyrian and Dalmatian and African bishops defended them; that in 552 he prohibited all persons from obeying the imperial edicts, in which the Three Chapters were condemned; that he took refuge after this at the altar, from which he had been dragged by the emperor's command in August 551.

552	1305 Post cons. Basilii XI. Narses sails from Salona with a great armament, arrives at Ravenna, and marches from thence. Totilas advances from Rome against him. The two armies meet in the Apennines; the Goths are overthrown, and Totilas is slain. Narses sent as trophies of his victory, the bloody vestments of Totilas to the emperor, who received them in August 552. Totilas had reigned from the autumn of 541, eleven years current; Teias is appointed king of the Goths in his stead. After this great success Narses besieged Rome, which was captured for the 5th time during this war. The city was taken by Belisarius in 536, by Totilas in 546, by Belisarius again in 547, by Totilas in 549, and lastly by Narses in 552. Chosroes after the return of Isdegunas from Constantinople sends reinforcements to Mermeroes in Colchis, who in this campaign effects nothing. Jornandes de Getarum sive Gothorum origine et rebus gestis. He refers to the anathema which he had drawn up against Theodorus of Cæsarea 14 Aug. 551, which still remained un-

553	1306 [Ol. 333] Post cons. Basilii XII. Justiniani 27 from Ap. 1. The armies of Narses and Teias are opposed to each other for two months. They then engage in battle near Nuceria, and Trias is slain. On the next day a second battle is fought, and the Goths agree to quit Italy, and the 18th year of the war ended March 553. At this point Procopius concludes. Narses was therefore posted in Campania, and the battle was fought two months afterwards in the beginning of March 553. Agathias continues the narrative. The war in Lazica is described by Agathias after Procopius. The Romans and Persians, a little before this, had made a truce, but war still continued in the country of the Lazi. The former operations Agathias omits, because they had been told by Procopius, who had brought down his narrative to the close of 552. Agathias proceeding from this point describes the acts of Mermeroes in 553. Joannes Lydus after 40y 4^m service applies himself to writing: this period did not commence before 512, and terminates in 552 or 553. Joannes is now 62 years of age. Agathias begins where Procopius ends his history. Procopius had described the 18th year of the Gothic war, and the 26th of Justinian. Agathias records the opening of the 27th year, and the acts of Narses from April 553. He describes the Franks to whom the Goths have recourse for succour: "The four sons of Clovis divided his kingdom into four parts. Not long after, Chlodomer engaging in war against the Burgundians, a valiant Gothic people, was slain in battle (in 524). After this, Theuderic died (in 534) leaving his kingdom to Theudebert, who conquered the Alamanni, and excited by embassies the Gepidæ and Lombards and other nations to join him against Justinian; alleging that it was not to be endured that the emperor should presume to call himself Francicus, Alamanicus, Gepædicus, Langobardicus. Upon the death of Theudebert (in 548), his son Theudebald, a minor, succeeded to the kingdom. About the time of the death of Teias, the child Theudebald and his great uncles Childebert and Chlothaire reigned over the Franks." The Goths apply to the Franks for aid, and Leutharis and Butilinus, Lombards in the service of Theudebald, agree to assist them against Narses with 75,000 men. Agathias relates that Narses besieged Aligernus

the brother of Teias in Cumæ, blockaded Cumæ (which had been besieged a year), occupied Florence and other towns of Tuscany, detached an army to engage the Franks who had now crossed the Po; that Lucca held out against Narses, and that his forces were defeated by the Franks near Parma; that after 3 months' siege he took Lucca. The winter was now come. Narses went to Ravenna, and Aligernus surrendered Cumæ. Narses repulses a body of Franks at Ravenna, and then winters at Rome. The winter of 553: and the first book of Agathias brings down the narrative to the winter of the 19th year of the war, and of this 27th year of Justinian's reign.

Joannes Epiphaniensis also continued Procopius. The countryman and kinsman of Evagrius, who records that Joannes carried down the history to A.D. 592.

The second Council of Constantinople, the 5th general Council, was held in 553. Eutychius of CP. presided. There were also present Apollinarius of Alexandria, Domnus of Antioch, Theodorus of Cæsarea in Cappadocia. Vigilius, who is at Chalcedon, absents himself. The first conference is 4 May 553; the 2nd, May 8; the 3rd, May 9; the 4th, May 12, when they anathematize Theodorus of Mopsuestia. In the 5th, on May 13, they consider the works of Theodoret. In the 6th, May 19, they examine the letters of Ibas, and anathematize Theodorus, Nestorius, and the letters of Ibas. The 7th is held May 26; the 8th, June 10.

The war in Italy is described by Agathias. With the beginning of spring 554 Narses is in the field. The Franks and Alamanni waste and plunder Italy as far as Lucania and the straits of Messina. When summer was come, Leutharis with his division of the forces on his return is repulsed in Picenum and loses his booty, and in Venetia is cut off by a pestilence. Meanwhile the Franks under Butilinus the other leader began to be wasted by disease, the autumn being now arrived. But when he reached Capua on his return, he had still 30,000 men to oppose to 18,000 Romans. The Franks however are utterly routed by Narses and their leader slain. Narses blockades 7000 Goths in Campsæ, which consumes the following winter; the winter of 554.

An earthquake in August 554 visited Constantinople, Nicomedia, Berytus, and many other cities, and the island of Cos.

The operations of Mermeroes in Lazica are described by Agathias. Mermeroes died in the autumn of 554. After his death Gubazes king of the Lazi complained to Justinian of the imperial generals, and Bessas was deprived of his command. But the Roman leaders Martinus, Rusticus, and Joannes assassinated Gubazes. The Roman army was shamefully routed, and winter followed. The winter of 554 the 28th of Justinian. The Lazi deliberated, and determined to remain faithful to the Romans, and to lay the facts before the emperor; who ordered Rusticus and Joannes into custody, and appointed Tzathes (then at Constantinople) king, at the desire of the Lazi themselves.

Theudebald the young king of the Franci died at the close of 554, towards the end of the 7th year of his reign. His dominions were occupied by his great uncle Chlothaire.

Agathias at the time of the earthquake of 554 was in the island of Cos, on his way from Alexandria to Constantinople.

Vigilii Constitutum adversus tria capitula. Dated 23 Feb. 554. He anathematizes the Three Chapters, names the epistle to Maris the Persian (which he affirms was not written by Ibas of Edessa), the works of Theodorus of Mopsuestia, and the passages from Theodoret. He retracts all that he may have formerly written in their defence. See Acta Concil. tom. 6 p. 308. 310.

To condemn the Three Chapters was to condemn the Council of Chalcedon, which had pronounced an approbation of Ibas and Theodoret. The Illyrian and Dalmatian and African bishops inflexibly defended the Three Chapters, and Vigilius refused to condemn what they had defended. He had yielded to Justinian in his judicatum in 548, and his oath or declaration in 550. In 551 he condemns the emperor's edicts; in 553 he refuses to be present at the Council, but finally in 554 through fear of the emperor he assents to all that is required, and condemns the Three Chapters.

Vigilius 13 Aug. 554 obtains permission from the emperor to return to Rome. He reached Sicily and died there 7 Jan. 555. His episcopate from 22 Nov. 537 was of 17y 1m 17d, of which only the first 7 years were passed in Italy. The see was vacant 3m 5d, Jan. 8—Ap. 12; and his successor Pelagius was appointed 13 Ap. 555.

In Italy in the beginning of spring 555 Narses gained possession of Campsæ.

Agathias passes to the history of the Persian wars, which he takes up at the point at which Procopius left them. Agathias, having brought his narrative of the war in Colchis to the winter which followed the death of Mermeroes, the winter of 554, proceeds to the campaign of 555. In the beginning of spring the armies were in motion. Tzathes with Soterichus had arrived from CP. and was declared king.

Soterichus and his company were slain by the Misimiani, a tribe subject to the Lazi. This tribe joined the Persians. Meanwhile the Persian general Nacoragan was in the field with 60,000 men and opposed to Martinus and Justin son of Germanus. He marched to besiege the city of Phasis, and the Romans to defend it; who had among their forces Huns and Moors, Tzani, Isauri, Lombards, and Heruli. The Persians were defeated; and as winter was approaching, the Persian general retired to winter in Iberia.

In Gaul Chlothaire encountered the Saxons in a great battle. Many fell on both sides, but Chlothaire was victorious. This expedition of Chlothaire may be referred to the spring of 555.

(Simplicii Comm. in Aristot. de Cælo. Written after Philoponus had been the author of voluminous works. And, as Philoponus was now not more than 30 years of age, that commentary may be placed at the earliest at 555.)

Pelagius a Roman, son of Joannes, succeeded Vigilius bishop of Rome 13 Ap. 555, presided 4y 10^m 18^d, and was buried 2 March 560. See F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 807. 813.

Liberatus in his breviarium causæ Nestorianorum mentions the death of Vigilius. From whence it appears that Liberatus composed after January 555. Apollinaris is bishop of Alexandria, and Theodosius the deposed bishop of Alexandria is still living in exile. He lived till 567.

Victor of Tununa in Africa, the author of the Chronicle, relates at 555 that most of the African bishops had yielded to the decrees of the 5th Council; but that he himself, adhering to his defence of the three chapters, had suffered imprisonment and stripes on that account; that he had been banished twice to an island on the coast of Mauretania; and that in 555 he is sent into a third exile, with Theodorus another African bishop, to Alexandria, and there is thrust into prison.

In Colchis the murderers of Gubazes are brought to a solemn trial and condemned, while the army is in winter quarters. The winter of the 29th of Justinian. Spring beginning, in 556, new operations follow. Summer now arriving, the Romans enter the country of the Apsilii. The Persians advance upon them from Iberia, and on the approach of winter retire into Iberia again.

In Gaul in 556 Chlothaire had renewed war with the Saxons, of whom he slew the greater part; and his son Chramnus rebelled against him, and collecting an army wasted his dominions. The Franks in 556 invaded Thuringia and made a successful inroad into Italy.

557	1310 [Ol. 334] Post cons. Basilii XVI. Justiniani 31 from Ap. 1. The operations in Colchis of the winter of 557 (when the Persians had withdrawn into Iberia) and of the following campaign in spring and summer 557, are told by Agathias. He relates that the Timiani were cut off by the Romans in a night attack; that Joannes granted them peace; that the emperor superseded Martinus, and appointed Justin general autocrator in his stead; and that Chosroes recalled Nacoragan for his inaction and put him to death. A truce is agreed upon between Chosroes and Justinian. A Persian ambassador was at Constantinople, and negotiations were begun, in May 556. But it is proved by Agathias that three winters intervened between the death of Mermeroes and the death of Nacoragan; and that the death of Nacoragan preceded the completion of the treaty. The negotiations therefore were prolonged from May 556 to the year 557. A great earthquake occurs at Constantinople in December 557. At the same period an embassy from the Avars, a tribe of Huns, of unusual appearance, entered the city. This great earthquake in December 557 is the next event in the history of Agathias to the peace recorded above; confirming the conclusion that the treaty was made in 557, and refuting those who throw it back to 556.

559	1312 Post cons. Basilii XVIII. Justiniani 33 from Ap. 1. The Huns and Sclavi are in Thrace in March 559. They penetrate to Constantinople, and Belisarius is sent against them. They remain till Easter, and till August. They are at last permitted to retire beyond the Danube. Agathias agrees in the year of this irruption. He describes the four tribes of the Huns; two had been destroyed in former times, two had remained till the reign of Leo A. D. 458—473. He relates that in the winter of 558, which was remarkably severe, the king of the Huns passed the rivers on the ice, and entered Thrace early in 559; that Belisarius, now in old age, was sent against them. He describes the skilful measures and the victory of Belisarius, of whose fame, and merit, and popularity, Justinian and his ministers are jealous. The Huns were opposed in the Chersonese by Germanus. At length Justinian purchased the retreat of the barbarians. Procopii Anecdota. Composed after the 32nd year of Justinian was completed. The fifth book of Agathias includes the events of 559. He describes the barbarous excesses of the Huns in their approach to Constantinople. The forces of the empire were now so reduced, that, instead of 645,000 men, the requisite number, scarcely 150,000 remained for the defence of Italy, Africa, Colchis, Egypt, and the frontiers towards Persia. He marks the policy of Justinian, now in old age, to excite the barbarians to destroy each other, and to propitiate them by bribes. He remarks that the scholarii were men who had never seen service, admitted through favour into that corps; an abuse which Zeno began after his return in 478. Agathias mentions in conclusion that Justinian raised up another tribe of Huns against his enemies, that these tribes destroyed each other, and that their fate should be told in the proper place. of 561, in the 51st year of his reign, which commenced in November 561, because the 1st began in November 511. The year 562 is the first of his successor Sigebert. Chlothaire left 4 sons, Charibert, Guntecramnus, Hilperic, Sigebert, who divide his kingdom among them.

Martinus flourished in Spain in the reign of Theodemir king of the Suevi, within 560—570. He addressed a treatise to Miro, who began to reign in 570.

A peace for 50 years is concluded between Justinian and Chosroes. Ten years after Chosroes had occupied Suania, which he did in the close of 551; which brings the negotiation for this peace to the close of 561, the winter of the 35th of Justinian.

Among the events of 562 are the following. In February troops are ordered to Thrace. In March a mutiny of these troops is quelled by Theodorus son of Petrus. The Huns occupy Boesipolis; and in April Anastasiopolis in Thrace falls into their hands. A sedition of the two factions of the circus at Constantinople arose in May. In November 562 trophies of victory are received from Narses, who sends the keys of the cities Verona and Brixia.

In November 562 a plot against Justinian is discovered, in which Belisarius is charged with participating. But on the 19th of July 563 he was cleared, and restored to his honours.

Cassiodori Computus Paschalis. He refers to the year 562. According to Trithemius, Cassiodorus is now 82, and survived this period 13 years.

Petrus of Thessalonica (see 534. 550) negotiates the peace with Persia. The particulars are related by Menander who gives the 13 articles of the treaty. Copies of the treaty are exchanged. Petrus the ambassador on this occasion came to Daras in the autumn of 561, was there 25 Dec. 561, and had an interview with Chosroes in Persia after 6 Jan. 562.

Menander the author of this narrative began his history where Agathias ended, and wrote in the reign of Mauricius, within A. D. 583—602.

(The Paschal Chronicle supposes the full term of 532 years to be completed from March 21 of the 18th of Tiberius to March 20 of the 35th of Justinian; and divides this period into 3 parts, $218 + 65 + 249 = 532$. The Chronicle is consistent with itself, but the number 532 is two years beyond the true amount; for, from March of the 18th of Tiberius A. D. 32 to March of the 35th of Justinian A. D. 562, the true interval is only 530 years, and the period of the Chronicle either began sooner or ended later. If the 532 years terminate at 20 March 562, they commence in the 16th of Tiberius, at 21 March A. D. 30, but if they begin at the 18th of Tiberius 21 March A. D. 32, they end in the 37th of Justinian 20 March 564. See F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 815.)

See 562. Arethas the Saracen chief visits Constantinople, and confers on the choice of a successor with the emperor, in November 563. Malalas in the extant copy ends at this date; Jan. 563 in the 36th of Justinian. He is well informed on the affairs of Antioch, minute and accurate in the reign of Justinian. He is often repeated by the author of the Paschal Chronicle (for he appears to have preceded it in time). Theophanes does not seem to have transcribed from Malalas, but rather both from some common original; for, although Theophanes often tells the same facts, in the same words, yet he also often adds many things which he did not find in Malalas. That Malalas wrote after the death of Justinian we know from XVII p. 151. Petrus returns from his embassy in July 563. 565	1318 [Ol. 336] Post cons. Basilii XXIV. Justiniani 39 from Ap. 1.

Belisarius dies at Constantinople in March 565. His wife Antonina survives him. She was 60 years of age in 544, so that she lived to past 80 years. Belisarius himself was in early youth in 526, and might be under 70 at his death.

Justinian dies on the morning of 14 Nov. 565. He had reigned 38y 7m 13d. His nephew Justin II, son of his sister Vigilantia, succeeds on the same day. Justinian therefore reigned 1 April 527—13 Nov. 565 both days inclusive, and 14 Nov. 565 was the first day of the reign of Justin.

On the 7th day after the accession of Justin an embassy of the Avars arrived at Constantinople.

Eutychius of Constantinople, who had concurred with Justinian in condemning the Three Chapters, was deposed and sent into exile in April 565, for refusing to accept the emperor's new dogma περὶ φθαρτοῦ καὶ ἀφθάρτου. Eutychius was appointed in August 552; he was deposed 13 April 565; he presided 12y 8m. Joannes is appointed his successor.

(Theophanes, who had placed the death of Zeno at the right year of Diocletian, also assigns the right amount of 87 years to the four following reigns. From the accession of Anastasius, 11 Ap. 491, to the death of Justin II are 87y 5m 25d. As Theophanes reckoned 207 years to the death of Zeno, his whole period is $207 + 87 = 294$ years, nearly expressing the true amount, 294y 0 19d, from the accession of Diocletian 17 Sept. 284: so that the prochronism with which his chronography began is continued to this period. See 284. But although Theophanes is right in the sum of the reigns, he is not always exact in the detail. See F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 819.

566 1319 Fl. Justinus Augustus. Justinii II 2 from Nov. 14.

Justin in 566 put to death the senators Ætherius and Ad-dieus, charged with conspiring against him, and he caused his cousin Justin son of Germanus to be slain at Alexandria.

In 566 Alboin king of the Lombards preparing for war against the Gepidæ enters into alliance with the Avars. Cunimund king of the Gepidæ alarmed at his danger applied to Justin for aid, but the emperor remained neuter. The Lombards entered Italy in the spring of 568. The war with the Gepidæ which followed these negotiations, and which is described, though at a wrong date, by Paulus Diaconus (see 551) is determined to the year 567. That the Avars aided in the overthrow of the Gepidæ appears from Menander.

The anonymous continuation of Marcellinus ends at the year 566.

Fl. Cresconii Corippi Afri de laudibus Justinii Aug. He describes lib. I the accession of Justin in the morning of Nov. 14: lib. III the embassy of the Avars 20 Nov. 565: lib. IV the consulship of Justin 1 Jan. 566. He promises to describe other acts of Justin, which are wanting in the extant poem.

	Corippus had already written the Johannis; and is now in old age. The Chronicle of Victor Tununensis ends at the first year of Justin. At this date 566, he still remains a prisoner in the monastery, and is said to have died in that confinement. His fellow sufferer Theodorus died on the same day with the emperor Justinian.
567	1320 Post cons. Justini I. But Narses, moved by resentment and fear, retired to Naples and by a secret message invited the Lombards to quit the less fertile lands of Pannonia and take possession of the riches of Italy. Theophanes of Byzantium composed a history in ten books. He began, according to Photius, with the renewed war between Chosroes and the empire in the second year of Justin, and proceeded to the 10th year of that war. The history of Theophanes might commence at the 2nd of Justin, and at the year 567; but the war did not begin till the 7th of Justin in 572. The 10th year of the war (with which Theophanes ended) was current in 581. Theodosius the deposed bishop of Alexandria lived according to Victor till 567. Victor relates that after the death of Timotheus two rival bishops were elected in one day, Theodosius and Gaianus, whose followers were called Theodosians and Gaianitæ; that both inclined to the opinions of Eutyches, and both rejected the Council of Chalcedon; that both were deposed and banished; that Theodosius who was near to CP. and who dwelt at Sycæ, 6 miles from the city, had many adherents in Constantinople and in the palace itself; that the Gaianitæ were also numerous at Constantinople. Timotheus was appointed bishop of Alexandria 8 Oct. 519, the year after Severus fled thither. He died 7 Feb. 537. Then Gaianus held the episcopate 103 days; then after an interval of 2 months Theodosius was appointed by command of the empress Theodora, and presided 16 months. He was then summoned to CP. and declining to accept the Council of Chalcedon was sent into exile 6 miles from the city. These intervals, 103 days and 2 months, from Feb. 537 will place the 16 months of Theodosius at July 537—Nov. 538. He might survive that period almost 9 years. bards should return they should receive their lands back again. The Lombards therefore, leaving Pannonia with their women and children and all that they possessed, hasten to Italy. They had occupied Pannonia 42 years and left it 2 Ap. 568. As the 42nd year was current in April 568, the first was current in April 527, and their movement into Pannonia will be placed in the summer or autumn of 526. The Lombards had dwelt 40 or 47 years in Rugiland and 42 current in Pannonia. In the 42nd year they passed into Italy, which they entered in the 76th year before A. D. 643.

The Avars, who under their chagan Baianus thus received the seats of the Lombards in Pannonia, possessed also the country of the Gepidæ. They defeated the forces of Justin under Tiberius in 574, and in 582 took possession of Sirmium.

An embassy from the Turks appeared at Constantinople in 568. The Turkish envoy came from a remote region. An alliance is formed with the Romans.

Theophanes of Byzantium described in his history the Turkish embassy of 568. They requested Justin not to receive the Avars; and when the Avars sought from the emperor leave and permission to hold Pannonia, Zeno, trusting to this new alliance, refused to treat with them. Theophanes also described the mission of Zemarchus to the Turks in 569, to confirm the alliance.

The Gothic kings of Spain from Agila A.D. 549 to Egicanes A. D. 687 are given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 489. In 568 Leuvigildus reigned after his brother Liuva 18 years current, from the close of 568 to April 586, and was succeeded by his son Recaredus between 13 Ap. and 8 May 586.

Justin sends Zemarchus, general of the east, as his ambassador to the Turks. Zemarchus setting forth from CP. in August 569, after many days arrived at Mount Altai, where he found the chagan of the Turks, Dilzibulus by name. He returns with a Turkish envoy to Constantinople. His progress is described by Theophanes near the sea of Aral; then through Alania. When he reached the Euxine, he proceeded by sea to the Phasis, from thence to Trapezus, and from thence by land to Constantinople to render an account of his mission.

Marcian is recalled and deprived of his command and Theodorus appointed in his stead; which interrupts the operations of the imperial forces, and Chosroes captures the town of Daras, in the winter of 57$\frac{3}{4}$. After this, Justin, or rather the empress Sophia, makes a truce for a year with Chosroes. Alboin king of the Lombards is assassinated in 573. He had reigned from April 568, five years complete or six years current, and 30 from the death of his father Audoin in 543. Cassiodorus in his preface de orthographia mentions his 93rd year. Joannes III bishop of Rome dies 13 July 573. By these chiefs the churches of Italy were plundered, the priests were put to death, the people were destroyed; except in the region which had been held by Alboin himself. To these Lombard chiefs, who governed after the death of Cleph the Cæsar Tiberius (in the account of Menander) sent money, within 575—578. Gregory of Tours succeeded Euphronius in the episcopate about the close of 573. His history was completed in the 21st year of his episcopate, which was current till towards the close of 594. Gregory notices Nov. 14 of the year 594. If therefore he died (according to his biographer) on the 17th of November, his death might happen 17 Nov. 595, when the 22nd year of his episcopate was completed. See F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 833. 839.

	Benedictus a Roman, son of Bonifacius, is elected bishop of Rome 3 June 574; for he presided 4y 1^m 28^d, and was buried 31 July 578. The interval from the death of his predecessor was accordingly (13 July 573—2 June 574) ten months and 20 days.

Justini II 11 from Nov. 14. In the spring of 575, and of the 10th of Justin, when the truce for a year had expired, Justinian son of Germanus being appointed general enters the country near Daras. The Romans are victorious, and winter in the Persian territory. But Trajanus and Zacharias are sent in 575 to negotiate a peace for 3 years, or even for 5 years, with Chosroes. Sigebert king of the Franci is assassinated in 575, after Sept. 1 and before December, for the 1st year of his son Childebert is current 8 Dec. 575. The death of Cassiodorus in his 96th year is assigned by Trithemius to 575, which will place his birth at 480.
576	1329 Post cons. Justini X. Justini II 12 from Nov. 14. Justinian after wintering in Persia with his army returns into the empire about midsummer 576. Chosroes negotiates with Tiberius, who sends as envoys Theodorus, Joannes, and Petrus. Meanwhile Chosroes at the end of spring 576 invades Armenia, and Justinian is too late for action and is repulsed. Menander in his fragments mentions a mission of Valentinus to the Turks in 576: his second mission: Valentinus failed in obtaining peace from the present ruler of the Turks, the son of Dilzibulus. The movement of Chosroes, which occurred soon after Valentinian set forth from CP., agrees with the inroad into Armenia described by Menander; and confirms Theophylact, who places the repulse of Justinian in 576.

578	1331 Post cons. Justini XII. Justin causes Tiberius to be inaugurated emperor by Eutychius 26 Sept. 578, and dies 5 Oct. He had reigned 12y 10^m 22^d from 14 Nov. 565 to 5 Oct. 578 both inclusive. The first campaign of Mauricius in the East is in 578, the year of the death of Justin. His second is in 579, the year

of the death of Chosroes. In his 3rd campaign in 580 he marched to Circesium. After his 4th, in 581, Mauricius returned in triumph to Constantinople, and succeeded Tiberius 14 Aug. 582.

In Menander Chosroes renews the war a little before the 3 years have expired, and a little before his own death. Menander records that Zacharias is sent to Chosroes, and Pherogdathes to Tiberius now emperor. The envoys arrive at Constantinople in the beginning of winter (578). After that winter Chosroes died. In the spring of 579 Mauricius is ordered to be in readiness (his second campaign), and to watch events. The deputies are detained 3 months by Hormisdas, and dismissed in summer 579, and Mauricius renews hostilities, and in the winter 578 is at Cæsarea in Cappadocia.

Chosroes who died in the spring 579, had reigned 47y 6m. From his accession 13 Sept. 531 are 47y 6m to March 579. His son Hormisdas or Hoormuz, who succeeded him reigned 11y 6m which terminate in September 590.

Agathias wrote after the death of Justin, and after the death of Chosroes. He "will relate the death of Justin, and the particulars of the death of Chosroes." He intended to give the history down to the present time. The destruction of the Huns (in 579) "shall be told in the proper place." He writes however (as Niebuhr justly remarks) before the reign of Mauricius, of whom he speaks as of a private person. The five extant books therefore, containing only six years, 553—558 out of thirty, were written between March 579 and August 582.

Joannes Epiphaniensis wrote after Agathias. The history of Joannes contained 40 years A. D. 553—592, and yet was published before the work of Evagrius. See 553.

Funeral of Benedictus July 31. See 574. Pelagius II succeeds. He was appointed to the see of Rome 30 Nov. 578, four months after the death of his predecessor; held the episcopate 11y 2m 10d, and died 8 Feb. 590. The see then remained vacant 6 months and 25 days, and Gregory was appointed 3 Sept. 590.

Eulogius bishop of Alexandria flourished. He presided 27 years 580—607. For the account of his works by Photius see F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 843.

600	1353 Post cons. Mauricii XVI. Mauricii 19 from Aug. 13. The army in Thrace in 600 sends deputies to Mauricius to charge Comentiolus with betraying them. The emperor orders an enquiry into the facts. Comentiolus is acquitted of the charge, and resumes the command. When the summer came on, he quitted CP. War is renewed. Priscus is victorious, according to Theophylact, in five several battles. Then winter approached, passed by Comentiolus at Philippopolis: the winter of 600. In the beginning of the spring of 601 he is at Constantinople, and in the summer of 601 is again appointed general. In the 19th year of Mauricius nothing is done; in the 20th year Petrus is appointed. Then followed a mutiny in the army of the Danube. Phocas was proclaimed, and Mauricius slain. The Paschal Chronicle gives the dates: "The revolt of Phocas was in November: Indict. 6 (November 602.) Mauricius fled Nov. 22. Phocas was proclaimed Nov. 23, and crowned by Cyriacus the patriarch; entered CP. on the 25th; and slew Mauricius, four of his sons, and his brother Petrus, on the 27th." Mauricius died at 63 years of age. His funeral was 12 March 604." As he commenced his episcopate 3 Sept. 590, this period will include 12 March 604, the day of his funeral. After an interval of 6 months and one day Sabinianus, a Tuscan, succeeded Gregory 13 Sept. 604; and occupied the episcopate 1y 5^m 9^d, which terminated 21 Feb. 606. The funeral of Sabinianus is placed by his biographer at 22 Feb. 606.

The see therefore remained vacant after the death of Bonifacius III 11 Nov. 607—24 Aug. 608, both inclusive; or 9^m 14^d. Eulogius of Alexandria is succeeded by Theodorus, who presides 2 years.

609	1362 Post cons. Phocæ V. Phocæ 8 from Nov. 23. The Persian war continues in the 7th of Phocas. The calamities of this reign are briefly summed up by Zonaras: "In the East the Persians occupied Syria, and Palestine, and Phœnicia, overran Armenia, Cappadocia, Paphlagonia, and Galatia, and penetrated to Chalcedon; in Europe the Avars desolated Thrace, and the Roman legions both in the East and West were destroyed. There was also a great mortality of men and animals, and a deficiency of fruits and harvests." The Paschal Chronicle reckons 272 years from the death of Constantine to 22 May of the 12th indiction in the 7th of Phocas. The author concludes: "From the death of Constantine are 272 years, and from the 20th year of his reign are 181 years complete." The 272 years are exact from 22 May 337 to 21 May 609. The reckoning from the 20th of Constantine is deficient; for from 22 May 326 at the close of his 20th year to 21 May 609 are 283 years. Theodorus of Alexandria, (see 607) is slain in a tumult in that city. Isacius of Jerusalem, who had succeeded Amos in the beginning of 601, and presided 8 years, dies in 609, and is succeeded by Zacharias.

The 922nd year of the Seleucidæ began Oct. 610, the 20th of Chosroes Sept. 609. From the dates of Elmakin we may perhaps refer the Mission to A. D. 610, in the 20th year of Chosroes, and the 921st of the Seleucidæ.

D. 616, and 586 years from the Resurrection to March 616. This is consistent with the computation quoted at 562; and these 586 years contain the two interpolated years there mentioned. For if 586 years terminate in March 616, they begin at March 23—25 A. D. 30; and if the 619 years from the Nativity are completed 24 Dec. 615, they commence at Dec. 25 B. C. 5. But when the two redundant years are struck out, 584 years will carry us back to March A. D. 32, the true epoch intended by the Chronicle; from whence the 33 years ($584 + 33 = 617$) added by the Chronicle will place the Nativity according to the meaning of this Chronicle, at 25 Dec. B. C. 3. See the Tables A. D. 32 in F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 16.

Both were current at July 622. But Eutychius errs in the reign of Heraclius, whose years he makes connumerary with the years of the Hejira. The Flight of Mohammed on the 68th day from July 16 is fixed to 21 Sept. 622, 14 days before the 12th year of Heraclius was completed. Georgii Pisidæ acroasis tres. The Turks passing the Caspian Gates enter Persia. Meanwhile Sarbarus approaches Chalcedon, and the Avars from Thrace assault CP., but are repulsed. Sarbarus winters (627) before Chalcedon. The Paschal Chronicle relates at large that the city was assaulted by the Avars in conjunction with the Persians, and gives the dates : " The army of the Chagan approached June 29 (626). The Chagan himself is before the city July 29. He assaults it July 31. A conference is held on Saturday Aug. 2. On Friday Aug. 8 the rearguard of the enemy retired. The defence was conducted by Sergius the patriarch, by Bonus, by the patricians Georgius, Theodosius, Athanasius."

Georgii Pisidæ de bello Avarico. He marks that the assault was made in the summer season. The assailants were in number 80,000 ; and were composed of the Slave, the Hun, the Scythian, the Bulgarian, the Mede. Heraclius had been 3 years absent from CP. That is, from March 623, when he left CP. for his second expedition. Heraclius planned the defence by letters. The peace with Persia is yet future. Composed therefore before the death of Chosroes, either at the close of 626 or in 627.

627 1380 Post cons. Heraclii XVI. Heraclii 18 from Oct. 5, Constantini 15 from Jan. 22.

Bonus dies 11 May 627.

The sixth campaign of Heraclius in Asia was in 627, after a fourth winter 627 passed there. In September 627 he enters Persia with his Turkish allies, and is occupied from Sept. 627 to February 628 in the operations which preceded the death of Chosroes. 1 Dec. 627 he passes the Zab, and 12 Dec. a battle is fought. Dec. 23 he passes the Lesser Zab, and celebrates Christmas 25 Dec. 627 in that place.

628 1381 Post cons. Heraclii XVII. Heraclii 19 from Oct. 5, Constantini 16 from Jan. 22.

Heraclius on the 1st of Jan. 628 plunders a palace of Chosroes, who retires to Ctesiphon which he had not visited for 24 years. Heraclius ravaged Persia through the whole of February 628, and advanced in March.

Meanwhile Siroes rebels. Chosroes is seized and put to death 28 Feb. 628. The intelligence is received at Constantinople May 15. The Paschal Chronicle gives the emperor's despatch written from Persia, 8 Ap. 628, and a copy of the letter or treaty of peace with Siroes or Cabades, which breaks off in the middle in the extant text of the Chronicle. Heraclius describes his own progress from 17 Oct. 627 to 15 March 628, and from Feb. 24 to March 30. He marks Ap. 3 and

Ap. 8, and relates that Chosroes was deposed Feb. 24, Siroes proclaimed Feb. 25, and Chosroes slain Feb. 28. The war had lasted from Ap. 622 six years, and Heraclius returned in the 7th year. But the 6 years terminated in spring 628.

Chosroes had reigned from Sept. 590 to Feb. inclusive 628, 37y 5m.

The Paschal Chronicle in the extant copy ends with the narrative (15 May 628) of the news of the death of Chosroes. But the author continued his chronicle to the 20th of Heraclius. The extant text contains the beginning of the letter of Siroes. He is named by Eutychius Cobades qui et Shirawaih appellatus. This last name was corrupted by the Greeks into Siroes.

The substance of the letter which was given in the Paschal Chronicle may be in part supplied from Zonaras: "Siroes making a peace with Heraclius restored all the prisoners, and the wood of the Cross, taken at Jerusalem, and Zacharias the patriarch of Jerusalem."

Georgii Pisidæ Heraclius, sive de Chosroæ excidio. Composed after the news had arrived at CP., and before the return of Heraclius. Therefore in 628, after May 15.

629 1382 Post cons. Heraclii XVIII. Heraclii 20 from Oct. 5, Constantini 17 from Jan. 22.

Theophanes relates that Heraclius, in the spring of 629, setting forth from Constantinople proceeded to Jerusalem, and there reinstated Zacharias the patriarch, and banished the Jews from the holy city. The date for the visit to Jerusalem is confirmed by Nicephorus, who gives indict. 2 A. D. 628 as the date of that visit. Eutychius thus describes Heraclius at Jerusalem: "In the 9th year of the Hejira, Heraclius going forth from Constantinople went to Jerusalem.—When he arrived, he was met by the inhabitants accompanied by Modestus. When he entered the city he was grieved to see the devastations committed there by the Persians. Modestus was commended for all that he had done." Eutychius adds with apparent approbation that Heraclius, in violation of his own promise and compact, yielding to the instances of the monks, caused great numbers of the Jews to be put to death. The visit of Heraclius was at the close of the 7th or the beginning of the 8th year of the Hejira, which commenced 1 May 629. The 9th year, beginning 20 Ap. 630, places it one year lower. Modestus here mentioned had acted for Zacharias during his captivity A. D. 614—628.—Modestus Zachariæ Vicarius.

Siroes after a reign of 8 months was slain, and Adeser his son succeeded, who reigned 5 months. The 8 months place the death of Siroes at October 628, and the 5 months the death of Adeser at the end of March 629.

Zacharias of Jerusalem died, and was succeeded by Modestus, during the visit of Heraclius at Jerusalem. Eutychius

	says, " Heraclius appointed the monk Modestus patriarch of Jerusalem, and directed him to follow him to Damascus. Heraclius therefore, returning from Jerusalem to Damascus, halted there." Modestus then was appointed in 629. Zacharias presided from indict. 12 A. D. 604 to indict. 2 A. D. 624 a period of 21 years current. Modestus held the episcopate 9 months, and after his death the see of Jerusalem was vacant, according to Eutychius, for 6 years.
630	1383 Post cons. Heraclii XIX. Heraclii 21 from Oct. 5, Constantini 18 from Jan. 22. Heraclius having left Jerusalem proceeded first to Damascus, then to Edessa, where he expelled the Nestorians and restored the church to the catholics: then he came to Hierapolis, where according to Theophanes he first hears of the death of Siroes and succession of Adeser. But as Siroes died in Oct. 628 and Adeser himself in the end of March 629 (see 629), it is evident that the succession of Adeser must have been known to Heraclius before his arrival at Jerusalem. It is therefore probable that the intelligence reached him (perhaps at Hierapolis in Phrygia) on his way to Jerusalem in 629. Heraclius on the return from Jerusalem could not have reached Hierapolis, according to the narratives of Eutychius and Theophanes, till the end of 629 or beginning of 630. But he might pass through Hierapolis in Phrygia both in the going out and in the return. We may refer to 630 the transactions at Hierapolis of which Theophanes, Cedrenus, and Zonaras give the following account: " Heraclius at Hierapolis confers with Athanasius the Jacobite patriarch, who is promised the episcopate of Antioch, if he will accept the Council of Chalcedon. He pretends to accept the dogma of that Council,—that there were Two Natures in Christ, but enquires whether there were Two Wills or only One Will. Heraclius being surprised by the strange expression writes to Sergius, and also asks the opinion of Cyrus bishop of Phasis. They agree that there was only One Will. Sergius held only One Will. Whereupon the emperor writes to Joannes of Rome, who rejects the dogma. Meanwhile, upon the death of Georgius, Cyrus is appointed patriarch of Alexandria, and with Theodorus of Pharan asserts the dogma of One Will. At this time Sophronius is chosen bishop of Jerusalem and condemns the dogma and addresses Sergius of CP. and Joannes of Rome upon it. Heraclius is perplexed, and issues an edict [the Ecthesis, issued in 638 indict. 12] forbidding men to affirm either One Will or Two Wills." Theophanes and Cedrenus under that 20th year of Heraclius continue the narrative down to the death of Constans in Sicily in 668. Theophanes is inaccurate in some particulars, for Honorius

	was bishop of Rome in 630 and not Joannes; and, as some affirm, Athanasius was not a Jacobite patriarch. But this does not prove that Heraclius did not converse with him in this year upon this subject. The emperor might at this time consult with Sergius and with Cyrus upon this dogma, which was published to the world by Cyrus from Alexandria 18 years before 649. (See 638.)

632	1385 Post cons. Heraclii XXI. Heraclii 23 from Oct. 5, Constantini 20 from Jan. 22. Mohammed dies at the age of 63 years 8 June 632. Abubekr succeeds on the same day. An expedition into Syria was delayed a month by the death of Mohammed. In the following month Osama by the command of Abubekr leads that army into Syria. Heraclius at that time being at Emesa. Abulfeda observes that at this time 124,000 Moslems were numbered. Yazdejerd or Yezdejerd is elected king of Persia. The troubled interval which followed the accession of Siroes 25 Feb. 628 is described by Eutychius, whose detail makes the interval 4y 5m 22d, which places the elevation of Yazdejerd at 15 Aug. 632. He was at that time only 15 years of age. The era of Yasdejerd was 3624 days after the Hejira. As in the year 632 February had 29 days, the 3624 days, commencing in 16 July 622, will terminate at Tuesday 16 June 632. And this agrees with Abulfeda, who assigns Tuesday as the day on which the epoch of Yazdejerd began. This era commenced at the inauguration of Yazdejerd. If the day in which the era commenced was also the day of Yazdejerd's inauguration, which is probable, then the space from the accession of Siroes 25 Feb. 628 will be 4y 2m 23d, instead of 4y 5m 22d, assigned by Eutychius.

Heraclius at this time was in Syria. A truce is granted the Christians for a year. The truce began 17 Dec. 635.

Ockley: "Never a man of the Saracens went into the city till after the great battle of Yermouk, which decided the fate of Syria." Abu Obeidah, having received orders at the close of 636 to besiege Jerusalem, sent Yezid thither first with 5000 men; at last the patriarch Sophronius consented that the city should be surrendered upon condition that the inhabitants should receive the articles from the caliph himself. Omar entered the city in 637, Hejira 16, and continued there 10 days. Ockley: "Omar while at Jerusalem divided Syria into two parts, and committed all between Hauran and Aleppo to Abu Obeidah. Yezid took charge of all Palestine and the sea shore. Amrou was sent to invade Egypt." "Aleppo and its castle was taken in 4 or 5 months." Probably before the close of 637. Meanwhile Yezid attempted Cæsarea in vain, and Amrou "did not march directly to Egypt, but continued awhile in Palestine." "As he was marching towards Cæsarea the Saracens found the weather extremely cold." "Constantine guarded that part of the country." We discern here the winter of 637. Ockley: "In the same year in which Jerusalem was taken, Saïd was making havoc in the territories of Persia. He went to Madayin." "After this in the same year the Persians were defeated by the Saracens in a great battle near Jaloulah. Yazdejerd retired to Ferganah, a city of Persia."

638	1391 Post cons. Heraclii XXVII. Heraclii 29 from Oct. 5, Constantini 26 from Jan. 22. Heraclius fled from Antioch and Constantine from Cæsarea in 638. Both are at Constantinople 4 July 638. Heraclius was still at Antioch after Aleppo had fallen, and when the Saracens assaulted Antioch; therefore through the winter of 637 and the spring of 638. Constantine is in Palestine at the same period (see 637). After their departure Abu Obeidah entered Antioch 21 Aug (or 21 July) 638, Hejira 17. Cæsarea surrendered in 638 to Amrou the future conqueror of Egypt. Ockley: "Constantine departed for Constantinople. In the morning the people surrendered the city to Amrou—in the 17th year of the Hejira and the 5th of Omar's reign." The 5th of Omar began on the 22nd of Jumada II, the 170th day of Hejira 17; which day fell upon 11 July 638: and this date brings down the capture of Cæsarea to the middle or end of July, more than a month after the flight of Constantine. After this, all the other towns of Syria surrendered: and "all was subdued in 6 years from their first expedition in Abubekr's reign." The conquest then was completed in 638, and the six years are within A. D. 632—638. Hejira 11—17. The Ecthesis of Heraclius was published in the 12th indiction: therefore not before September 638. The date is fixed by Martinus of Rome in the Lateran Council which was held in the 9th year of Constans or Constantine, October 5. 8. 17. 19. 31 A. D. 649. Martinus affirms: "Cyrus of Alexandria and Sergius of CP. and his successors Pyrrhus and Paulus, have diffused this mischief. Cyrus at Alexandria 18 years ago asserted One Will in Christ, in nine propositions, anathematizing those who differed from him. Sergius agreed with Cyrus, and a few years later, in the 12th indiction, composed the Ecthesis in the name of Heraclius." Sergius dies in the 12th indiction. The city was taken on the 2nd of Moharram, Friday 22 Dec. 640, in the 7th year of the reign of Omar. At the time of Amrou's invasion the Copts in Egypt were 6,000,000. This Coptic population was composed of various races; aboriginal, Egyptians, Nubians, Ethiopians or Abyssinians, and Jews. This number 6,000,000, if understood of the total Copt population, is credible. In the reign of Nero A. D. 66 Egypt exclusive of Alexandria contained 7,500,000 inhabitants. [Joannes Philoponus was still living according to Abulpharajius, and conversed with Amrou after the capture of Alexandria. But Philoponus was born about 525. This may be collected from the age of his master Ammonius the disciple of Proclus. For we may assume that Ammonius was at the least 60 years of age in 525, 40 years after the death of Proclus. And that Philoponus was born before 529 we collect from Philoponus himself. See 617. He was born then 116 years before the fall of Alexandria. This space of 116 years, A. D. 525—640 both inclusive, will bring that event below the lifetime of Philoponus. The date of Abulpharajius however is accepted by Ockley, Renaudot, Fabricius, Gibbon, and by Brucker, who reckons Joannem octogenario majorem obiisse after 640. Born therefore about 560. But this is refuted by Joannes himself, by the time of Ammonius, and by Simplicius who quotes Joannes. Leontius de Sectis, quoted by Basnage and by Pagi, attests "that while Theodosius yet lived at Constantinople the dogma of Tritheism was agitated again; of which Philoponus was the chief author." But Theodosius dwelt there till 567 (see 567). Pagi at the year 535 quotes the address of Philoponus to Sergius, and then, forgetting the time of Sergius, adds that Joannes lived usque ad finem fere hujus seculi; which supposes his death before the year 600. An opposite error to that of Abulpharajius.] having reigned 30y 4m 6d. This period of his reign, from 5 Oct. 610, will terminate 10 Feb. 641. Pagi however from an anonymous chronicle collects that he died die Dominica. Therefore on Sunday Feb. 10. 641. After the death of Heraclius his son Constantine reigned 103 days 11 Feb.—24 May 641, when he was poisoned by his step mother Martina, that she might advance her own son Heracleonas to the throne. But Heracleonas was deposed by the senate, and Constantine or Constans son of Constantine was elected emperor: whose reign began before 5 Oct. 641, because his 9th year was current 5 Oct. 649. The sole reign of Heracleonas then was less than 5 months. Constans was murdered in a bath at Syracuse: Theoph. p. 292 c. in the 12th indiction; Paul. Diacon. Pyrrhus of CP. is deposed, and Paul appointed, in October. See 639.

§ 1. EMPERORS.

THE years of the Roman Emperors, and the fractions of months and days, are carefully noted by Dio and other historians. But yet even if the genuine numbers were always preserved, which is not to be expected, the sum of all the reigns would not express the exact amount of time; for sometimes the reigns are in part conumerary. Galba, Otho, and Vitellius were partly contemporary with Nero and Vespasian: the elder Gordians, Pupienus, and Balbinus were included for the most part in the reign of Maximin: the last 4 months of Justin were also the first 4 months of Justinian: the last 10 days of Justin II were the first 10 of Tiberius II: the two last days of the same Tiberius were the first two of Mauricius. The last day of an emperor was sometimes counted again as the first of his successor : thus Aug. 19 A. D. 14 was both the last day of Augustus, and the first of Tiberius. Sometimes a short interval occurred ; as a day between Caligula and Claudius, called by Suetonius two days (current) of liberty ; 3 days at the least after the death of Trajan ; 10 days after the death of Jovian. Sometimes the life or reign of an emperor was reckoned exclusive of the day of his death ; as the life of Caracalla by Dio, and the reign of Heraclius by Nicephorus.

But on the other hand the Chronographers give erroneous accounts, because they often omit fractions of years that they may obtain a more convenient measure of time. They adapt the reigns to their own scheme of reckoning, by assigning a fictitious beginning to the years of the emperors. Thus Theophanes places the years of Justinian each 5 months below the true time ; on the contrary he throws back the years of Justin II 74 days, and of Heraclius 34 days, above the true position, that each year of every reign may begin with the indiction at Sept. 1, from whence all the years of Theophanes are computed. The Astronomical Canon omits the reigns which are less than a year, neglects fractions, and assigns a fictitious beginning to almost every reign. In the Paschal Chronicle the reigns are sometimes shorter and sometimes longer than the truth. Eusebius and Hieronymus in their chronology also deviate from the true amount of reigns in many cases.

For the emperors who are not noticed in what follows see the Tables.

CLAUDIUS. The census of Augustus 4,063,000 and the census of Claudius 5,984,072 contained only the men of military age, to whom the men above the age of 60, the women and the children are to be added. Against this mode of reckoning it has been argued as follows: "The census of Claudius, bearing 5,984,072 free male adults, would make the free population amount to 23,936,288. Taking that to be the number of free citizens, allowing for but one slave to each, the inhabitants exclusive of strangers would be 47,872,876, which is infinitely too large a population for Italy itself; and the number of citizens beyond it nowhere appears to be great.—Probably but a small part of the citizens was composed of persons out of Italy.—We meet with another difficulty in the astonishingly rapid growth of population shewn by Mr. Clinton's table. In the lustrum of Augustus B.C. 28 the male adults being 4,063,000, the whole free classes amount to 16,252,000; but in the census taken only 114 years earlier, in B.C. 86, the total is no more than 1,852,000, the males of military age being 463,000."

The numbers of the census had advanced, not "in 114 years only," as Mr. Blair states it, but in 58 years, from B.C. 86 to B.C. 28. But the increase was made in a still shorter period; in forty-two years, from B.C. 70 to B.C. 28. In that space of 42 years their numbers had multiplied from 450,000 to 4,063,000. This vast addition was produced by the large admissions to the class of citizens which had been granted during that period: of these additions many incidental records remain. The whole of Gallia transpadana received this privilege from the dictator Cæsar. His legion called Alauda was composed of natives of Transalpine Gaul, and the soldiers of this legion were made Roman citizens. After the last war in Spain Cæsar conferred the privilege of citizenship upon some towns in Spain. Pompey had the power granted to him of creating Roman citizens. The triumvir Antony raised the inhabitants of whole cities, and even all the Sicilians, to the rank of Roman citizens. Augustus himself granted this privilege to Utica and to some of the Salves and Cavari. In Gaul and Spain he withdrew this privilege from some, but granted it to others. The highest class among the nations of Transalpine Gaul were made citizens of Rome. Augustus however advised Tiberius to be sparing of this honour, and rarely bestowed it. Hence in the last 40 years of his reign their numbers did not much advance.

In the 34 years which passed between the last lustrum of Augustus and the 8th year of Claudius about 1,887,000 citizens had been added to the number. In some degree this addition might be produced by the increase of population, but it must have chiefly proceeded from the same cause as the increase in the period which preceded the first census of Augustus, the admission of new citizens. For we cannot doubt that the wise and liberal policy which had been so long pursued, and which is justly celebrated by Cicero and Dionysius,—a policy inherent in the Roman institutions, and the source of the Roman power,—still continued to be practised. We find, in a few years after the reign of Claudius, that the rank of Roman citizen, which had been before conferred upon the higher class of persons in Gaul, was in the year 68 extended to the whole Gallic nation by Galba. In 68 Nero admitted the Alpine nations to the jus Latii. A few years later Vespasian conferred the same privilege upon Spain. But the effect of this gift was to advance gradually all the chief families to the order of Roman citizens. It is unnecessary to pursue this topic through later times, or to shew that Caracalla finally made all the free subjects of the empire Roman citizens.

If the population of Italy in the time of Augustus was equal to that of modern Italy, it contained about 20,400,000 inhabitants. And if we assume with Mr. Blair as an average for all Italy that the slaves were equal in number to the free, we obtain about 10,200,000 for the free population and about 2,349,634 for the number of freemen of military age, at the proportion of 2322 in 10,080 persons. It follows then that, when allowance is made for strangers in Italy, the numbers of the first census of Augustus, 4,063,000, would contain probably 1,760,000 citizens supplied from the other provinces of the empire. But testimonies remain which justify this conclusion. Cicero attests that in his time the commanders of armies conferred the gift of citizenship upon those who had deserved well of the republic; and that this gift was bestowed indifferently upon men of all countries,—upon natives of Africa, or Sardinia, or Spain. By the law already noticed Pompey received the power of creating citizens with the consent of his council of officers. That law was passed in B. C. 72, when he was conducting the war in Spain; and Pompey doubtless exercised that power not only in Spain but afterwards in Asia, where he held the supreme command for five years B. C. 66—62. We have seen that Cæsar advanced some towns in Spain to this honour; that Antony conferred it upon whole provinces and upon the island of Sicily. Sicily alone, if we compute its population to be equal to that of modern Sicily, might supply to the first census of Augustus 235,000 citizens. We have seen that the inhabitants of Utica were made citizens by Augustus, and that the leading class among the Transalpine Gauls were citizens of Rome. The inhabitants of Trapezus were Roman citizens. That some Jews were made citizens, we know from Philo and Josephus. The father of St. Paul was a Roman. These specimens shew that no nation was excluded.

If the advance of the numbers in those 42 years from 450,000 to 4,063,000 shall appear to be explained by the testimonies here produced, the increase in the 34 years from 4,097,000 to 5,984,000 will not excite surprise. The increasing wealth and prosperity not only of Italy but of the whole empire within that period would produce an increase in the population; and the numbers of the citizens would advance with the numbers of the other classes. The numerous colonies beyond the limits of Italy which enjoyed the jus Latii were annually adding new citizens to the empire; and (as already observed) additional grants of the rights of citizenship continued to be made. We collect from Philo that Caligula was lavish of this gift.

TRAJANUS. HADRIANUS.

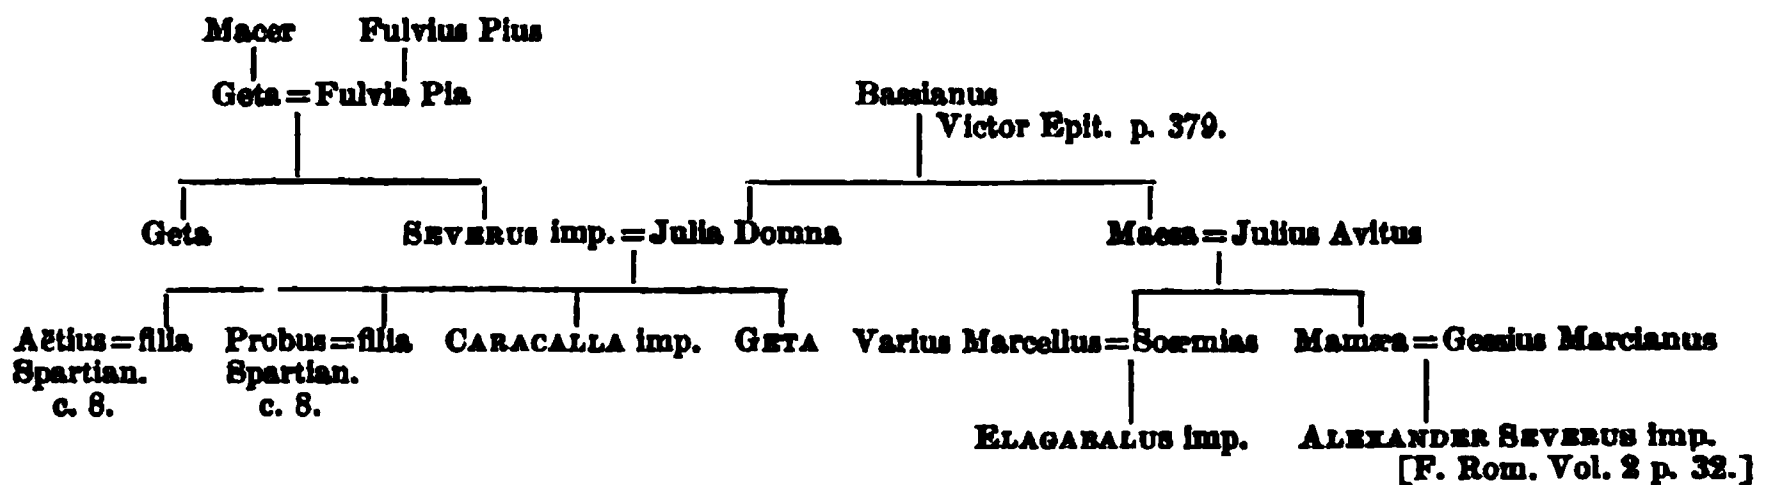

T. ANTONINUS.

A Rescript in favour of the Christians is given to Antoninus Pius by some, and to Marcus by others. That such an edict was not published by Pius is well argued by Valesius ad Eusebium H. E. IV. That Marcus did not issue such an edict is plain from his conduct to the Christians, whom he persecuted. See F. Rom. Vol. II p. 25, 26.

SEVERUS.

Severus, a native of Leptismagna in Africa, which he afterwards adorned with buildings, was prætor elect at the age of 32 in 177; and governor of Gaul about 185; then of Pannonia in 187; then of Sicily in 188. After this, he was appointed to Illyricum about the year 190, three years before his elevation to the empire.

ALEXANDER SEVERUS. Herodian's account of the Persian war of Alexander is inaccurate. Nor is the account of the success in this war less inaccurate than the account of its time. According to Herodian, Alexander was defeated in Mesopotamia; the army in Media destroyed; and Alexander retreated to Antioch. This is refuted by the testimony of coins, which attest his victory and his triumph, and confirm the account of this war given by Lampridius and others. But Herodian is refuted even by himself; for he proceeds to relate that the Persians, instead of following up their advantages, were so wasted in the campaign that their loss of men was equal to that of the enemy, and that for three or four years they never attempted any hostile effort.

PHILIPPUS. Tillemont contends that Philip was a Christian. Mosheim says: "The Philips both father and son proved so favorable and even friendly to the Christians that these two emperors passed in the opinion of many for Christians. The arguments render the fact extremely probable; but as these are opposed by others equally specious, that famous question relating to Philip and his son must be left undecided." His translator adds: "The authors of the Universal History think it may be affirmed that Philip and his son embraced the Gospel, since that opinion is built upon Jerome, Chrysostom, Dionysius of Alexandria, Zonaras, Nicephorus, Cedrenus, Rufinus, Syncellus, Orosius, Jornandes, Amm. Marcellinus, Cardinal Bona, Vincentius Lirinensis, Huetius and others." Lardner examines diligently and impartially whether Philip and his son were Christians, and determines in the negative.

We may set aside the enquiry about the son of Philip, because he was only 6 years of age at the elevation of his father, and in his 12th year at his death. His opinions are of little consequence, even if they could be known. See this question examined in F. Rom. Vol. II p. 51—53. The evidence there collected makes it more than probable that Philip was a Pagan.

GALLIENUS. The thirty tyrants of Trebellius are reduced to 18 by Tillemont, and to 19 by Gibbon. Their lists differ from each other. The following differs in some degree from both, and contains two names not mentioned by Trebellius.

- 1 Cecrops the Moor.
- 2 Antoninus.
- 3 Cyriades; joined Sapor; slain in 258.
- 4 Postumus; reigned A. D. 258—267. His son Postumus was associated as Augustus.
- 5 Lælianus.
- 6 Marius. A. D. 267.

- 7 Victorinus. A. D. 265. 267. His son Victorinus perished with him.
Victoria seeing her son and grandson slain, and Postumius, Lælianus, and Marius, who had been successively appointed to the empire, also put to death, called Tetricus to the purple. She died in the reign of Tetricus.
- 8 Tetricus : he was defeated by Aurelian in 274, by whom he was spared and made corrector of Lucania, and lived long in a private station. Tetricus the son was placed by Aurelian in the senate. .
- 9 Ingenuus. A. D. 260.
- 10 Regalianus. A. D. 260. His revolt followed the death of Ingenuus.
- 11 Aureolus ; mentioned in 262. 263. 267. 268.
- 12 Macrianus, 261. 262. Macrianus junior was involved in the fate of his father. Quietus was another son of Macrianus, described at 261. 262. Balista. See A. D. 261. Whether Balista was ever called emperor is doubtful.
- 13 Odenathus, 260. 264. 267. Murdered by his cousin Mæonius. Herennianus and Timolaus were sons of Odenathus. For Vabalathus see A. D. 267. 272.
- 14 Zenobia. See 272. 273 for her defeat and capture, and 274 for the triumph of Aurelian. Zenobia survived the triumph, and left descendants, who were living at Rome in the time of the historian Eutropius.
- 15 Piso : was sent by Macrianus to kill Valens ; but the soldiers of Valens slew Piso in Thessaly.
- 16 Valens who assumed the empire was very soon slain by his own soldiers.
- 17 Æmilianus assumed the purple in Egypt, but was slain by an emissary of Gallienus.
- 18 Saturninus the best of the commanders in the time of Gallienus, and beloved by Valentinian, is compelled by his army to assume the empire. He was slain by his own soldiers.
- 19 Trebellianus was elevated to the command in Isauria, but overcome by a leader whom Gallienus sent against him.
- 20 Celsus was proclaimed emperor in Africa, and slain in seven days by his own men.

DIOCLETIAN. After the division of the empire among two Augusti and two Cæsars, the persons who held the supreme power were these :

IN THE EAST.	IN THE WEST.
C. Val. Diocletianus Jovius	M. Aur. Val. Maximianus Herculus
Galerius Val. Maximianus	Flavius Val. Constantius Chlorus
Gal. Val. Maximinus Daza	Flavius Val. Severus
Val. Licinianus Licinius.	Flavius Constantinus
	M. Aurelius Maxentius.

Diocletianus

Valeria

Galerius

Maximinus Daza

The distribution of the provinces at the first appointment of the Cæsars in 292 is described by Victor Cæs. p. 346. Transalpine Gaul was entrusted to Constantius; Illyricum to Galerius; Africa and Italy to Maximian; Diocletian retained the rest.

The abdication is placed by Eusebius in the second year of the persecution; but it happened 1 May 305, in the third year of the persecution, as stated in the Tables.

On the character and court of Diocletian consult Eutropius IX. 26. The institution of new court ceremonies is placed by Hieronymus in 29½.

CONSTANTIUS. The elevation of Constantius and the distribution of the provinces in 305 are described by Zosimus, Eutropius, Orosius, and Anonymus Valesii. See F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 78.

Constantius is placed before Galerius by Eusebius. Upon which Eckhel observes that, as Galerius was nominated by Diocletian, he would have the precedence over Constantius, who was appointed by Maximian; and concludes that Eusebius gave Constantius the precedence out of compliment to Constantine. But Eusebius is confirmed in his account by the order of the names in Inscriptions, and in all the consulships of Constantius and Galerius.

Helena the mother of Constantine was not the concubine, as some have supposed, but the wife of Constantius. This is attested by Victor and Eutropius. And La Baune and Gibbon truly remark that the divorce of Helena proves her marriage. She was of humble origin. Her son was born at Naissus. Helena died in about her 80th year.

CONSTANTINE

For the character of Constantine see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 88.

JULIANUS. His early life and education are described by Socrates; and his character is fully drawn by Ammianus. See Fasti Rom. Vol. 2 p. 102—105. Ammianus, in relating the death of Julian, mentions a rumour—rumore jactato incerto, telo cecidisse Romano. Libanius, adopting this rumour, charges his death upon the Christians. Sozomen, quoting Libanius, thinks that the charge against the Christians might be true. But the words of Ammianus above given shew that Libanius founded his charge upon an uncertain rumour.

VALENTINIAN was a native of Cibala: born in 321. His brother Valens was about 8 years younger. His son Gratian, whom he associated in the empire, was born in 359 before the elevation of his father. Valentinian married Justina the widow of Magnentius, his former wife, the mother of Gratian, being still alive.

At the division of the provinces between the two emperors in 364, the great officers of the empire were thus distributed:

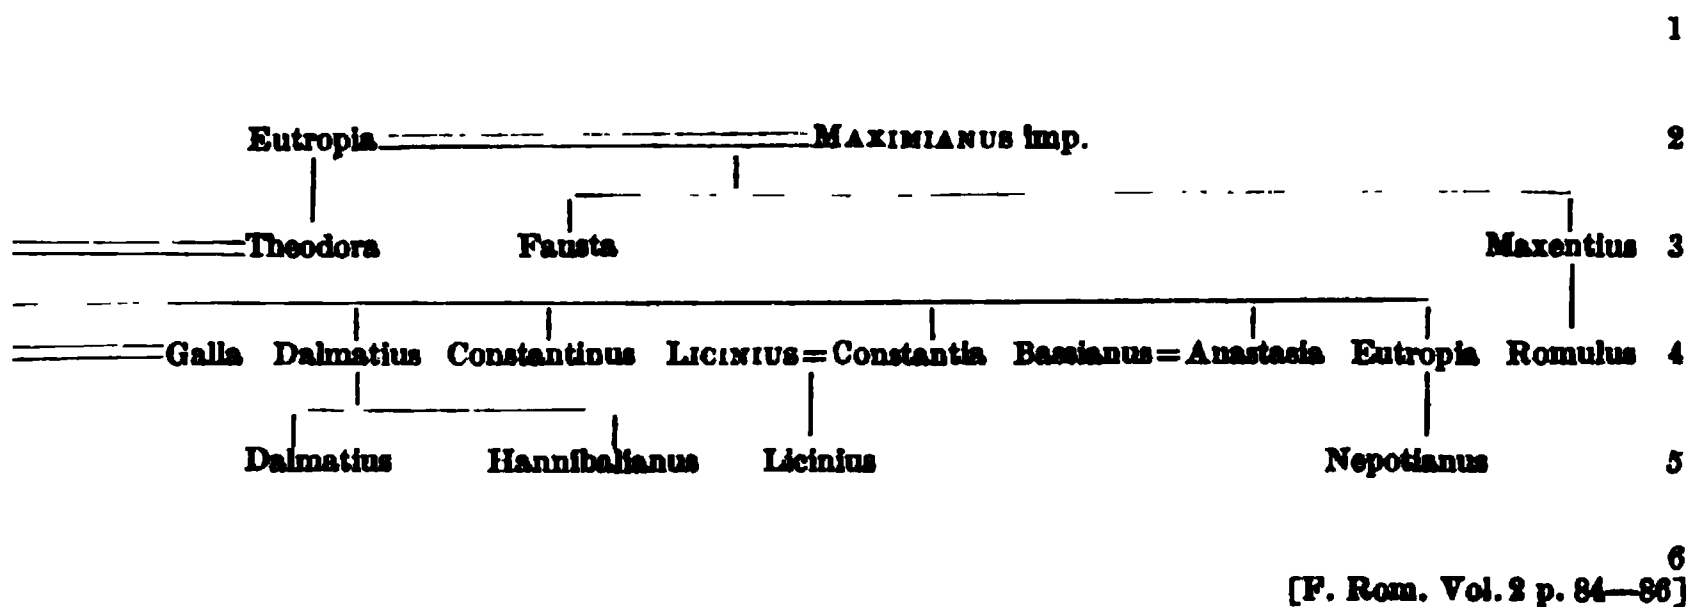

To Valentinian

Jovinus. Promoted by Julian. Consul in 367.

Equitius. Commander of the army in Illyricum. Consul in 374, and still in Illyricum.

Dagalaiphus. Promoted by Jovian. Count of the domestics under Julian in 361. Consul in 366.

Mamertinus. Præfect of Italy, Africa, and Illyricum. He had been count of the Largesses under Julian, and consul in 362.

Germanianus. Præfect of Gaul. appointed by Julian in 361 to the post of Nebridius.

To Valens

Secundus Sallustius. Præfect of the East. He held this office under Julian, and was offered the empire on the death of Julian. A different person from Sallustius who was præfect of Gaul in 361 and consul in 363. The præfect of the East is called Secundus Sallustius by Ammianus, and was employed by Julian at Chalcedon in December 361.

Victor, a native of Constantinople. A general under Julian. Promoted by Jovian. Consul in 369.

Arinthæus. One of the generals of Julian in the Persian war. Consul in 372.

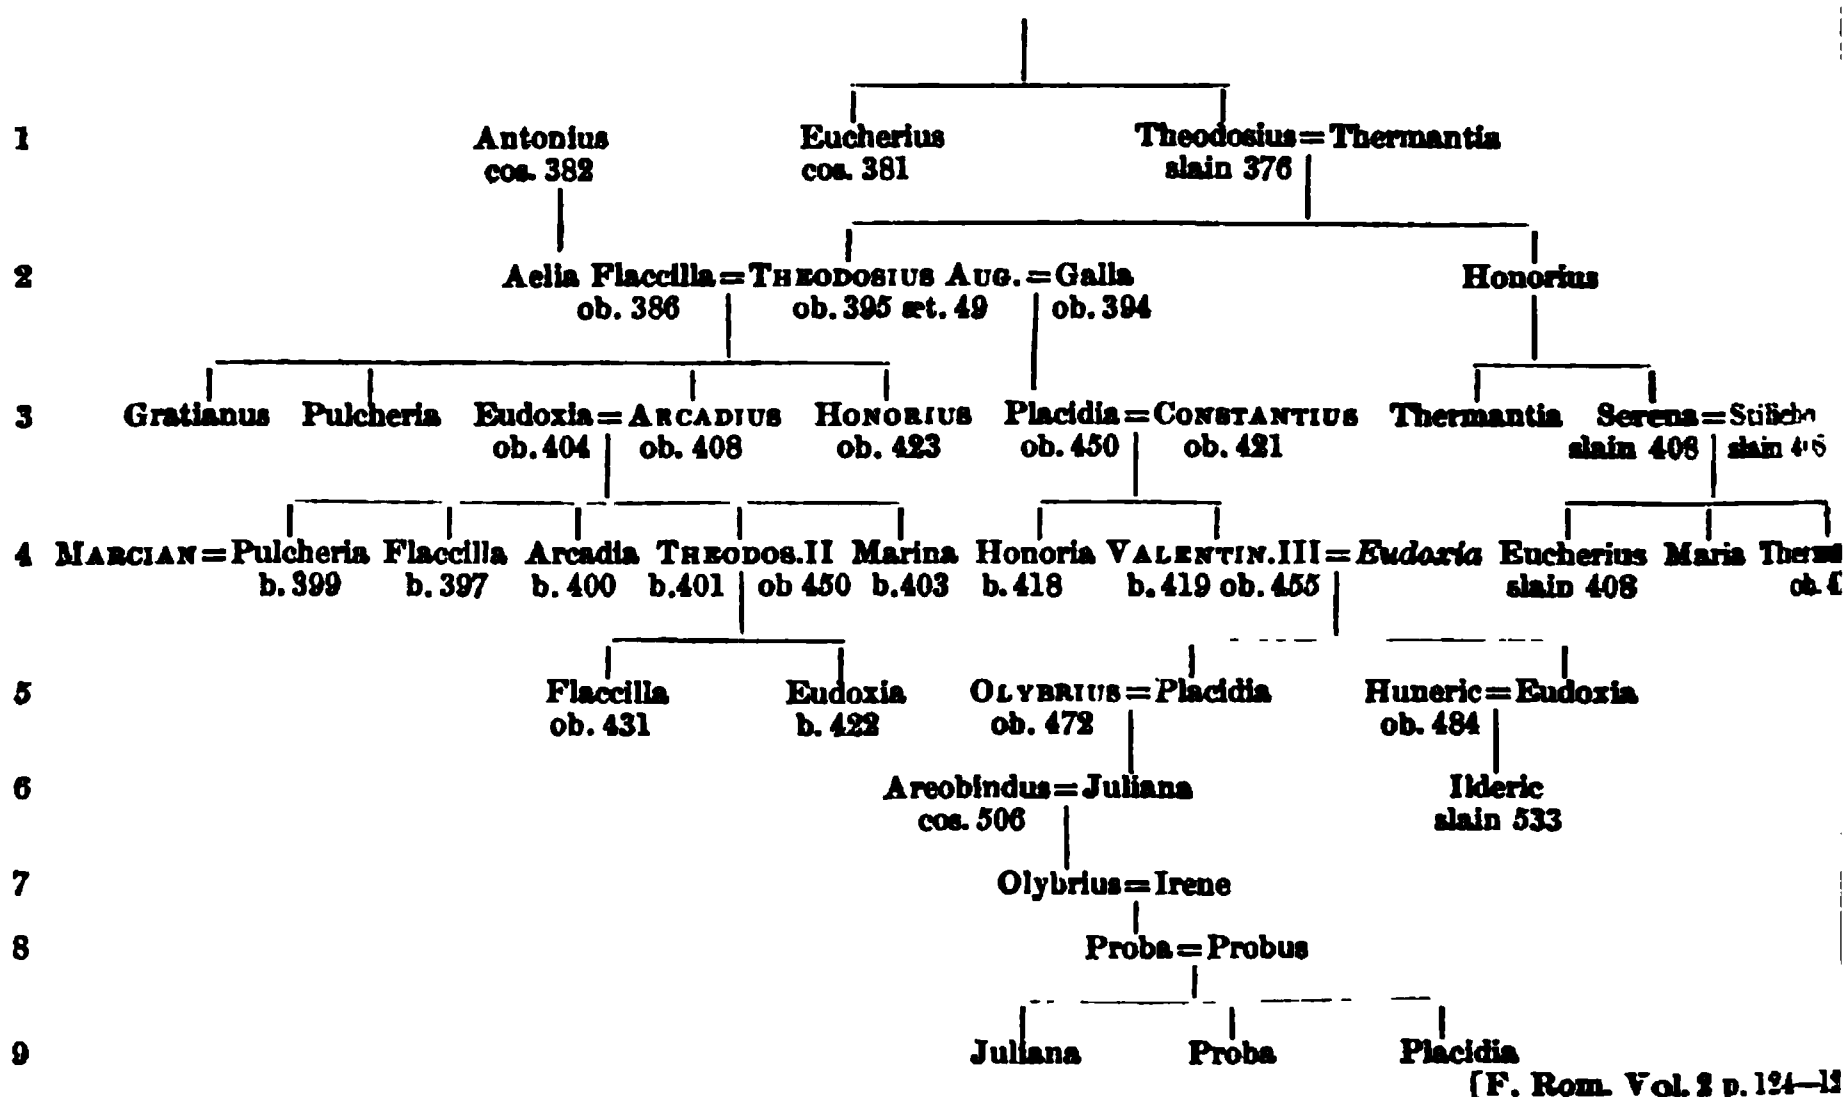

Lupicinus. Served under the Cæsar Julian in Gaul in 359. Sent into Britain in 360. Consul in 367.

Serenianus. Presided over the domestics under Valens.

VALENS. Until the year 369 Valens was blameless. Ammianus impartially sums up his good and evil qualities: Amicus fidelis et firmus, ultor acer ambitionum, severus militaris et civilis disciplinæ corrector,—provinciarum æquissimus tutor—tributorum onera studio quodam molliens singulari.—Nec sub alio principe in hujusmodi negotiis melius secum actum esse meminit Oriens. Super his omnibus liberalis erat cum moderatione. He admits however that Valens was magnarum opum intemperans adpetitor—in crudelitatem proclivior, subagrestis ingenii, nec bellicis nec liberalibus studiis eruditus—in sanguinem sæviebat et dispendia locupletum,—nihil agi contra libidi- nem suam patiebatur; injuriosus alias et iracundus et criminantibus sine differentia veri vel falsi facillime patens.

THEODOSIUS : a Spaniard of Italica, the city which had produced Trajan. The various branches of the Theodosian family are set forth in the following table.

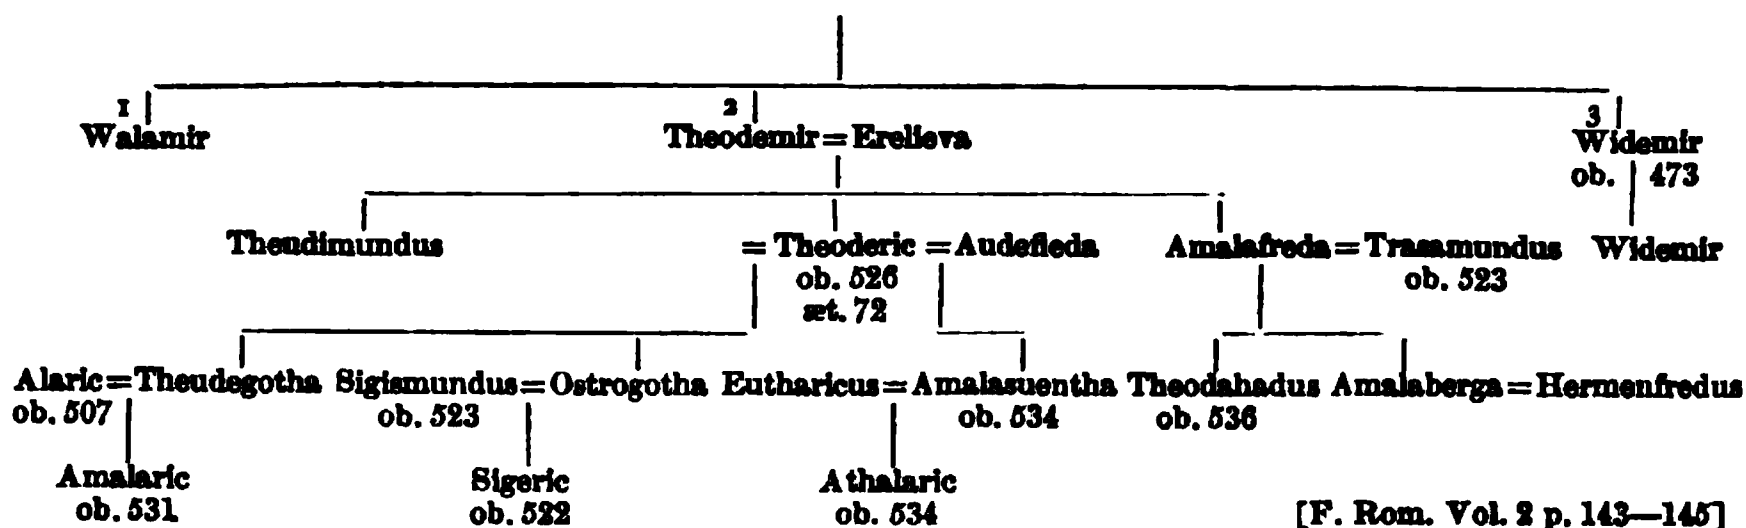

Juliana the daughter of Olybrius and Placidia was offered in marriage by Zeno to Theoderic, after the two Theoderici had made peace with one another. (See the Tables A. D. 478.) Therefore in 479. After this date Juliana married Areobindus, the son of Dagalaiphus. We obtain from Theophanes the following pedigree.

THEODERICUS. This great king deserves a place among the Roman emperors, because he ruled Italy with the consent of the eastern emperor, and adopted the Roman forms of government.

Theoderic is called the son of Walamir by Anon. Valesii, and by the Greek writers Malchus, Damascius, Malalas, Theophanes ; but was in reality the son of Theodemir. The following table will exhibit the House of Theoderic.

The three brothers served under Attila at the battle of Chalons in 451. Walamir was the chief favourite of Attila. After the death of Attila in 453 they were seated in Pannonia ; and Walamir gained a victory over the sons of Attila at the time of the birth of Theoderic, about the year 454.

Theoderic in his 8th year was delivered as a hostage to Leo ; and according to Theophanes he received education at Constantinople : but the anonymous historian calls him illiterate, and this is confirmed by the address of the Gothic chiefs to Amalasuentha, in Procopius. From these testimonies it appears that Theoderic neglected the arts of writing and reading ; but yet while resident at Constantinople acquired much practical knowledge and wisdom, and profited by oral instruction.

After ten years he was released. His ten years at Constantinople may be placed at 461—471, and could not have been later than 462—472, agreeing with his birth at 454. He began to reign after the death of his father not later than 476, when he was about 22 years of age.

The government of Theoderic in Italy was wise, pacific, and beneficial ; and, except in his conduct to Boethius and Symmachus, he cannot be charged with acts of cruelty. Very different was the character of the founder of the great Frank empire. The atrocious acts of Clovis, in the latter years of his reign, his ingratitude, perfidy, and cruelty, may be traced in the narrative of his panegyrist Gregory of Tours. But as Clovis and his immediate descendants belong to the times included in this volume, the genealogy of the Merovingian dynasty is given; to which the other two races of the kings of France have been added, as their genealogy will conveniently illustrate the history of France.

The dynasty of Clovis terminated in 752, when the father of Charlemagne declared himself king. Charlemagne himself began to reign over the Franks 24 Sept. 768, at the age of 26 years; over the Lombards in June 774; and as emperor of the west 25 Dec. 800. He died 28 Jan. 814. Some authors have inaccurately computed the duration of his reign; but the preceding dates determine the two periods.

He reigned over the Franks 45y 3^m 5^d over the Lombards ... 39 7 0 as emperor 13 1 4.

The line of Charlemagne ceased to reign in France in 987, 300 years after his ancestor Pepin d'Heristal became Mayor of the Palace.

§ 2. CONSULS.

In F. Rom. Vol. II p. 179—208 the true list of consuls within A. D. 14—579 is compared with the lists of Cassiodorus and the Paschal Chronicle. It will there be seen that, from the 7th of Constantine in 312 to the 20th of Heraclius in 630, the Chronicle has the right number of consulships, but that in the preceding period from the death of Augustus A. D. 14 to the 7th of Constantine in 312 there are some interpolations and some omissions, which disturb the series in many parts, and place many consulships either above or below their true position; and that in the whole number between Sex. Pompeius Sex. Apuleius A. D. 14 and Constantine II Licin. II A. D. 312 the Chronicle has two interpolated years, which carry back the consuls Pompeius and Apuleius to A. D. 12, two years higher than their real station.

Cassiodorus, as it is there shewn, omits eight consulships between Sex. Pompeius Sex. Aquileius A. D. 14, and Cethegus A. D. 504, and interpolates twelve. When these twelve interpolated consulships are balanced against the eight omitted, he has on the whole, between the two Sexti and Cethegus four years too many, and the two Sexti are carried upwards four years too high.

It will be sufficient here to mark the true list of consuls beginning at the death of Augustus.

§ 3. INDICTIONS. ERA OF DIOCLETIAN. ERA OF ANTIOCH.

It has been shewn in a former work^a that the era of Antioch was reckoned from Nov. 1 B. C. 49 U. C. Varr. 705. The first year therefore of Antioch was nearly conumerary with the 264th year of the Seleucidæ, which commenced in October B. C. 49. But if the first year was conumerary with the 264th, the 301st year of Antioch, with which this Table begins, was conumerary with the 564th of the Seleucidæ.

That the era of Diocletian was computed from his accession in 284 is determined by Theon, who attests that the 29th day of Athyr in the year of Nabonassar 1112 fell within the 81st year of Diocletian. Athyr 29 of the 1112th year was 25 Nov. 364, and the 81st year of Diocletian was then current. But if the 81st year was current 25 Nov. 364, the first was already current 25 Nov. 284, and we are carried back to his accession Sept. 17. It is probable however that in Alexandrian computation the years of this era were deduced from Aug. 29, as in the Alexandrian coins of Diocletian given at A. D. 285.

The Indictions in Marcellinus and in Du Fresnoy are compared with the consulships and the Julian year in which they terminate. In the following Table they are compared with the years in which they begin, because the years of the Christian era are here made the measure of the rest, and contain the beginnings of all the other epochs.

§ 4. EUSEBIAN YEARS.

THE birth of Abraham is placed by Eusebius in October B.C. 2016.^a The years are computed from that point. In this Table the notation of the Armenian Copy is followed, which places the first Olympic games in the year 1240, and the Nativity in the close of the year 2015, in the 4th year of the 194th Olympiad. The Eusebian years commence in October; and as 1240 contained the beginning of Ol. 1. 1 July B. C. 776, it commenced in October B. C. 777. Ol. 194. 4 was the 776th Olympic year, commencing in July B. C. 1. But, as the Eusebian year 1240 was still current when the first Olympic year began, then $1240 + 775 = 2015$, and the 2015th year was still current when the 776th began. And as the year 1240 commenced in October preceding, or Oct. B. C. 777, so the year 2015 commenced in October preceding, or Oct. B. C. 2. These two epochs determine the position of the other years. Hieronymus throws back the year 1241 which in the mind of Eusebius began at October B. C. 776 and contained the last nine months of the first Olympic year, to July preceding, and reckons it to commence with that Olympic year in July B. C. 776.

^a Eusebius therefore places it 20 years below the date of Usher, and more than a century below the real time. I subjoin, to be compared with Eusebius, the dates of some eminent chronologers, together with my own date for that event:

This Table exhibits thus far of the Chronology which belongs to the present volume, and gives the Eusebian years from the year 2001 to the end, with the continuation of Hieronymus and Prosper.

§ 5. SCRIPTURE CHRONOLOGY.

Before we proceed to the Gospel Chronology, it will be convenient to survey the whole subject of Scripture Chronology, as it is set forth in the first volume of the Fasti Hellenici. It is there shewn that the Hebrew notation gives 1656 years from Adam to the Flood, and 352 from the Flood to the birth of Abraham; that 505 years are marked in Scripture from the birth of Abraham to the Exode; that from the Exode to the Temple were 612 years. Then followed the last 37 years of Solomon, and 389 from the death of Solomon to the destruction of the Temple, which happened in the 587th year before the Christian era. Reckoning upwards from this point, we obtain from these collected numbers B. C. 2130 for the birth of Abraham, B. C. 2482 for the Flood, and B. C. 4138 for the creation of Adam.

Mr. Cuninghame has preferred for the time which precedes the birth of Abraham the longer generations of the Septuagint, and places Adam at B. C. 5478, and the Flood at B. C. 3217. His dates have been adopted by Professor Wallace, who also accepts the longer computation of the Greek version, and rejects the numbers of the Hebrew text. He has fully treated this subject in his dissertation on the True Age of the World. I propose briefly to examine his arguments.

He observes p. 50: "The argument that the shorter generations are repugnant to the course of nature is neither placed in a clear light, nor fairly answered by Mr. Clinton F. H. Vol. I p. 292."

I have affirmed that from Jacob to Moses the average of life was from 150 to 120 years, and I have shewn from Scripture that in this period Benjamin had 10 sons before he had attained 30 years; that in the line of Judah two generations were of 15 years each; that in the line of Joshua 9 generations were of 20 years each. From which facts it was no unfair but a necessary conclusion that the age of puberty was the same in that time as at present.

Mr. Wallace p. 55: "Mr. Clinton sees nothing wonderful in the fact that idolatry should have sprung up during the lives of Noah and Shem, and accounts for it from the principle of the fecundity of mankind and their dispersion. It is very strange however that Terah, who is mentioned in Joshua xxiv. 2 as the only idolater among the postdiluvian patriarchs, should have dared to follow the practice of the heathen while all his pious ancestors were yet alive!"

The epithet only is added by Mr. Wallace himself. No such expression appears in the original text, which is thus rendered: Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Your fathers dwelt on the other side of the flood in old time, even Terah the father of Abraham and the father of Nachor, and they served other gods^a.

It is observed at p. 57: "The shorter computation is inconsistent with the credible accounts of profane history and the existence of so many populous kingdoms and em-

^a The Septuagint has πέραν τοῦ ποταμοῦ παρῆκον οἱ πατέρες ὑμῶν—καὶ ἐλάτρευσαν θεοῖς ἑτέροις. Dathe:

Trans Euphratem habitarunt majores vestri—aliasque Deos coluerunt.

“ pires in the days of Abraham.—The history of the battle “ of the four kings against five in Gen. XIV implies a very “ great degree of populousness and civilisation in a single “ region, and more than can be admitted on the shorter com“ putation. Nor can Sir Isaac Newton’s answer be consi“ dered decisive, that the numbers of the allied armies must “ have been small because they were overcome by Abraham
 “ with a very small force; for it is the province of the Most “ High to save by many or by few. The account of Egypt
 “ at the descent of Abraham indicates that it was then an “ ancient, populous, and long established kingdom, and the “ profane records of its history—reach to a period far be“ yond that assigned by the Hebrew text. In an excellent “ article entitled Annotations Géologiques à la Genèse—it “ appears that the epoch B. C. 2900 may in fact be consi“ dered as that of the foundation of the kingdom of Egypt.”

We are not to be misled by the pompous appellations kings and kingdoms into the belief of the existence of populous states and empires. In the language of that early time the chief of every petty township was a king. Joshua conquered 31 kings within the narrow space of Canaan. The territories of all the five kings, the allies of Abraham, lay within a region perhaps 17 miles in length. It is well remarked by an ingenious traveller that the kings of those days resembled the Sheiks of modern times. With respect to the kingdom of Egypt, the years assigned to the Egyptian dynasties are not sufficiently authentic to justify us in placing that kingdom at B. C. 2900. Josephus places Menes more than 1300 years before the reign of Solomon; that is, about B. C. 2320. Jackson after a careful investigation places Menes at B. C. 2219 or 2220. Hales at B. C. 2231, although he calls this date rather too low.

Mr. Wallace at p. 59 remarks: “ Mr. Clinton has proved “ that an army of Medes occupied Babylon about B. C. 2233
 “ —according to his own computation about 250 years after “ the Flood—when, as he says p. 296, the population of the “ earth would amount to many millions. And yet in the “ same page he remarks, ‘ It is not likely that 101 years “ after that event the population would exceed 50,000 per“ sons, and this number they would certainly have reached

“ within 160 years of the Flood.’ Now even on the Eulerian ratio this number would increase only to about $6\frac{1}{2}$ millions in his interval of 90 years, which is far from many millions.”

There is no inconsistency in my argument. I have assumed as probable that the numbers would double themselves every twelve years for 300 years after the Flood. In 156 years these thirteen periods would produce 49,152, and in 168 years fourteen periods would produce 98,304. I was therefore justified in concluding that at 160 years from the Flood the numbers would be at the least 50,000. Again, in 240 years twenty periods would produce 6,291,456, and in 252 years twenty-one periods would give 12,582,912. Therefore in 250 years from the Flood the numbers of mankind were fast advancing to this latter amount, and might be assumed as nine or ten millions. The term many is relative, and its value is fixed by the other circumstances. Nine millions or even six millions would be many in Holland but few in France; would be many in Egypt but few in China. If the inhabitants of the earth had been 9 or 10 millions, these might be called many at 250 years after the Flood. When Abraham after the 75th year of his life visited Egypt, the population of the earth upon the lower estimate had attained more than two hundred millions.

The date which I assigned, after Niebuhr, for the capture of Babylon by the Medes, B.C. 2233, was founded upon a testimony in Simplicius. It is now known that the text of Simplicius has another meaning^b, and the date of that capture is brought down to B.C. 2212, and that event is placed at the distance of 270 years from the Flood, and 110 years from the assumed date of the dispersion in the days of Peleg.

But a new form has been given of late to the objection founded on the shortness of the time by many able enquirers, which view upon this subject, before we proceed to the other remarks of Professor Wallace, it is important to consider. It is inferred from the analogy of languages that the descendants of Japhet dwelt together in Iran for a considerable period before their separation; that this period preceded the earliest records of the most ancient nations, records which nevertheless ascended to a remote antiquity; and that on these accounts the space is to be enlarged between the Flood and Abraham.

Admitting however the proposition that the Japhetic families inhabited Iran before they occupied Greece and India and other countries, and accepting this as a historical fact, we are enabled to shew that it may be reconciled with that chronology, which, being founded upon the Hebrew text, places the flood at B. C. 2482 and the dispersion in the days of Peleg, 160 years afterwards at B. C. 2322.

We may assume that the race of Japhet dwelt together for 200 years B. C. 2322—2122 in this Iranian upland, which in its fullest extent, including all the countries between the Tigris and the Indus, is more than five times larger than France^c. But if the Japhetic family remained in Iran before their separation 200 years, they remained there till the 360th year after the flood, and at 360 years from the flood they had attained 100 millions. For, as in 300 years from the flood the numbers of mankind would have reached 200 millions (see F. H. I p. 295), it is plain that in 360 years the population of the earth would attain 300 millions; and at least a third of that number would belong to the children of Japhet. Nor is it incredible that a country five times larger than France should at the end of those 200 years have contained 100 millions of inhabitants.

When the great Iranian or Japhetic family was broken up, the Brahmans migrated eastwards to Hindostan; the children of Javan issuing from Iran to the northward and westward colonised Asia Minor and the coasts and islands of the Ægæan sea; and under the name of Pelasgi occupied Greece. The Germanic tribes passed into Germany. The Celts occupied Gaul, Spain, and Britain. They had been preceded by their brethren the Lappes and Finns, whom they had driven

^c Iran as limited eastward in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 257 contains 1,001,345 square English miles. Add the countries eastward as far as the Indus. Add to the east of the liminary line between the parallels 34° and 24° the countries to the Indus which in aftertimes were ascribed to India. These countries contain 123,449 square English miles; and the whole country occupied in that primeval period by the family of Japhet has an area of 1,124,794 square miles. Compare the area of France, $206,350 \times 5\frac{1}{2} = 1,134,925$. This space therefore is to the space contained in France nearly as $5\frac{1}{2}$ to one.

northward or reduced to subjection. The Slavonians were spread over the vast countries of Russia. The Tartarians passing the Oxus took possession of Central Asia, where they are found ages afterwards under the various names of Turks, Monguls, and Mandchews. In process of time a tribe of the Tartar race entering China from the north-west gradually peopled that vast level as far as the Eastern Sea. The Medes and Persians meanwhile remained in Iran. In these movements of the Iranian family we discern nothing inconsistent with our dates. The capture of Babylon by the Medes in B. C. 2212 (270 years after the flood and 110 years after the dispersion in the days of Peleg) was more than a century below the time at which the children of Japhet were seated in Iran. The first date assigned to the Pelasgi in Greece is B. C. 1697. But this was more than 425 years later than the date which we have marked for the migration out of Iran.

The Indian chronology is thus given by Prichard. Vol. 4 p. 98—104: "All Indian chronology is matter of doubtful computation and even of conjecture down to the period when the history of the Hindoos comes into contact with that of Europe." p. 101: "The war of the Mahabharata was fought in the Gangetic countries. The era of this war is fixed by a conjecture of the probable length of reigns to the 14th century before the Christian era." p. 103: "The date of recorded astronomical observations is fixed to B. C. 1391." p. 104: "The Vedas were not compiled till the 14th century before the Christian era." "The era of the Mahabharata or Great War, the astronomical observations of Parasara, and the compilation of the Vedas belong nearly to the same period." p. 105: "The age of the Great War being considered as a historical epoch, attempts have been made to calculate further upwards, and to estimate the antiquity of the older Indian monarchies, by means of the princes of the Solar and Lunar lines, who are said to have reigned over different parts of India from the earliest periods. Colonel Tod was of opinion that 55 reigns might be reckoned upon satisfactory evidence from the age of Krishna, which was that of the Mahabharata, to Budha, the founder of the Lunar race. He makes this period 1100 years. He adds an equal number of years for the interval between Krishna

“ and the era of Vickramaditya, which is known to have commenced at B. C. 56. He obtains therefore ‘ $1100 + 1100 + 56 = \text{B. C. } 2256$.’ At that period colonel Tod supposes that the first colonies of Hindoos arrived in India from the countries of Central Asia, where the Indian race originated.” But Prichard observes p. 106 that “ many circumstances prevent our wholly relying upon the accuracy of the results of these calculations; that, according to Mr. Elphinstone’s more critical judgment, the lists of the two parallel lines of Lunar and Solar kings are so contradictory as to be unworthy of implicit confidence.” “ Previous to the Mahabharata war every thing is mixed with fables and anachronisms.” We must therefore reject the date of Col. Tod, for Budha the founder, as not supported by sufficient evidence, and we must rest upon the epochs which are assigned to the 14th century before Christ as the highest authenticated dates in Indian Chronology. And yet the date of the Great War is rendered doubtful by Col. Tod himself; for he places the reign of Krishna, who was contemporary with that war, at B. C. 1156. If however we accept the epoch named to us, or B. C. 1391, as an ascertained and authentic period, that epoch is 730 years after the time at which the Brahmans might first enter the Punjab.

The authentic annals of China, by the testimony of Confucius himself, do not ascend higher than B. C. 1100, and this period is a thousand years later than the epoch given for this migration of the Tartars out of Iran.

It has been shewn then that none of the records of these ancient nations, the Pelasgi, the Babylonians, the Indians, and the Chinese interfere with what has been assumed; namely that the dispersion in the days of Peleg was 160 years after the flood, and that the migration of the family of Japhet out of Iran was 360 years after the flood. This point of time, 200 years after the first entrance into Iran, and 360 after the flood, is assumed as about the period of these great migrations, which might have occurred partly a few years before, partly a few years after that epoch.

The most probable dates for Egypt seem to be that, about 160 years after the flood, the children of Ham might occupy Egypt, and found the kingdom of the Pharaohs in B. C. 2322.

Menes is placed at about B. C. 2220, a century after that occupation. Abraham at 427 years from the flood found a Pharaoh reigning in Egypt, 267 years after that first colony. The chronology of the Egyptians themselves is at variance with this account; for they reckoned 8000 years to the time of Solon, which would carry back the rise of the Egyptian kingdom to about B. C. 8600. But this is totally irreconcilable with the Mosaic genealogies. For by the longest estimate of the Mosaic generations, adopting the longer computations of the Septuagint, and including the second Cainan, we can only obtain B. C. 5478 for Adam and B. C. 3217 for the flood^d. The era then assigned by the Egyptian priests for their state, being more than 3000 years higher than the highest possible date for Adam, and more than 5400 years higher than the highest possible date for the flood, must be rejected, as a fabricated epoch.

An objection founded on the physical varieties of man is reported by Prichard to the following effect: "One of the " greatest difficulties connected with the opinion that all man" kind are descended from one primitive stock arises from the " shortness of the period allowed by the received chronology
 " for the development of those physical varieties which distin-
 " guish the different races of men." It is contended that the physical influences of soil and climate must have been exerted during a long course of years before such phenomena could have become so diffused by propagation as to be "found common to a whole family or breed." Dr. Prichard himself observes, that "the force of this objection rests in the period " of time from which the varieties can be proved to have " existed." But the only evidence produced is that certain
 " Egyptian paintings which may be dated at 1000 or 1500
 " years before Christ, display the forms and complexions of the " Negro, the Egyptian, and of some Asiatic nations distinctly
 " marked." The whole force of this evidence depends upon the date of these paintings, and this is so uncertain that the dates proposed are not within 500 years of each other. Nor is it shewn to us that the lower of these dates rests on any proof. The uncertainty then of the date destroys the value of the testimony. But even if we admit the lower date, B. C. 1000, as the epoch of these paintings (which however is by no means established), this date will be more than 1300 years after the epoch at which according to our chronology the children of Ham might pass into Egypt and Africa. And in that period, embracing 39 generations, it is reasonable to conclude that such varieties as these paintings exhibit might have been produced.

I now return to the observations of Professor Wallace. He writes as follows at p. 61 : “ Mr. Clinton adds that ‘ it is “ difficult to imagine what adequate motive the Jews could “ have had for shortening their genealogies.’ Not more difficult in our opinion than to imagine what adequate motive “ the Jews could have for shortening the life of Jesus Christ. “ A difficulty however ‘ to imagine an adequate motive’ for “ any transaction is no proof that it did not take place.”

But in this case, in the absence of all evidence, it is absolutely necessary to assign a motive. He who charges the Jews with corrupting their own genealogies, in order to make his accusations credible, is bound to shew why they did it. The whole force of the charge depends upon this. Mr. Horne in his Introduction to the Scriptures, having traced the genuineness of the Pentateuch to the reign of Solomon, very justly concludes that the Pentateuch which we now possess is genuine, because the Jews could have had no motive during the period between Joshua and Solomon for substituting a spurious production.

Professor Wallace however finds that they had a motive for corrupting their genealogies, which he states as follows p. 61 : “ The Jews did not attempt to ‘ shorten the genealogies,’ that is, to corrupt the chronology of the Scriptures, “ till all the witnesses were dead who knew Jesus.—But when “ they found afterwards that the Christians constantly proved “ out of the Septuagint that Jesus was the Messiah, they had “ then a sufficient motive for ‘ shortening the genealogies,’ if “ they could make it appear from the Hebrew text that our “ Lord had come about 15 centuries earlier than the time “ fixed by tradition ; and that the epoch of the true Messiah’s “ advent had not yet arrived.” p. 172 “ (according to the Rab- “ bins) the world is to last in its fallen state 6000 years, and “ then is to be restored and purified as at the beginning.—

 “ There are to be seven ages of the world, each containing “ 1000 years.” p. 178. 179 “ ‘ The belief of the seven ages,’ says
 “ Dr. Russell, ‘ has been detected in the writings of Heathens, “ Jews, and Christians. It is traced in the Sibylline Oracles, “ in Hesiod, in the work ascribed to Darius Hystaspes the “ king of the Medes, to Hermes Trismegistus.—Plato quotes
 “ from Orpheus the same mystical doctrine—that the earth
 “ was doomed in the seventh age to be consumed by fire.’ ”
 [On this mistake of the sense of Plato see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 224. Their guide to this error has been Jackson. But it is remarkable that neither Russell nor Wallace should have taken the trouble to consult Plato himself, in order to know what Plato really said.] “ Dr. Russell discovers in these “ opinions, however ill founded and absurd they may seem,
 “ the principal motive which actuated the Jews about the “ beginning of the second century in their attempt to vitiate
 “ the most authentic of their chronicles. ‘ Their rejection of “ Christ,’ says he, ‘ rendered necessary an extensive change in “ their dates and calculations.’ ” p. 188 “ It is manifest that “ there is great reason to suspect that the numbers contained “ in the Hebrew text which have reference to dates and to
 “ the age of the world have been systematically and exten“ sively altered. Dr. Russell cites a passage from the cele“ brated Abulpharajius, in which he asserts that the Jews, “ believing it to have been foretold that the Messiah was to “ have been sent in the last times, altered the chronology in “ order to produce a reason for rejecting Jesus Christ. Thus “ they made it appear by their new computation that Christ
 “ was manifested in the very beginning of the fifth millennium, “ near to the middle of the period to which the duration of “ the earth was to be limited ; that is,—not more than 7000 “ years in all. But the computation of the Septuagint, he “ observes, shewed that Christ did actually come in the middle “ of the 6th millenary, the very time at which the prediction
 “ of the Old Testament led mankind to expect his advent.
 “ The learned Doctor refers also to the candid Augustine,
 “ who states that the Jews were suspected of having cor“ rupted their copies—and particularly of having altered the “ generations and lives of the antediluvian patriarchs out of “ dislike to the Christians.—Though Augustine saw that the “ temptation to vitiate the sacred text lay with the Rabbins,

 “ and that the Greek translators had no inducement to alter
 “ the original, he was unwilling to believe that either party
 “ could have intentionally altered the Scriptures, thinking it “ more probable that the differences had originated in the “ wish of a transcriber to render the generations more natu“ ral.” p. 191 “ Dr. Russell states that the publication of the “ Seder Olam Rabba in A. D. 130 may with certainty be re“ garded as the epoch at which the Jews altered their genea-“ logies and changed the dates of the great events.”

Hales had already suggested the same argument from Ephrem Syrus and from Abulpharajius, that the Jews expected the Messiah in the middle of the 6th millennium, and shortened the genealogies to make it appear that the true time was not yet come. He proceeds to shew that the origin of this notion of 6000 years is explained by Gregory of Oxford, whom he quotes. He refers also to the Sibylline Oracles, Hesiod, Hystaspes, and affirms that this period of 6000 years was adopted by the fathers, and that the prevalence of the tradition throughout the pagan, Jewish, and Christian world, was a sufficient reason with the Jews for shortening their chronology.

Hystaspes and the Sibyl are largely quoted by Lactantius. It is needless to urge that these are spurious writings, like the writings falsely ascribed to Orpheus and to Sanchoniatho. Nor is it necessary here to examine the authority of that period of 6000 years. We have only to enquire how the Jews understood it, and whether they were induced on this account to mutilate their genealogies. This term of 6000 years was understood to terminate at the end of the world. The language was Ætate in sexta cessabit machina mundi. The world was to be destroyed by fire. Then was to follow a regeneration and a reign of Apollo or the Sun. The Jews then would not, as Ephrem Syrus and Abulpharajius suppose, have altered their numbers to meet the argument of the Christians. They would assert that the character described had not yet appeared. The fathers are inaccurate in their period; for if there is any thing in the Jewish period of 6000 years, it is required that the six millenniums should be perfect and complete from Adam to the birth of Christ in the reign of Augustus. But as the fathers could only obtain five millenniums and a half from their Chronology, they inaccurately substituted this defective and incomplete period for six millenniums. But how could 5500 years represent 6000 years?

Mr. Wallace refers these mutilations of the genealogies to A. D. 130, which Dr. Russell, whom he follows, has affirmed to be with certainty the epoch. But Mr. Cuninghame himself admits that the shorter genealogies were known to Josephus and were inserted before the Jewish war. His words are these. "I have recently been led to change my opinion upon " one point, being now compelled by the force of evidence to " conclude that the corruption of the chronology must have " taken place at an earlier period than I formerly supposed.
" I now believe it to have been in the interval between our " Lord's death and the beginning of the Jewish war. This " allows more than 30 years for the purpose, which is quite " sufficient. I also conceive that it must have been well " known to Josephus, and the end for which it was done."

But this fact, that the shorter genealogies were already in the Hebrew text within 30 years after the Ascension, makes the charge of corruption still less credible. For at that early period the Christians had not yet sufficient influence to be formidable to the Jews, who had hopes, while Jerusalem and their temple stood, of putting down the rising sect. Is it to be believed that within 30 years of the Ascension the Jews would corrupt the genealogies in order to produce so obscure and unintelligible a result as that which arises from the period of 6000 years? To what purpose were they to mutilate their genealogies, when there were yet 500 years to their Messiah's Advent, and half a millennium wanting to complete the destined period? If the short numbers were in the copies before the Jewish war, they were there before the Crucifixion. And this is confirmed by another consideration. The Jews are charged with expunging the Second Cainan from the postdiluvian patriarchs when they altered their numbers. It is alleged that this was done at the same time and from the same motive. But Cainan II was absent from the copies used by Philo, and Philo was an old man in A. D. 40, and probably 50 years of age at the time of the Crucifixion. He had therefore studied the Scriptures in Hebrew copies extant before that period. But if Cainan II was absent from those copies, we may infer that the long computations were absent also.

Mr. Wallace observes p. 62: " Mr. Clinton finally asserts " that the translators had a very obvious motive for enlarg-
" ing the Chronology, because the Chaldeans and Egyptians
" laid claim to a remote antiquity. But the difference be" tween the Hebrew and Septuagint is only about 15 cen" turies. The difference indeed was quite sufficient for the " purpose of the Jews in denying the advent of the true
" Messiah, but it was wholly insufficient, nay utterly use" less, for the purpose of coping with the pretensions of the " Chaldeans and Egyptians. For it appears—that Berossus
" claimed for the Chaldeans—no less than 470,000 years,
" and from the fragments of Manetho and the old Chronicle
" preserved by Syncellus that for the first Egyptian kings
" an antiquity is claimed of 36,525 years.—This argument
" therefore is so very absurd that it completely refutes
" itself."

The absurdity would be in supposing that these amounts of years were believed to be Historical time, which were only Astronomical Periods. The Egyptians themselves never laid claim to more than 8000 years in the time of Solon, as we learn from Plato. Eudoxus in the time of Plato interpreted those myriads of years to mean months. And as months they are explained in the Armenian Eusebius. But the 36,525 years were an Astronomical Cycle obtained by multiplying 1461 by 25; as Syncellus computes. In like manner the Chaldean period of 432,000 years in Syncellus is an astronomical period produced by multiplying 24,000 by 18, and 473,040 years were produced by multiplying 1460 by 324.

It has been shewn in the first volume of the Fasti Hellenici p. 289 that the second Cainan was absent from the copies of Philo and Josephus, and omitted by Berossus. On this point Professor Wallace p. 35 has the following remarks:
" Syncellus very properly includes Shem in the genealogy,
" although he was an antediluvian by birth, his antepaido-" gonian age being entirely omitted in the Scripture, and the “ birth of his son being reckoned from the flood. Hence we “ find that all the ancient writers reckon Noah the tenth from “ Adam, and Abraham the tenth from the flood, Shem being “ evidently the eleventh from Adam and Abraham the twenty-

 “ first. p. 40 Nothing is more surprising than the pertinacity “ of error.—We have seen that when the second Cainan is “ admitted into the text Abraham must be reckoned the “ tenth generation from the flood; consequently, if he be “ rejected, Abraham must be reckoned only the ninth, con“ trary to the united voice of antiquity, both sacred and pro“ fane. Hales and Clinton have both cited extracts in proof
 “ of their argument—from Berosus, Josephus, and Philo, “ shewing that Abraham was universally reckoned the tenth “ generation after the flood. The subterfuge adopted by the “ advocates of the Hebrew verity in reckoning Shem—as one “ of the generations after the flood in order to make up their “ number is too weak to require any comment. There is no “ doubt therefore that both Hales and Clinton are in the “ wrong, and that Jackson and Cuninghame are ‘ in the “ right.’ p. 245 Africanus states that from the flood and “ Noah to the descent of Abraham into the promised land
 “ were ten generations,—and from Adam twenty generations.
 “ We have sufficiently discussed the question of the number
 “ of generations in pp. 34—40. It is quite unnecessary “ therefore to resume the subject. Suffice it to say that “ Shem was an antediluvian, and therefore his generation “ could not be reckoned in the number of generations after “ the flood. Neither was it reckoned in the number before
 “ the flood, for Noah was reckoned the tenth from Adam,
 “ and Abraham the tenth from the flood.”

And yet Mr. Wallace had told us p. 35, 36, that Syncellus had properly included Shem in the genealogy, and that Abraham was the twenty-first from Adam! We are not however left in doubt of the meaning of Philo. For Philo, having marked ten generations of which Noah was the tenth, proceeds to give ten other generations, of which he expressly names SHEM as the first and Abraham as the last. And that twenty-one generations were reckoned by those who admitted the second Cainan is proved by Gregory of Nazianzus. For Gregory, who with the LXX admitted the second Cainan, reckons Abraham the twenty-first from Adam. But Origen, who omitted Cainan II, reckons Abraham the 20th from Adam. Africanus reckoned Abraham the 20th from Adam, because Africanus omitted the second Cainan; which Professor Wallace has forborne to mention. On comparing Philo we perceive, that Berosus in the phrase “in the tenth generation “after the flood” spoke inclusively of the generation in which the flood happened; and Hales is in the right in his interpretation of the meaning of Berosus. That Josephus omits the second Cainan will not, I suppose, be denied; for he says “Salah is the son of Arphaxad, and Heber of Salah^c.”

In the period from the Exode to the Temple I have the satisfaction of finding that the amount which I have assigned, 612 years, is confirmed by Mr. Cuninghame, who also agrees in 612 years for the interval. Mr. Wallace supposes a difference between the Hebrew and the Septuagint in this period. p. 49 “Mr. Clinton endeavours to defend the Hebrew chronology especially in the first two ages of the “world; although he is forced to yield to the mass of evidence against it in the book of Judges.” He considers, p. 59, my date for the flood obtained by “a computation “partially interpolated from the Septuagint.” That is, in the period from the exode to the temple, in which I have added 133 years to the numbers of Usher. But there is no such difference between the two copies. In the following list of dates the Hebrew and the Septuagint agree.

The numbers which are the elements of our calculation are identical in both copies.

Mr. Wallace p. 73 speaks of a difference in the regal period. “ The difference between the Hebrew and Septua“ gint Chronologies in this period amounts only to about “ 15 years, which is chiefly owing to an interregnum between “ the reigns of Amaziah and Uzziah not acknowledged by “ Usher and his followers. Again p. 95 “ Eusebius acting “ under Jewish influence reduced the era—by the omission of “ 15 years in the monarchal period.”

But here also no difference whatever exists between the two copies. In the texts upon which the interregnum is founded the Hebrew and the Septuagint have the same numbers^f.

The period from the death of Solomon to the destruction of the temple is thus given :

By Usher B. C. 975—588=(388) 387 years.
In F. H. Vol.1 B. C. 976—587=389y 1m.

^f The numbers in 2 Kings XIV. 21 “ 16 years,” and in XV. 1 “ in the 27th year of Jeroboam” in the LXX, are also 16 years and the 27th year in the Hebrew. The reasons for not admitting the interregnum are offered in F. H. I p. 316.

the 536th year before the Christian era⁸. Cuninghame and Wallace also agree in placing those events at that year.

We now proceed to the Gospel Chronology. The various opinions upon the duration of the Ministry have been touched upon in F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 12—15, and the computations of some early fathers, of Irenæus, of Clemens Alexandrinus, of Tertullian, have been given. It is shewn from Augustine that no evidence remained to fix the year of the Nativity or the year of the Ascension. The early fathers knew nothing upon this subject beyond what was contained in the scriptures which we now possess. If the Apostles in their oral teaching recorded more concerning the life and actions of their Master than is now extant in the Scripture narrative, more was not transmitted to succeeding times. The decisions of the fathers upon the year of the birth of Christ and the duration of the Ministry were founded, as ours are, upon Scripture and not upon traditions.

The whole Gospel History chronologically considered refers to three periods; 1, before the Ministry; 2, during the Ministry; 3, from six days before the last Passover to the end of the Gospel History.

1. The following parts of the four Gospels belong to the First Period, including all the time before the Ministry.

Matthew I. 1—IV. 11.

Luke I. 1—IV. 13.

John I. 1—18 describes the Eternal Existence and the Deity of the Son of God.

3. The transactions of the Third Period are contained in these passages.

Matthew XXVI. 17 to the end. XXVIII. 20.

Mark XIV. 12 to the end. XVI. 20.

Luke XXII. 7 to the end. XXIV. 53.

John XII. 1 to the end. XXI. 25.

The arrangement of the times of these two parts is sufficiently clear. The Second Period comprehending the intermediate space is more difficult. The only probable method of arranging it is to select some particular facts and to distribute the other incidents around them.

⁸ Towards the close of B. C. 536, within Ol. 61. 1 U. C. Varr. 218.

The question is, whether there were three Passovers during the Ministry, or only two; whether the last Passover was the fourth or the third. St. John notices six feasts, three of which were Passovers.

- 1 The First Passover II. 13.
- 2 A feast of the Jews V. 1.
- 3 The last Passover but one VI. 4.
- 4 The feast of Tabernacles VII. 2.
- 5 The feast of Dedication X. 22.
- 6 The Last Passover XI. 55. XIII. 1.

He mentions the first Passover II. 13 And the Jews' Passover was at hand, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem. II. 23 Now when he was in Jerusalem at the Passover in the feast day many believed on his name. This Passover happened before John the Baptist was cast into prison: III. 22. 24. After this Passover Jesus came into Galilee: IV. 3. After that journey another feast: V. 1 After this there was a feast of the Jews, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem. St. John then briefly relates some of the things which were done by Jesus during that stay at Jerusalem, and then proceeds VI. 1—4 After these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee which is the sea of Tiberias, and a great multitude followed him because they saw the miracles which he did on those that were diseased. And Jesus went up into a mountain and there he sat with his disciples. And the Passover a feast of the Jews was nigh. Was the second of these three feasts a Passover mentioned at V. 1 or was it some other feast?

The space from the Baptism to the Ascension was either a little more than three years, or a little more than two. Each of these periods is adopted by some of the ancient writers.

Melito, who flourished about A. D. 160—172, calls the Ministry three years. Hippolytus, who lived A. D. 220—227, places it within three years. Origen, who wrote within A. D. 210—253, varies in his accounts. In his work de principiis, compiled within 227—230, he imagined the period to be a year and four months. But in the hom. in Lucam he rejects or doubts this opinion. In the work against Celsus, composed about A. D. 248, he reckons the Ministry at less than three years; and in the comm. in Matthæum, composed according to Eusebius after his work against Celsus, “almost "three years." Eusebius A.D. 308—340 computed 3 years and a half. Apollinarius of Laodicea, who may be placed at A.D. 362—380, reckoned only two years. Epiphanius A.D. 347—402, reckons three Passovers. Chrysostom, A. D. 331—407, marks the third year current. Interpreting John V. 1 he observes "What feast? In my opinion the feast of Pentecost." Gaudentius, A. D. 387, quoted by Lardner allowed only one year. Annianus and Panodorus A. D. 412 computed 3 years to the Ministry.

The Paschal Chronicle cir. A. D. 629 numbers four Passovers and computes three years and 76 days from the Baptism to the Passion. Andreas of Cæsarea (cir. A. D. 800) assigns three years and a half to the ministry. Lastly Syncellus A. D. 808 reckons three years from the Baptism to the Crucifixion.

Modern chronologers are also divided in their opinions. Scaliger, archbishop Newcome, White, Hales, and Greswell, agree in four Passovers. Others, as Cardinal Noris, Bishop Tomline, and Mr. Benson, think that the feast in John V. 1 was not a Passover, and that the last Passover recorded in the Gospels was the third and not the fourth.

The Second of the Three Periods into which we divided the Gospel History begins at the Baptism and terminates six days before the Last Passover. But this period again may be subdivided into two parts: the first part ends at the feeding of the 5000, a miracle recorded by all the four evangelists; the second embraces the rest of the second period. The space contained in this second subdivision is accurately defined. It includes the last Passover but one in the spring, the feast of Tabernacles in autumn, the feast of Dedication in winter, and ends six days before the last Passover in the spring following. The transactions of twelve months or a little more are contained in this part of the narrative. Our limits of enquiry are therefore confined to the space between the Baptism and the feeding the 5000. The accounts of the four evangelists in the Second Period are set forth and compared in the following Table:

If the last Passover but one was the second Passover, a space of less than a year is given from the first Passover named in the preceding table to the feeding of the 5000. But the things transacted and the regions visited seem to require a longer time. After the first Passover Jesus came into Judea and dwelt there, and the Baptist continued his ministry. Then followed the imprisonment of John: after which event Jesus came into Galilee, then into Samaria; thence again to Galilee. Then he came to Nazareth. Leaving Nazareth he came and dwelt at Capernaum. After this he made the circuit of all Galilee. Then he is present at Jerusalem at a certain feast: marked in John IV. 54. V. 1. From Jerusalem he journeys into Galilee. In Galilee he delivers the Sermon on the Mount; after which he is at Capernaum. He teaches in Galilee and at Capernaum. Then he passed over to the country of the Gadarenes. After this he is at Nazareth. Being in Galilee he sends forth the twelve Apostles, who return from their mission. After their return he passed to the desert of Bethsaida, and there wrought the miracle of feeding the 5000. The discourses and actions of Jesus, and the miracles performed in his progress, might in all occupy almost two years, extending over a second Passover to the approach of a third.

If the feast of St. John V. 1 was not a Passover, this would not determine that no Passover intervened between the first Passover and the last but one. For John has omitted other feasts; as for instance he has omitted to name the feasts of Tabernacles and of Dedication which fell within the first year of the Ministry. Jesus was absent from Jerusalem on the last Passover but one, and he might have also been absent from the second.

If the expression in St. Luke VI. 1, σάββατον δευτερόπρωτον, is rightly interpreted by Scaliger, Casaubon, Schleusner, and others to mean "the first sabbath after the Passover," this would at once establish a Passover between the first and the last but one: for, as Mr. Greswell justly argues, that narrative must be inserted between John V. 1 and John VI. 4. But the interpretation offered by Valckenaer and Grotius is perhaps equally probable, that δευτερόπρωτον means the sabbath which followed Pentecost. Even this interpretation however would still confirm that a Passover intervened between the first and the last but one. For as it is certain that this Pentecost could not have followed the first Passover, it must of necessity have followed a second Passover not named, which occurred between John II. 13 and the Passover in John VI. 4, and therefore adds a fourth Passover to the Ministry.

The precise interval between the Baptism and the first Passover is not fixed by the Gospel narratives. We may collect however that it could not be long; for the first miracle which Jesus wrought was the miracle at Cana, and after that miracle he went down to Capernaum and continued there not many days, and the Passover was at hand. Chrysostom calls the interval "a few days." Epiphanius places the Baptism at November 8; the author of the Paschal Chronicle at Jan. 6, reckoning 76 days to the Passover. Some modern chronologers agree in a short interval. Pagi and Norisius assign Jan. 6 for the Baptism. Mr. Greswell assumes Jan. 24 as the day of the Baptism, and April 9 as the day of the Passover; and this also places the Passover at the 76th day after the Baptism. Other modern interpreters assume longer periods.

The beginning of the ministry of the Baptist is limited by the date of Pilate's government. From Josephus we learn that he governed ten years; and we may collect that his first year was current in the 12th year of Tiberius. Our knowledge of the times of the procurators of Judea is derived from Josephus, who relates that after the banishment of Archelaus, in A. D. 6, Augustus appointed three successive procurators, Coponius, Ambivius, and Rufus, the last of whom was still in office at the death of Augustus; that Tiberius sent Gratus as the successor of Rufus; that Gratus remained eleven years in Judea and was succeeded by Pilate. Rufus then was still in office Aug. 19 A. D. 14. But Gratus, appointed by the new emperor, might arrive in Judea at the close of A. D. 14, or the beginning of 15. His eleventh year would be current from the close of A. D. 24 or the beginning of 25. If Pilate then arrived towards the close of summer A. D. 25, his predecessor had been eleven years current in the government, and Pilate's first year is current in the 12th of Tiberius which began Aug. 19 A. D. 25. Eusebius interprets Josephus in this manner: "He shews that Judea was committed to Pontius Pilate in the twelfth year of the reign of Tiberius." Pilate remained ten years in his government, and was then deposed by Vitellius governor of Syria and sent to Rome. "Pilate," says Josephus, "having passed 10 years in Judea hastened to Rome in obedience to the commands of Vitellius, but before he arrived there Tiberius died." He elsewhere observes that Tiberius in a reign of 22 years appointed only two procurators of Judea^a.

Norisius places the recal of Pilate from his government by Vitellius in November A. D. 36, and his commencement in A. D. 26. But Lardner has shewn from Josephus himself

^a Norisius has collected the testimonies to the government of Vitellius in the East. He was appointed to

that after the removal of Pilate, Vitellius was present at Jerusalem at a passover in the lifetime of Tiberius; that he returned to Antioch, and from thence by the order of Tiberius proceeded to the Euphrates to negotiate with Artabanus king of Parthia; that after that negotiation he sent an account to Tiberius and received from him an answer; that Vitellius then prepared by command of Tiberius for a war in Petra; that on his way thither he was again at Jerusalem at a feast; finally that four days after his arrival he received the news of the emperor's death. This series of events determines this last visit to Jerusalem to the Passover of A. D. 37, the former visit to the Passover of A. D. 36, and the removal of Pilate (a few months before) to the autumn of A. D. 35, about eighteen months before the death of Tiberius. Lardner further confirms from Tacitus that Vitellius was engaged in Parthian affairs in A. D. 36. But if the 10th year of Pilate ended in September or October A. D. 35, his first year commenced in September or October A. D. 25, and if the Baptist's ministry began in October or November A. D. 25, it fell within the first year of Pilate's government.

The early fathers founded their era for the birth of Christ upon the narrative in St. Luke, from whom they collected that Jesus was in his 30th year in the 15th year of Tiberius. From hence they placed the Nativity 15 years before the death of Augustus, in the 42nd or 43rd year of that emperor's reign computed from the death of Cæsar, or the 28th year computed from the death of Antony. But St. Matthew determines that Jesus was born before the death of Herod; and the death of Herod is fixed by the combined evidence of Josephus and Dio, and of the coins of Herod Antipas, at the Passover of B. C. 4 in the 18th year before the death of Augustus. The Nativity of our Lord is therefore thrown back to B. C. 5, full 18 years before the death of Augustus, and his 30th year is current in the 12th year of Tiberius, and the first Passover after the Baptism would be in the spring of that 12th year, A. D. 26. If these propositions are true, it will follow that St. Luke reckoned the years of Tiberius from an earlier date than the death of Augustus. This solution of the difficulty has been adopted by Norisius, by Pagi, by Usher, Lardner, Hales, Greswell, and others, who assume that the years of Tiberius are computed by the Evangelist from U. C. 765 A. D. 12, two years before the death of Augustus. They have however no other reason for selecting that particular year as the epoch than because it is adapted to their own dates for the Ministry of the Baptist.

Those who interpret the 15th of Tiberius literally are beset with still greater difficulties. Samuel Basnage Annales Vol. I p. 115. 254. 402 places the Nativity in B. C. 5, the Baptism in the 15th of Tiberius in A. D. 30, and the Crucifixion in A. D. 33. By this chronology Jesus is 34 at his Baptism, whom St. Luke affirms to be 30. Mr. Cuninghame (Fulness of the Times p. 61—69 Supplement p. 19) takes the 15th of Tiberius in its literal sense and rejects the expedient of supposing a higher epoch for his reign. The positions of Mr. Cuninghame are The Nativity in the spring of B. C. 3, the Ministry of John in the first two months of A. D. 28, the Baptism of Jesus in spring or summer A. D. 28. But he places the death of Herod in spring B. C. 1, which is inadmissible; and he himself adopts the expedient which he had rejected and condemned; for he dates the reign of Tiberius from Jan. 1 A. D. 14, eight months before the death of Augustus. But this also is inadmissible; for the years of Tiberius were computed from August: his tribunician years from June, and the years of his reign from August. Mr. Cuninghame places the Mission of the Baptist in the two first months of A. D. 28 (which he calls the two last months of 27) and supposes the 15th of Tiberius to commence at Jan. 1 A. D. 28. By this expedient he brings the ministry of John within that 15th year. But in reality both the Ministry of the Baptist, assumed to be in the two first months of 28, and the Baptism of Jesus, assumed to be in the spring or summer of 28, would have fallen within the 14th year of Tiberius, whose 15th year commenced August 19 A. D. 28.

The two numbers in St. Luke, the 15th year of Tiberius, and thirty years of age for Jesus at the Baptism, are irreconcilable with each other. But as it was impossible that St. Luke could have been ignorant of the age of Jesus, we are compelled to conclude that he computed the years of Tiberius in a peculiar manner. If the 15th year was current in October A. D. 25 and in the spring of A. D. 26 (within which limits we place the Ministry of John and the Baptism of Jesus), then the first year was current in October A. D. 11 and in the spring of A. D. 12.

It would be desirable to know what interval elapsed between the Nativity of Christ and the death of Herod. After the presentation in the Temple, they returned into Galilee to their own city Nazareth. After the visit of the wise men from the East, the Holy Family proceeded to Egypt, and dwelt there till the death of Herod. The time of that visit of the wise men is not determined by the Gospel narrative. If they visited Bethlehem within the 40 days, that is, before the Presentation in the Temple, the Star must have appeared to them some months before the Nativity; which is the opinion of Chrysostom. Others have supposed that the Star appeared at the Nativity, and that the wise men came to Jerusalem at a later period, which is much more probable. But the dates assigned by Epiphanius, who places the visit of the wise men two years after the Nativity and the Nativity itself four years before the death of Herod, assume too large a space; for, as the highest possible date for Pilate's government, and therefore for the baptism of Christ, is the autumn of A. D. 25, and as the scheme of Epiphanius would place the birth of Christ in January B. C. 8, his numbers thus would give thirty-three years for the age at the Baptism. We may assume the Nativity in the spring of B. C. 5, twelve months before the death of Herod, and 30 years nearly completed will be the age at the Baptism.

Clemens Alexandrinus has reported various opinions upon the day of the Nativity. But not only was the day unknown, but for three hundred years after the Ascension no day was set apart for the commemoration of the Birth of Christ. According to authorities quoted by Geiseler, Julius, who was bishop of Rome A. D. 337—352, first appointed December 25 for this purpose. That it was not yet observed in Cyprus in the time of Epiphanius A. D. 376, we collect from his silence; for Epiphanius in an elaborate arrangement of the dates of the Gospel History makes no mention of Dec. 25. Chrysostom in a discourse pronounced at Antioch which may be assigned to 25 Dec. 387, attests that this day had been observed at Antioch less than ten years. This testimony will determine the institution at Antioch to 25 Dec. 378. After this period we have notices of that day; as at Milan in the reign of Theodosius in 390. In the year 400 Sulpicius Severus records Dec. 25 as the day of the Nativity. Augustine names that day in his work upon the Trinity.

In Egypt Dec. 25 was not yet acknowledged when Cassianus published his tenth Conference. That work of Cassianus was published about A. D. 420. And yet in the Council of Ephesus A. D. 431 a homily was recited of Paulus bishop of Emesa, which had been delivered in the great Church at Alexandria before Cyril the bishop, on Dec. 25 being the day of the Nativity. This day then was appointed at Alexandria in the episcopate of Cyril (which began Oct. 412), within the years 420 and 431.

That our Lord anticipated the Paschal Supper is unanswerably proved by texts of St. John quoted by Casaubon in his argument against Baronius. The Last Supper of Christ with his disciples was before the Passover. The priests went not into the judgment hall, lest they should be defiled, but that they might eat the Passover. It was the preparation of the Passover. The sabbath day was a high day. This anticipation was necessary for the event which was to follow; for from hence it came to pass that Jesus expired upon the cross on the day and in the hour at which the Paschal Lamb was appointed to be slain. The Paschal Lamb was sacrificed towards the close of the 14th day of Nisan, and was eaten three hours afterwards in the evening on which the 15th day of Nisan commenced.

The Paschal full moon was in the spring when the sun entered Aries, and the Paschal Lamb was sacrificed before the full moon. And yet the month began at the phasis of the moon. And this happens according to Newton when the moon is 18 hours old. Therefore the 14th of Nisan might begin when the moon was 13^d 18^h old, and 1^d 0^h 22^m to the full. But sometimes the phasis was delayed till the moon was 1^d 17^h old, and then, if the 1st of Nisan was deferred till the phasis, the 14th would begin only 1^h 22^m before the full moon.

This precision however in adjusting the month to the moon did not exist in practice. The Jews, like other nations who adopted a lunar year and supplied the defect by an intercalary month, failed in obtaining complete accuracy. We know not what their method of calculation was, at the time of the Christian era. But we are not to apply to their time the modern Jewish Calendar or the cycle of 19 years; nor are we to rely upon the accounts of Maimonides writing in the twelfth century, or of other Rabbinical doctors, for the practice of the Jews in the time of Christ; nor can it be determined from their computations in what year of that period the Paschal sacrifice fell upon the sixth day of the week. They used a cycle of 84 years, which was by no means exact; and sometimes (as we learn from Epiphanius and from the author of a Paschal homily in the works of Chrysostom) they observed the passover before the equinox.

If the first Passover after the Baptism was in the spring of A. D. 26, the Crucifixion and the fourth Passover are determined to the year 29; and it remains to enquire whether the Passover of that year was in March or April. The full moon of March is fixed by Mr. Cuninghame's calculation to Friday March 18 at 9^h 16^m P. M. If that was the Paschal moon, we obtain these dates: the 14th of Nisan began at 6 P. M. of March 17 and the 15th of Nisan at 6 P. M. March 18, 3^h 16^m before the full moon; and the Paschal Lamb was slain at 3^h P. M. of Friday March 18, 6^h 16^m before the full moon. It is no insurmountable objection that this was three days before the equinox; for we have seen from the preceding testimonies that a Jewish Passover was sometimes celebrated before the equinox, and, as Mr. Benson properly remarks, in the Mosaic Law there is no injunction which refers to the equinox at all. It has been objected however that March 18 is inadmissible, because if the 16th of Nisan is at March 20 the corn would not be ripe for an offering. But the Law seems only to require that when the sheaf was offered on the 16th of Nisan the barley should be in the ear. That it could be ripe enough to be reaped and used as food at that early season is scarcely credible. If the passover had been delayed until ripeness in this latter sense had been attained, not only a full moon at the equinox would have been excluded, but many vernal full moons after the equinox; and it could rarely happen that the Passover could be celebrated at a vernal full moon at all.

We are now to consider the full moon of April in A. D. 29. Mr. Benson places the new moon at April 2 at 8 P. M. the full moon in the night between the 16th and 17th of April. Mr. Greswell gives the full moon at April 16. Mr. Cuninghame having assigned the full moon of March, as we have seen, to March 18 at 9^h 16^m P. M., his calculation will fix the new moon at April 2 at 3^h 38^m P. M. and the full moon at April 17 at 10^h A. M.

The 17th of April fell upon Sunday in A. D. 29, and, as the crucifixion was upon the 6th day of the week, we obtain the following positions. The 1st of Nisan commenced at 6^h P. M. April 1, at 21^h 38^m before the new moon according to Mr. Cuninghame; the 14th of Nisan at 6^h P. M. of Thursday April 14; the Paschal Lamb was slain at 3 P. M. of Friday Ap. 15, 1^d 19^h before the full moon. Mr. Browne prefers Friday March 18 as the day of the Crucifixion. I incline to the later date, and think that it may be probably assigned to Friday April 15. That Nisan should begin 21^h 38^m before the new moon is not improbable, when we consider the inaccuracy of ancient cycles. The Attic years of Meton had greater variations, even in the beginning of his cycle.

§ 6. KINGS OF PARTHIA.—KINGS OF PERSIA.

Arsaces founded the Parthian Empire about B. C. 250. He first acquired Parthia and then Hyrcania^a. His successors gradually extended their dominion over the adjacent provinces until it included almost all the countries East of the Euphrates which had belonged to the old Persian Monarchy. The empire of the Arsacids under about 28 kings subsisted 475 years, from the rise of Arsaces in the consulship of L. Manlius Vulso C. Atilius Regulus B. C. 250^b to the overthrow of Artabanus by Artaxerxes in the beginning of A. D. 226, at the close of the fourth year of Alexander Severus.

^a Parthia was a mountainous tract on the South Eastern border of the Caspian sea. Hyrcania adjoined it on the West.

^b See F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 243 note a.

Each of the Parthian kings in addition to his own name assumed the name of the founder Arsaces. This appears from Strabo and Justin, and from the coins of the Parthian kings.

I Arsaces. The two years ascribed to Arsaces by Arrian, if reckoned from his first appearance, are too short a space for his acts. They were probably dated from his ultimate success in the reign of Seleucus Callinicus about B. C. 245. 244.

II Tiridates. The son of Arsaces according to Justin; his brother according to Arrian. Arsaces, whose war with Antiochus in B. C. 209 is described by Polybius, was Tiridates. If we date the 37 years of Tiridates from B. C. 244, they will include that war of the year 209, and agree with Polybius and Justin.

III Priapatius, the third king, reigned 15 years. If his 15 years begin at B. C. 207, they may terminate in B. C. 192.

IV Phraates I, the fourth Arsaces according to Justin, succeeded his father about B. C. 192. He subdued the Mardi, and was succeeded by his brother Mithridates.

V Mithridates I, Arsaces V according to Justin, succeeded his brother Phraates I. He conquered Media, Elymæa, and from the Indian Caucasus to the Euphrates, and in India the provinces under Porus.

VI Phraates II, son of Mithridates, succeeded within B. C. 138—130. Which gives about 60 years for the two reigns of Phraates I and Mithridates I. After a short reign he was slain by his Greek soldiers.

VII Artabanus I, son of Priapatius. The three reigns which came between the death of his father and his own elevation might make him 65 years old at his accession.

VIII Mithridates II magnus. The son of Artabanus. The five kings, from Phraates I to Mithridates II inclusive, occupy less than 120 years, giving an average of less than 24 years to each reign. The collective reigns of the three last are 60 years, which terminate about B. C. 75, when the accession of Sanatruces is fixed by testimonies.

IX Sanatruces. Contemporary with Lucullus. He died within Ol. 177 B. C. 72—68. He was lately dead in B. C. 66. The seven years of his reign might be B. C. 75—68. Sanatruces is the ninth Arsaces.

X Phraates III Theus succeeded about B. C. 68. He was slain by his sons.

XI Mithridates III, brother of Orodes, was expelled for his cruelty and slain by Orodes. The civil war between the two brothers is fixed by Appian to B. C. 57 or 56. Wherefore the two reigns of Phraates III and Mithridates III occupied about 12 years, B. C. 68—57.

XII Orodes brother of Mithridates III. His reign may be placed at B. C. 55—37. He slew Crassus in B. C. 53, and his son Pacorus was slain by Ventidius in B. C. 38, after whose death Orodes appointed Phraates his successor, by whom he was murdered in the year following.

XIII Phraates IV began to reign in B. C. 37. In B. C. 20 he restored the Roman prisoners and standards to Augustus. He was slain about A. D. 13 by his son Phraataces. Phraates IV therefore reigned about 52 years.

XIV Phraataces, soon after he had murdered his father, was slain by the Parthian nobles, who appointed Orodes king. But he is soon slain and Vonones is appointed.

XV Orodes II. See Arsaces XIV.

XVI Vonones I son of Phraates IV was chosen king in A. D. 16. See F. H. III p. 301 h. 2nd ed. He also was soon deposed by the Parthians. He first fled into Armenia, and then took refuge with Silanus the Roman governor of Syria. Tiberius afterwards caused him to be put to death.

XVII Artabanus II began to reign in A. D. 17. His transactions with the Romans in A. D. 34, 35 are related by Tacitus. He had also another conference with the Roman governor of Syria, Vitellius, in the reign of Caligula A. D. 37. Artabanus was twice expelled by the Parthian satraps and twice restored. First, in A. D. 35, 36, when Tiridates was set up against him. In another rebellion one Cinnamus was appointed king; but Artabanus was restored and reigned till his death, which happened a short time afterwards. We have no evidence to shew the precise year of his death. The revolt of Cinnamus was after A. D. 37, and Artabanus II probably died in the beginning of the reign of Claudius.

XVIII Gotarzes, son of Artabanus II, slew his brother Artabanus, and was expelled by his brother Vardanes. The city of Seleucia, which had asserted its independence in A. D. 41, and held it during the reign of Gotarzes, surrendered to Vardanes in the seventh year after its revolt.

XIX Vardanes, son of Artabanus II and brother of Gotarzes, after his victory over his brother was slain by the Parthians, and Gotarzes was restored.

Gotarzes after the death of Vardanes recovered the kingdom. The space from the death of Artabanus II to the death of Gotarzes might be 10 years, from the end of A. D. 40 to the end of A. D. 50: of this space more than 4 years belonged to Vardanes, from the beginning of A. D. 44 to the middle of 48. See the Tables A. D. 45.

XX Vonones II. A short and inglorious reign.

XXI Volagases I began to reign in A. D. 51, when he invaded Armenia. He treated with Corbulo in A. D. 54. In 58 he renewed the war for Armenia. In that year the Hyrcanians revolted and Volagases was occupied with a war against them in 60 and 62. Volagases and his brothers Tiridates and Pacorus are engaged in 62 in war with Corbulo. In 63 the Parthians negotiate, and in 66 Tiridates is at Rome. In 71 Titus being at Antioch received ambassadors from Volagases. In 75 this king applied to Vespasian for aid against the Alani, which was not granted.

XXII Pacorus I reigned some years, and reigned in the time of Domitian. He might be the immediate successor of Volagases I, although this is not certain. Probably the son of Volagases, for his brother Chosroes was still living in A. D. 120, about 45 years after the death of Volagases.

XXIII Chosroes, the brother of Pacorus I, reigned in A. D. 114. Deposed by Trajan in 116, but restored, and still living when Hadrian visited Asia. A war with Parthia was prevented by Hadrian. Chosroes might have lived till the close of A. D. 121, for we first hear of his successor Volagases II in February 122. This date for the death of Chosroes agrees with the time of Hadrian's visit to Asia.

XXIV Volagases II. From the testimony of a coin we learn that he was already in the throne in Peritius of the 433rd year of the Seleucidæ, that is to say, in February A. D. 122. Another coin shews that his last year was the 460th year of the Seleucidæ, or A. D. $14\frac{5}{8}$. He therefore reigned 28 years current.

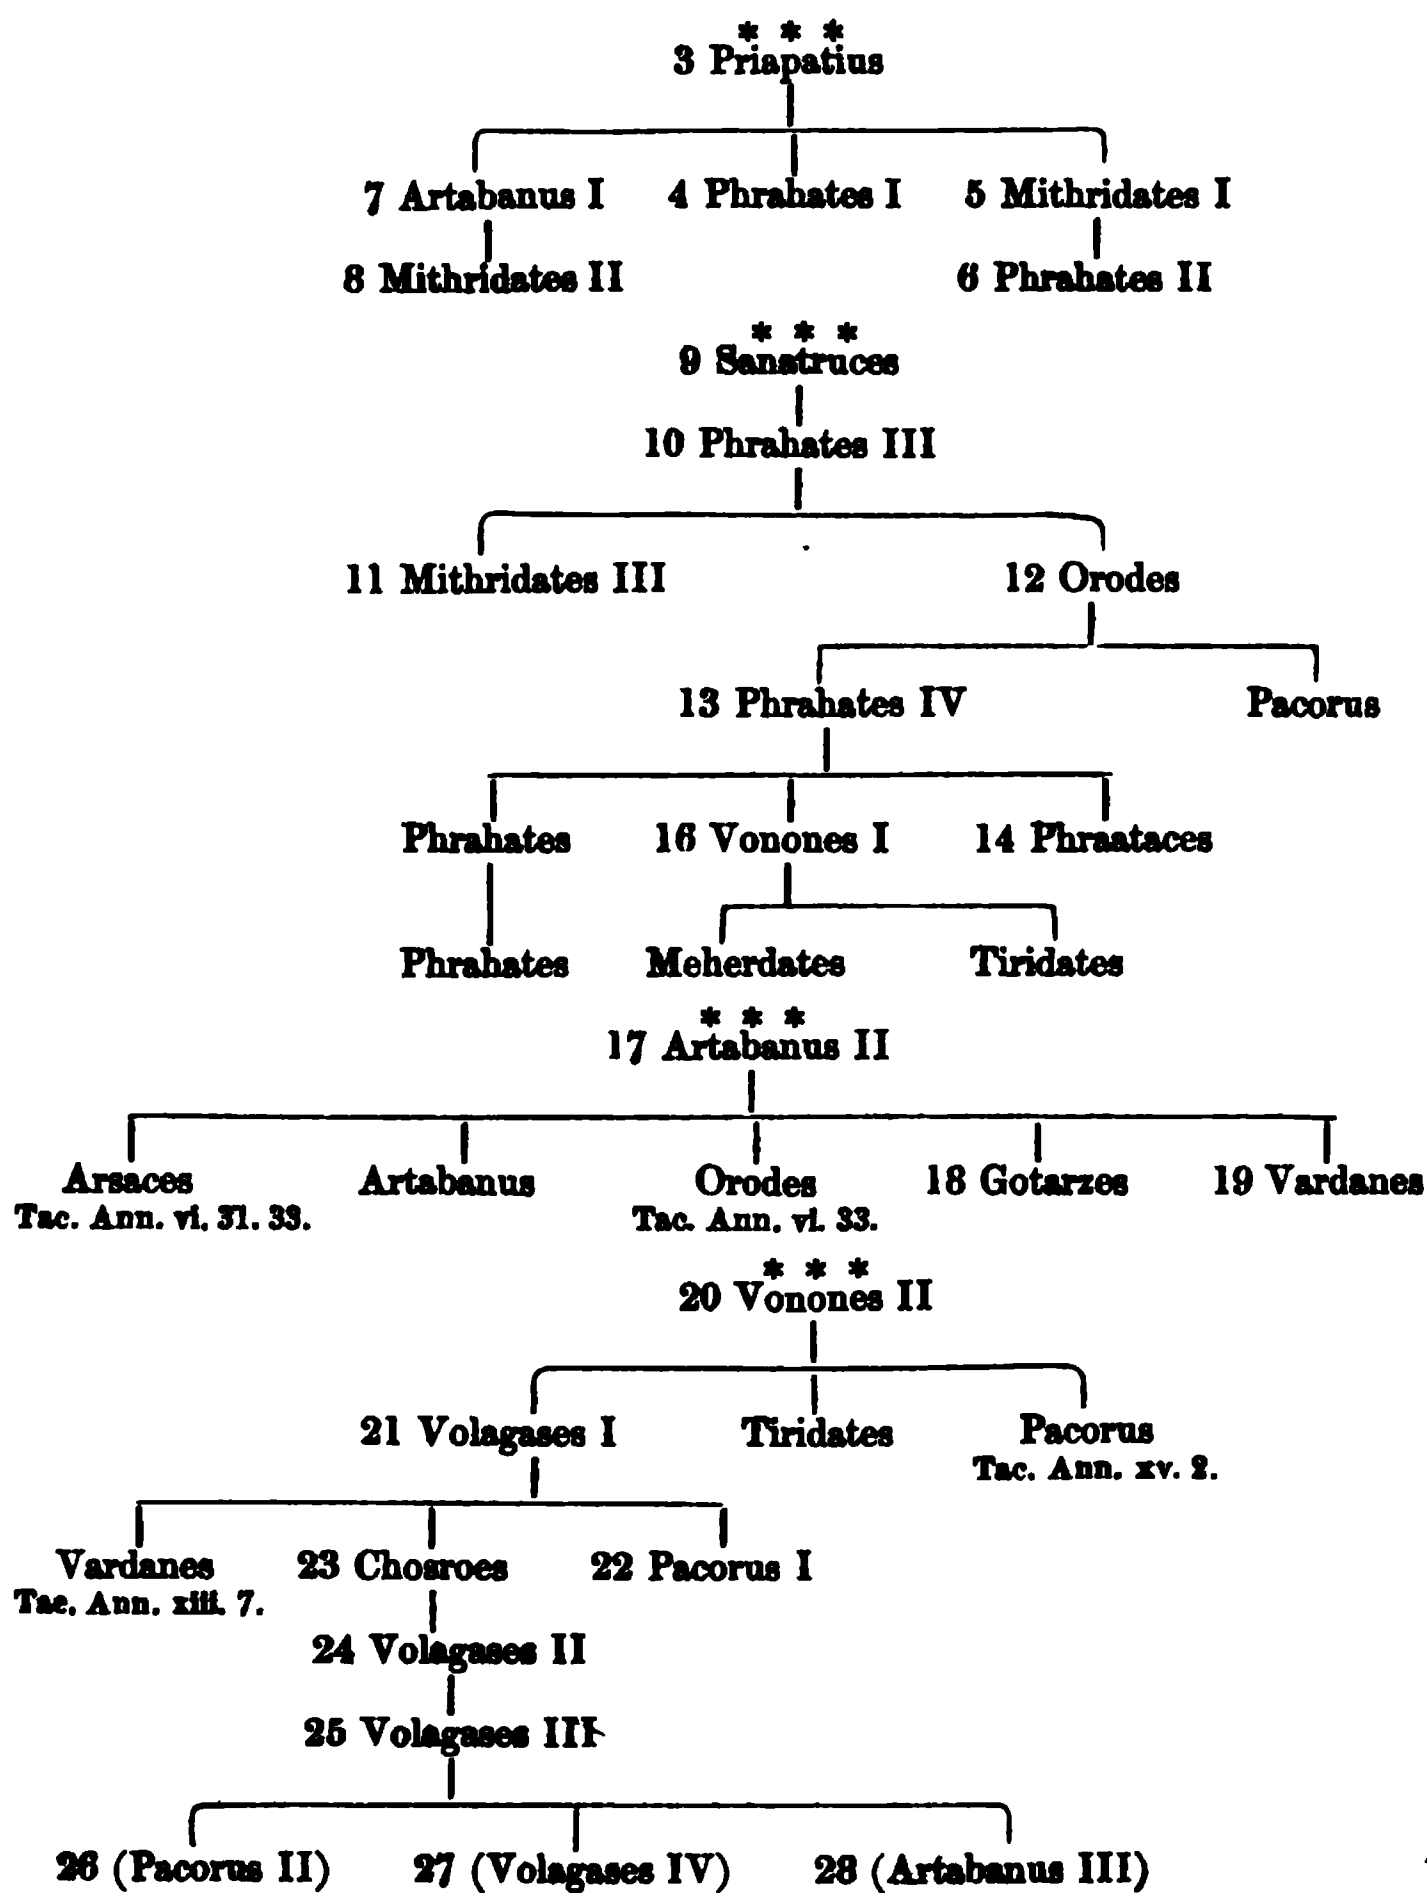

XXV Volagases III. His first year is determined by a coin to A. S. 461 = A. D. $1\frac{4}{5}\frac{9}{8}$. And this coin establishes that he still reigned in A. S. 491 = A. D. $1\frac{7}{8}\frac{9}{8}$. That he died before A. D. 199 we learn from a coin of Pacorus II. The Parthian war A. D. 162—166 was in the reign of Volagases III. After his death his sons contended for the succession. Among the sons of Volagases III who then contended for the throne the coins supply Pacorus and Volagases.

XXVI Pacorus II reigned by the evidence of a coin in the time of the Parthian war of Severus A. D. 198. 199.

XXVII Volagases IV reigned in the time of Caracalla A. D. 216. He is attested by a coin dated in the 524th year of the Seleucida, A. D. 21 $\frac{2}{3}$. His successor Artabanus was in the throne in A. D. 216.

XXVIII Artabanus III, the last of the Arsacida, reigned A. D. 216—226. Probably a son of Volagases III.

The coins of the Parthian kings are given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 252—253. Vaillant supposed, and others after him, that the years of an epoch marked upon the Parthian coins were the years of the Parthian monarchy, and that they took their beginning from the rise of Arsaces. But others, as Barthélemy, Fréret, Pellerin, Harduin, have reasonably doubted this; and Eckhel, who had examined more Parthian coins than were seen by Vaillant, has established by sufficient arguments that the years inscribed upon those coins are the years of the era of Seleucus; and that these coins, some of which are also inscribed with the Macedonian months, were issued by some Greek city of Asia, which lay within the dominions of the Parthian kings.

Only the names of Sanatruces, Gotarzes, Volagases, Pacorus, appear upon these coins. The coins of the other kings are inscribed with the name of Arsaces alone, the name common to them all. But when the year of the Seleucidæ is added, we are enabled to assign the coin to that king in whose reign it was issued. The coins which have been hitherto discovered extend over a space of 245 years, from the year 280 to 524, B. C. $3\frac{3}{4}$ —A. D. $21\frac{3}{4}$.

It will assist our ideas concerning the power of the Parthians, if we set forth the extent and area of those countries of Western Asia which were contained first within the old Persian empire, then shared among the successors of Alexander, and finally divided, though in unequal portions, between the Romans and the Parthians.

In computing the area of those countries, we may divide them into Four Regions. The first region is Asia Minor; which is truly described by Rennell as an elevated tract of which the southern part is by far the highest, being the proper Taurus itself, which rises abruptly from the neighbourhood of the sea coast, turning the waters towards the Euxine and Egean seas. This peninsula, bounded on the east by an imaginary line drawn from Issus in the south to Trapezus in the north, contains about 182,512 square English miles. But as Pontus and Cappadocia are bounded by the Euphrates, this line, passing obliquely through them in a north eastern direction, leaves a space equal to 13,510 square English miles enclosed between the line and the Euphrates, and containing parts of those provinces. We therefore obtain for the whole area of the twelve provinces of Asia Minor

The Second Region of Western Asia, which is also the second in Rennell, is bounded on the south by an imaginary line at lat. 37° drawn from the north east corner of the Mediterranean to the south west corner of the Caspian sea. The northern limit is a line drawn at lat. 44° from the Euxine to the Caspian. The eastern boundary is the Caspian sea itself; on the west the space is limited by the Euxine sea and by the line which bounded Asia Minor. This space contains the mountainous region of Caucasus, the Caucasian countries Iberia Albania Colchis Armenia, the eastern parts of Cappadocia and Pontus above mentioned, and the adjacent districts. This division of western Asia contains an area of 229,989 square English miles. This elevated region overlooks to the north the Sarmatian plains, and to the south the "vast hollow space which contains Syria Mesopotamia Assyria Babylonia, and finally the great Arabian desert."

The Third Region of Western Asia lies to the south of lat. 37° as far as the frontiers of Persia and Arabia; a line drawn diagonally from lat. 35° long. 40° to a point at lat. 30° long. 35° is taken as the south western limit, and a line drawn from the same lat. 35° long. 40° to lat. 31° long. $46^{\circ} 30'$ following for the most part the course of the Euphrates is assumed as the south eastern limit. On the side of Persia the boundary is not marked by natural characters, and a line is therefore assumed to represent the boundaries between Turkey and Persia thus: from lat. 37° to lat. 35° at long. 46° ; from lat. 35° to lat. 31° at long. $46^{\circ} 30'$. The region thus defined, containing Syria Mesopotamia Palestine and the adjoining country, has an area of 179,784 square English miles. Of the countries included in the second and third regions here described, Armenia is estimated by Major Rennell to contain 97,000 square English miles. About 58,594 may be assigned to Syria exclusive of Palestine, and 50,312 to Mesopotamia taken in its most comprehensive sense.

We now proceed to the Fourth Region; the vast countries which lie eastward of long. 46° and which composed the chief provinces of the Persian Empire. This division of Asia is described by Rennell as an elevated region of western Asia of unequal breadth, limited in the western quarter by the Caspian and Persian seas, but expanding to a much greater breadth beyond the Caspian^c. He remarks that the highest ground of this tract lies towards the Caspian sea, as is shewn by the waters of Media which generally flow south-

^c The direct distance from the south west corner of the Caspian in lat. 38° long. 46° to the head of the Persian gulf is 484 English miles. But from the northern boundary of Khorasan to the southern limit of Makran the direct distance is 1000 English miles. Which confirms the account of Ren-nell. Dr. Prichard, Physical History of Mankind, Vol. 4 p. 2 also expresses this character of the country: "The "Western border of Iran seems shortened where the land is contracted "between the southern extremity of "the Caspian and the northern end of "the Persian gulf."

ward; that the northern part between the Caspian and mount Imaus contains Parthia Murgiana Sogdiana, which collectively overlook towards the north the low countries of Chorasnia; that the middle part contains Aria and Bactriana; that in the south are contained Persia Carmania Arachosia, which are bordered towards the Erythræan sea by Gedrosia or Makran. Dr. Prichard from more recent testimonies describes the whole of Iran and not only the northern part as a plateau of high table land, having a general elevation of between 3000 and 4000 feet, although intersected by valleys (running from north to south) through which the waters flow southward. According to his account “the northern boundary traced from its eastern extremity stretches westward along the northern limit of Khorasan and Kohestan, subsides into hills of moderate elevation on the borders of Balkh and Herat, rises further to the westward in Hyrcania into the height of Demavend; thence reaches Georgia in the same direction. The low countries of Mazanderan and Ghilan on the Caspian sea are placed beyond and below the northern side of the great upland. On the west in the meridian of Ecbatana the mountain tracts of Armenia and Georgia approach its borders. The plateau loses here the level character of its surface and rises into lofty heights. The western and southern sides of the Iranian upland are bounded by a vast series of mountain chains which make a great oblique sweep from the north west to the south east, rendering all the south western border of the plateau a series of longitudinal valleys and successive elevations, by which the traveller from the west, after crossing the Tigris, has to ascend over a series of long terraces which are separated by the courses of rivers or longitudinal valleys, but over which he mounts successively to a higher elevation. Further eastward in Makran the southern border of the Iranian plain presents its front immediately against the Indian ocean^d.”

^d The heights of some points are given by Dr. Prichard p. 4 from Mr. Ainsworth: “The elevation of the great Persian upland east of Kurdistan is according to Fraser at Zergan 4500, at Ispahan 4000 (Hamadan is evidently higher), at Tabriz

“according to Brown 4500, and from several observations by myself at the lake of Urumiyeh 4300 feet. The sources of the Zab according to Col. Monteath are at an elevation of 7500 feet.” Dr. Prichard adds p. 6 “The plateau of Iran varies in eleva-

The extent of this fourth region may be thus defined. The river Oxus is the north eastern limit of Iran; for the country beyond the Oxus was Touran and not Iran. Sogdiana therefore was not Iran, although it belonged to the Persian Empire. We assume a line drawn from the mouth of the Ochus or Tedjen to the banks of the Oxus in lat. 40° as the northern boundary of Iran in that quarter. The length of this line expressing the northern limit is from 272 to 300 miles. The space contained between this line and lat. 37° , and inclosed by the Caspian sea and the river Oxus, is equal to 90,267 square English miles, having Dahestan on the border of the Caspian and Khorasan on the left bank of the Oxus. To this point at lat. 40° the province of Khorasan is bounded on the north-east by the Oxus, from a point at lat. $36^{\circ} 42'$ long. $66^{\circ} 30'$ fifty miles direct distance east of Balkh. We extend Khorasan to that point eastward because not only Herat but Balkh was included in Khorasan, and was one of the four royal cities of that province. The Oxus at that point after a south-westerly course turns to the north-west and proceeds in that direction with little variation for 552 miles to lat. $40^{\circ} 40'$, forming for 490 miles of that course the boundary of Khorasan^c in that quarter^f. On the west and south Kho-

“ tion. The south eastern corner, Be-“ luchistan [in the province of Mak-
 “ ran] is a high country, and the table “ land of Kelat [in Khorasan, near “ Meshid] rises according to Pottin-
 “ ger's estimate to 8000 feet: at Kabul
 “ the eastern border has still 6000 “ feet: towards the interior and the “ inland lake of Zareh and the valley
 “ of the Hindwend, and the desert “ plains which surround the lake, the “ level gradually subsides, but not to
 “ a depressed surface. Accurate mea“ surements are wanting in this eastern “ region of Iran. The elevation of the “ western parts are better known. In “ a line from Abushir through Shiraz “ Isfahan Tehran, and thence to Me- “ shid the medium height between “ Isfahan and Tehran is 3900 feet.
 “ Mount Demavend exceeds the aver“ age elevation by 7000 feet. No part
 “ is depressed 1000 feet below the “ general level.”

The peak of Demavend is in lat. 36° long. $51^{\circ} 20'$ on the southern side of Mazanderan or Hyrkania.

^c There is some variation in the course of the Oxus in Arrowsmith and Kinneir. In Arrowsmith's map the river runs NW from the point E. of Balkh at lat. $36^{\circ} 42'$ long. $66^{\circ} 30'$ to lat. $40^{\circ} 492$ miles, and to lat. $40^{\circ} 40'$ 60 miles more, making 552 miles. But in Kinneir the course from the same point NW is to lat. $40^{\circ} 442$ miles and still NW to lat. $41^{\circ} 15'$ 138 miles, making together 580 miles.

^f The Oxus or Amoo rises far to the east of Balkh in lat. $37^{\circ} 35'$ long. $71^{\circ} 22'$ and descends the mountains by a winding course westwards and southwards for 360 miles to the point which has been described, 50 miles from Balkh. Then after the NW course above mentioned of 552 miles the river taking a semicircular sweep east and then north reaches in 180 miles a point in lat. $42^{\circ} 35'$ where the old bed of this river was filled up 200 years ago; and since that time it has found its way northwards into the sea of Aral, about 1150 miles from the source of the river. But till that period the ancient course of the Oxus from that point in lat. $42^{\circ} 35'$ was first westrasan is bounded by the desert, on the east by Sigistan and India; that is by the country near Kandahar. In Kinneir and Arrowsmith the frontier of Khorasan westward adjoins the province of Mazanderan as far as lat. $35^{\circ} 17'$ long. $52^{\circ} 10'$. At that point the boundary takes a direction to the south-east for more than 500 miles as far as lat. 32° to the west of Sigistan and of the lake Zerrah. From this position a direct line terminating at the Oxus beyond Bactra at the eastern limit of Khorasan and of Iran in that quarter is equal to 526 English miles. This vast circuit encloses a space (the northern parts of Iran between the Caspian and the Oxus being included) equal in extent to 259,000 square English miles. It contained many ancient provinces, Margiana in the north, Aria in the south, Bactriana on the east, and Parthia and part of Hyrcania on the west, near the Caspian sea.

Sigistan and Gedrosia are limited on the east by India; for although Eratosthenes and Strabo extend Persia to the Indus, yet they admit that countries west of the Indus belonged to India. Alexander found Indians in the mountainous region to the south of Bactra, and within Makran itself he found an Indian people. Accordingly Rennell remarks that the Indian provinces on the Persian side of the Indus were very extensive, "Kabul, Kandahar, and that wide "stripe of country along the Indus to the sea."

It is material for fixing the eastern limit of Iran in the latitude of Sigistan that we should trace the position of Arachosia. This province is placed by Rennell between lat. 32° and 34° and in his map between long. 65° and 67° . And this is consistent with the ancient accounts, which describe Arachosia to the east of Drangiana, to the south of Bactra, to the north of Gedrosia, and on the western confines of India. We may therefore assume long. $66^{\circ} 30'$ as representing the eastern limit of Arachosia and of Sigistan.

Gedrosia or Makran is bounded on the side of India by the wards and then southwards into the Caspian sea, which it entered at lat. $39^{\circ} 50'$, after an entire course of 1400 miles. Alexander in his way from Balkh across the Oxus to Sogdiana in B. C. 329 found the river (at 430 miles from its source and 970 from its mouth in the Caspian) 6 stadia in breadth. Lieut. Burnes in June A. D. 1832 crossed it in his way also from Balkh to Sogdiana, and found it upwards of 800 yards wide and 20 feet deep. Vol. 2 p. 214. The ancient course of the river into the Caspian is recorded by Arrian.

river Arabius, which runs from north to south in long. $66^{\circ} 30'$ and falls into the sea at long. $66^{\circ} 40'$. Therefore a line drawn from lat. 32° southwards to the sea at long. $66^{\circ} 30'$ may be assumed as the eastern boundary of Arachosia and Makran. This line will enclose a surface equal to the area of the south-eastern borders of Iran. But as Kandahar, which belongs to India, is seated in lat. $32^{\circ} 50'$ long. $65^{\circ} 42'$ the limitary line must be assumed further to the westward in the region of Kandahar; and we place it at long. $65^{\circ} 30'$ from lat. 32° to 34° . To the north of lat. 34° we carry it eastwards again till it terminates at the Oxus in long. $66^{\circ} 30'$ as before observed.

Gedrosia or Makran is bounded on the west by Carmania, and Carmania again on the west by Persis or Fars. Westward of the river Arabius the southern boundary of Iran is the Indian sea and the Persian Gulf, till we arrive at the line already described as the western limit of this fourth region of Western Asia. The surface of this fourth region within the boundaries here assigned, which contain the countries eastward of the Caspian and those to the south of lat. 37° enclosed between long. 46° or $46^{\circ} 30'$ and $66^{\circ} 30'$, is equal to 892,529 English square miles. But to obtain the total extent of Iran we must add countries west of the Caspian and included already in the Second Region, but belonging to Persia; namely Georgia Daghistan Shirvan Erivan, containing collectively between lat. 37° and lat. 43° 108,816 square miles.

We obtain therefore for Iran

25 According to D'Herbelot p. 449

Yezdejerd after his defeat in the 15th year of the Hejira A. D. 636 retired into Carmania Sigistan and Khorasan till the 31st year A. D. 652, when he was betrayed and slain. His flight and death are related by Abulpharajius p. 116.

D'Herbelot p. 449 determines the era from the beginning of his reign : " C'est au commencement du règne de " ce prince que l'on doit fixer l'époque " de l'Ere—Jesdegirdique, et non pas " au temps de sa défaite à Cadesie ni " à sa mort en Khorasan."

§ 7. GREEK AUTHORS.

The catalogue of Greek authors contains those who are recorded in the Tables, from the death of Augustus to the death of Heraclius. To these are added many names omitted in the Tables, but inserted here among their contemporaries. The series of Greek writers includes authors in various departments, poets, historians, sophists, orators, and in the different schools of philosophy stoics, peripatetics, Platonists, and others. But it seemed convenient and useful to place them all in one chronological series, rather than to class them according to their several subjects.

- 1 Eudorus Peripateticus. Contemporary with Strabo.
- 2 Ariston Peripateticus. Also contemporary with Strabo.
- 3 Alexander Ægæus. The disciple of Sosigenes, who flourished in B. C. 45.
- 4 Chæremon stoicus: the preceptor of Tiberius. He was also the preceptor of Dionysius of Alexandria, who succeeded him and flourished in the reign of Nero.
- 5 Apion: A. D. 40. See F. H. III Greek authors N° 246.
- 6 Apollonides Nicæus: flourished in the time of Tiberius. See F. H. III Greek authors N° 247.
- 7 Thrasyllus: A. D. 36. See F. H. III Greek authors N° 244.
- 8 Euthydemus rhetor: A. D. 17. Taught Apollonius Tyaneus about A. D. 12.
- 9 Amarantus Alexandrinus. After Juba (F. H. III Greek authors N° 231) and before Athenæus.
- 10 Philo Judæus: A. D. 35. 40.
- 11 Dioscorides Anazarbeus medicus. Contemporary with Lecanius Bassus, who was consul in A. D. 64, and who died when Pliny wrote the 26th book of his Natural History; that is, between A. D. 72 and 79. Dioscorides composed his work in mature, perhaps in advanced age.
- 12 Andromachus. The chief Physician of Nero.
- 13 Erotianus. Contemporary with Andromachus, whom he addresses in his preface.
- 14 Pamphila: A. D. 58.

- 15 Moderatus Pythagoreus : flourished in the reign of Nero ; for the disciple of Moderatus was the companion of Plutarch.
- 16 Thallus : flourished after Ol. 102, which he mentioned, and before Theophilus of Antioch A. D. 181, who quotes Thallus.
- 17 Heraclides grammaticus : A. D. 55.
- 18 Ammonius. The preceptor of Plutarch : A. D. 66. 67.
- 19 Agathinus medicus. The preceptor of Herodotus (Nº 27).
- 20 Josephus. Born A. D. 38, at Rome in 64, in the Jewish war in 67 ; finished his Antiquities in 93. A short account of the times of the Maccabees, and of the family of Josephus is given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 267 note p.
- 21 Musonius Rufus stoicus : A. D. 66. 69. 74. F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 268.
- 22 Apollonius Tyaneus. Nearly 20 years of age in A. D. 17, in the East in 45—48. For Apollonius in the reign of Nero see A. D. 61—68. He visited Egypt in 69, Ethiopia in 70, Cilicia in 71, Ephesus in 95. 96. His death is described in A. D. 97.
- 23 Damis. The companion of Apollonius : A. D. 45. Damis flourished A. D. 42—97.
- 24 Dionysius Alexandrinus : a grammarian, son of Glaucus. He flourished from the reign of Nero to the time of Trajan, was the disciple of the philosopher Chæremon, and the preceptor of Parthenius, a grammarian mentioned by Athenæus.
- 25 Euphrates : A. D. 69. 119. Contemporary with Apollonius of Tyana and with Dio Prusæus.
- 26 Dio Prusæus : A. D. 69. 90. 96. 99.
- 27 Herodotus medicus. The disciple of Agathinus. He preceded Crito ; and Crito flourished in the reign of Trajan.
- 28 Marinus medicus. The preceptor of Quintus (Nº 39).
- 29 Rufus Ephesius medicus. Contemporary with Crito in the reign of Trajan.
- 30 Crito medicus. Contemporary with Rufus Ephesius. Often quoted by Galen.
- 31 Demetrius cynicus. Already known in 39. At Corinth in 61. Present at the death of Thræsea in 66. In Greece

- in 68, at Rome in 71, banished with other philosophers by Vespasian about A. D. 74. In Italy in 93.
- 32 Plutarchus. A youth in 66. For Plutarch in the reign of Trajan see A. D. 98. 106. His treatise περὶ τοῦ μὴ χρᾶν ἔμμετρα is at A. D. 80, his work de primo frigido at 106, his Lives are described at 110. 113. He is mentioned as still living in 120.
- 33 Nicetes Smyrnæus: A. D. 97. The preceptor of Scopelianus. See A. D. 93.
- 34 Ælianus tacticus: A. D. 97.
- 35 Ptolemæus Chennus, a grammarian of Alexandria: flourished in the reigns of Trajan and Hadrian.
- 36 Zenobius sophista: taught at Rome in the reign of Hadrian.
- 37 Isæus: A. D. 101. Specimens of his style are given by Philostratus.
- 38 Ardys: A. D. 101.
- 39 Quintus medicus: A. D. 147. The disciple of Marinus and the preceptor of Satyrus.
- 40 Sabinus medicus Hippocrateus: A. D. 147. The preceptor of Stratonicus. Mentioned with Rufus Ephesius (Nº 29) by Galen.
- 41 Adrastus Aphrodisiensis peripateticus. Preceded Galen. The works of Adrastus were read by Plotinus, and by Theon of Smyrna, who flourished A. D. 128—133.
- 42 Artemon of Cassandrea. After Dionysius Scytobrachion and before Athenæus.
- 43 Apollodorus Pergamenus: A. D. 114.
- 44 Dorotheus Ascalonita: flourished before Athenæus and after the grammarians Trypho and Aristonicus, who lived in the reign of Augustus, and whom Dorotheus quotes.
- 45 Hermogenes Tarsensis historicus. Put to death by Domitian.
- 46 Scopelianus: A. D. 93. See A. D. 45. 133.
- 47 Timocrates Heracleota. Contemporary with Demonax (see Nº 57) and Scopelianus. Taught Polemo: see A. D. 138. and Lesbonax (Nº 148).
- 48 Agrippa. An observation recorded by Ptolemy was made by Agrippa in Bithynia 29 Nov. 92.

- 49 Justus Tiberiensis : A. D. 98. His history ended at the 3rd year of Trajan A. D. 100.
- 50 Valerius Pollio : A. D. 118.
- 51 Dionysius Milesius : A. D. 101. 119. See A. D. 239.
- 52 Dorion. Contemporary with Dionysius of Miletus : lived at Sardis in the time of Hadrian.
- 53 Epictetus : withdrew to Nicopolis. See A. D. 90. Taught there in 103. Favoured by Hadrian : see A. D. 118.
- 54 Heliodorus philosophus : A. D. 118.
- 55 Caius Platonius. His disciples were heard by Galen in 144.
- 56 Aspasius peripateticus. Contemporary with Caius the Platonist, and with Herminus.
- 57 Herminus peripateticus : was the preceptor of Alexander Aphrodisiensis, and was contemporary with Demonax, whose death is recorded by Lucian. Herminus the peripatetic flourished cir. A. D. 150.

Demonax, with whom Lucian was long acquainted, conversed with the following persons who are named by Lucian in his Life of Demonax: Agathobulus, Demetrius, and Epictetus the philosophers; Timocrates of Heraclea; Favorinus the sophist; Peregrinus, Herodes Atticus (whose wife Regilla died before Demonax), Agathocles, and Herminus the peripatetics; Apollonius a philosopher. Demonax lived to near 100 years of age.

- 58 Philo Byblius : A. D. 47. 124. He rendered Sanchoniathos into Greek. From the work of Philo Porphyry quotes Sanchoniathos; and Athenæus probably derived his knowledge of Sanchoniathos from Philo Byblius.

Lobeck Aglaopham. p. 1265—1272 surveys the whole question of the genuineness of Sanchoniathos, and states the arguments on both sides, shewing by many sufficient reasons that the works ascribed to him are spurious.

In the extract from Sanchoniathos according to Philo mention is made of Hesiod and the cyclic poets, authors of the Theogonies, and Gigantomachias and Titanomachias. This passage proves, either that Sanchoniathos is altogether spurious, or that Philo added and interpolated, and that what he published was not the genuine work of Sanchoniathos.

- 59 Lollianus: A. D. 132. See 101.
- 60 Marcus Byzantius: A. D. 138. See 101.
- 61 Favorinus: A. D. 106. 118. 133. See 143. A native of Arelate in Gaul, and the rival of Plutarch. Testimonies to Favorinus and his works are given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 275. 276.
- 62 Dionysius tenuior. The preceptor of Fronto.
- 63 Dionysius Halicarnassensis junior: A. D. 126.
- 64 Cephalion: A. D. 126. His historical work is described in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 276 note z.
- 65 Hermippus Berytius: A. D. 127.
- 66 Taurus Berytius: A. D. 146. The preceptor of Herodes Atticus. He is quoted and mentioned by Gellius, who conversed with Taurus. Taurus resided at Athens, and Gellius accompanied him to Delphi and visited him at Athens. Taurus lectured on the Symposiacs of Plato, and read with Gellius the Problems of Aristotle.
- 67 Musonius Tyrius. The preceptor of Lucius, who was the companion of Herodes Atticus.
- 68 Polemo sophista: A. D. 133. 135. 143.
- 69 Philippus Thessalonicensis. Composed the second Anthology after Meleager. Jacobs determines that as Philippus included the poems of Automedon who lived in A. D. 98, he flourished not earlier than A. D. 100.
- 70 Serapion Alexandrinus rhetor. Flourished in the reign of Hadrian.
- 71 Nicanor Alexandrinus: A. D. 127.
- 72 Telephus: A. D. 150.
- 73 Jason Argivus historicus. Younger than Plutarch.
- 74 Soranus Ephesius medicus. Flourished at Rome in the reigns of Trajan and Hadrian.
- 75 Dioscorides junior: A. D. 122. He transcribed from Dioscorides of Anazarba.
- 76 Artemidorus Capito: A. D. 122. Contemporary with Dioscorides junior. Mentioned with the younger Dioscorides by Galen.
- 77 Theon Smyrnæus. An astronomer in the reign of Hadrian A. D. 128—133. Ptolemy, who still lived in 161, knew Theon, although rather later in time than Theon.
- 78 Secundus: A. D. 143. The preceptor of Herodes Atticus.

- 79 Diogenianus Heracleota. A grammarian; flourished in the reign of Hadrian: a native of Heraclea on the Euxine. Another Diogenianus of Heraclea in Asia, a physician, also flourished in the reign of Hadrian.
- 80 Numenius rhetor. Flourished in the reign of Hadrian, whom he addressed on the death of Antinous, which happened in A. D. 130.
- 81 Strato Sardinianus. He flourished after the physician Capito (N° 76) whom he names in an epigram, and before Laertius, who mentions Strato. He was near the time of Diogenianus Heracleota.
- 82 Phlegon Trallianus: A. D. 138. See A. D. 116. Phlegon in his 13th book described Ol. 202 or 203. See F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 279 note n for an account of that passage given by Eusebius, Hieronymus, Africanus, Origen, and Jo. Philoponus, where it is shewn that a darkness and an earthquake described by Phlegon have been improperly referred to the events at the time of the crucifixion which are recorded by the evangelists. To the testimonies concerning Phlegon add Joan. Philoponus de creatione mundi V. 1 Φλέγων ἐν τῇ ρκδ' ὀλυμπιάδι de Lysimacho Macedone.
- 83 Valerius Diodorus: A. D. 137.
- 84 Apollonius Dyscolus, the grammarian: a native of Alexandria, came in the reign of Marcus to Rome, where he composed his most celebrated works, and was favoured by the emperor. Thirty-one of his grammatical works are given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 280 note o.
- 85 Nicostratus: A. D. 164. An orator whose style is described by Hermogenes, who was imitated by Ælian, and is mentioned by Libanius.
- 86 Herodes Atticus: A. D. 143. 168. 175. Herodes was younger than Polemo; flourished cir. A. D. 120—176, and was consul in 143. His preceptors and his pupils are named at 143.
- 87 Alexander Cotyæensis: A. D. 161. The preceptor of Marcus Aurelius.
- 88 Pausanias periegeta: A. D. 125. 161. 173. 176.
- 89 Aristides Quintilianus musicus. Quotes Cicero, and was translated by Marcellianus Capella, who lived in 457. Mei-bomius places Aristides in the time of Plutarch and before Ptolemy.

- 90 CEnomaus cynicus : A. D. 120. A native of Gadara. He flourished in the time of Hadrian.
 - 91 Agathobulus : A. D. 120. In the reign of Hadrian.
 - 92 Alexander Platonius, Caninius Celer, Annius Macer, preceptors of Marcus : recorded at A. D. 133.
 - 93 Claudius Maximus. A preceptor of Marcus Aurelius.
 - 94 Rusticus stoicus : A. D. 133.
 - 95 Sextus (see A. D. 120) was also a preceptor of Marcus : A. D. 133. And was still living in 176.
 - 96 Apollonius stoicus : A. D. 133. Another preceptor of Marcus. Mentioned with others at 148.
 - 97 Theodotus : A. D. 168. Opposed Herodes Atticus in that year.
 - 98 Aristocles : A. D. 144. He taught Athenodorus, Euodius, Rufus, Heraclides, and was heard at Pergamus by Herodes Atticus.
 - 99 Pancrates poeta : A. D. 130.
 - 100 Mesomedes lyricus : A. D. 145.
- Among the preceptors of Galen named at A. D. 147 are the following (N° 101—106).
- 101 Satyrus medicus, the disciple of Quintus (N° 39).
 - 102 Numesianus, the disciple of Quintus.
 - 103 Pelops.
 - 104 Stratonius, the disciple of Sabinus (N° 40).
 - 105 Æschrion empiricus.
 - 106 Lycus Macedo, the disciple of Quintus.
 - 107 Antiochus sophista : A. D. 173. For his time see A. D. 216.
 - 108 Alexander sophista : A. D. 160—174. Secretary to the emperor Marcus.
 - 109 Claudius Ptolemæus : A. D. 139. 140. 161.
 - 110 Basilides Scythopolitanus : A. D. 148. The preceptor of Marcus Aurelius.
 - 111 Jamblichus Babylonius : A. D. 166.
 - 112 Peregrinus : A. D. 165. He conversed with Demonax. See N° 57.
 - 113 Atticus Platonius : A. D. 164. 177.
 - 114 Crescens cynicus : A. D. 153.

- 115 Amyntianus: A. D. 167. He dedicated to the emperor Marcus.
- 116 M. Aurelius Antoninus imp. Born A. D. 121, reigned 161—180.
- 117 Chryseros: A. D. 180.
- 118 Phrynichus: A. D. 176. He lived in the times of Marcus and Commodus.
- 119 Basilides sophista: A. D. 176. Contemporary with Phrynichus.
- 120 Damophilus sophista. Julianus, who was consul in A. D. 175, was the patron of Damophilus.
- 121 Herodianus grammaticus. The son of Apollonius (Nº 84). A. D. 173. He flourished in the reign of Marcus. A catalogue of 32 works of Herodian is given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 283—285.
- 122 Varus Pergæus: A. D. 148. He came between Alexander (Nº 108) and Hermogenes (Nº 125).
- 123 Arrianus: A. D. 103. 135. 148.
- 124 Appianus Alexandrinus: A. D. 130. 147.
- 125 Hermogenes Tarsensis: A. D. 163. 173.
- 126 Antiochus Laodiceus scepticus. The preceptor of Menodotus. See Nº 139.
- 127 Artemidorus Daldianus. In the Oneirocritica he mentions Varus and Philager: see A. D. 158, and appears to be their contemporary.
- 128 Hephæstio: A. D. 160. Contemporary with Athenæus.
- 129 Philager: A. D. 159. The preceptor of Phoenix, and the rival of Herodes Atticus.
- 130 Maximus Tyrius: A. D. 148. He lived at Rome in the time of Commodus.
- 131 Aristides. Born in 129, died in 189. He was at Athens under Herodes, at Pergamus under Aristocles. He saw the emperor Marcus at Smyrna. He taught Damianus (Nº 158). See A. D. 192.
- 132 Numenius: preceded Clemens Alexandrinus, who quotes him. He is also quoted and read by Origen, Plotinus, Porphyry, and Eusebius. The time of Clemens, who wrote in the reign of Severus, will carry back Numenius to the time of the Antonines.
- 133 Cronius. The companion of Numenius.

- 134 Adrianus sophista: A. D. 131. 176. 192. His disciples are mentioned at 192. He died at the age of 80 years in 193.
- 135 Chrestus: A. D. 179; where his disciples are named. He succeeded Adrianus at Athens.
- 136 Pollux: A. D. 176. 183. Pollux was favoured by Commodus. He taught Antipater: see A. D. 199.
- 137 Zeno Atheniensis: taught Antipater. See A. D. 199.
- 138 Polyænus: A. D. 163.
- 139 Menodotus Nicomediensis. The preceptor of Herodotus of Tarsus.

Menodotus was of the empirical school of medicine, of which Acron of Agrigentum was the founder; and which descended from Philinus of Cos through Serapion of Alexandria, the two Apollonii, father and son, of Antioch, and others, to Menodotus. He was also of the sceptical school of philosophy, which descended to Menodotus from Pyrrho through Timon and the successors of Timon, who are exhibited below at N° 172.

Galen in a work composed before A. D. 164 mentions Menodotus as then known by his writings. After that date Galen treated of works of Menodotus and Theodas. In another work Galen names as of the empirical school, though not in the order of time, the following: Menodotus, Serapion, Theodas, Glaucias, Apollonius, Callicles, Diodorus, Heraclides, Lycus.

- 140 Theodas Laodicensis empiricus. Contemporary with Menodotus.
- 141 Lucianus Samosatenus: A. D. 165. 166. 182. Lucian records of himself that he was 40 when he quitted the bar, and that he lived to an advanced age. He still wrote in the reign of Commodus.
- 142 Eudemus peripateticus: A. D. 162. In the time of Galen.
- 143 Alexander Damascenus peripateticus: A. D. 162. In the time of Galen.
- 144 Julianus medicus. Seen by Galen at Alexandria.
- 145 Heraclianus medicus. Conversed with Galen at Alexandria.

Galen besides his numerous medical works composed philological, grammatical, and philosophical treatises, of which the titles are given by Galen himself de libris propriis. The titles of these works, to the number of 124, are inserted in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 289. 290.

147 Pausanias Cappadox sophista: A. D. 125. 133. He taught Ælianus (N° 178) and Aspasius (N° 180). See A. D. 222. 231.

148 Lesbonax Mytilenæus: A. D. 164. The disciple of Timocrates (N° 47) and contemporary with Lucian (N° 141).

149 Athenodorus sophista: A. D. 183. Contemporary with Pollux (N° 136). When young he heard Aristocles, when a man, Chrestus. See A. D. 144.

150 Ptolemæus sophista: A. D. 196. He contended with Heraclides (N° 168).

151 Euodianus Smyrnæus. The disciple of Aristocles: see A. D. 144.

152 Rufus Perinthius sophista: A. D. 143. 144. In his boyhood he was taught by Herodes Atticus, in his maturity by Aristocles (N° 98). He died at home at the age of 61 years.

153 Onomarchus: A. D. 179. Contemporary with Adrianus and Chrestus.

154 Apollonius Naucratis: A. D. 196.

155 Apollonius Atheniensis: A. D. 196. Ambassador to Severus at Rome.

156 Proclus Naucratis sophista: A. D. 167. The preceptor of Philostratus. See A. D. 239.

157 Phoenix Thessalus sophista: A. D. 159. He died at Athens at the age of 70.

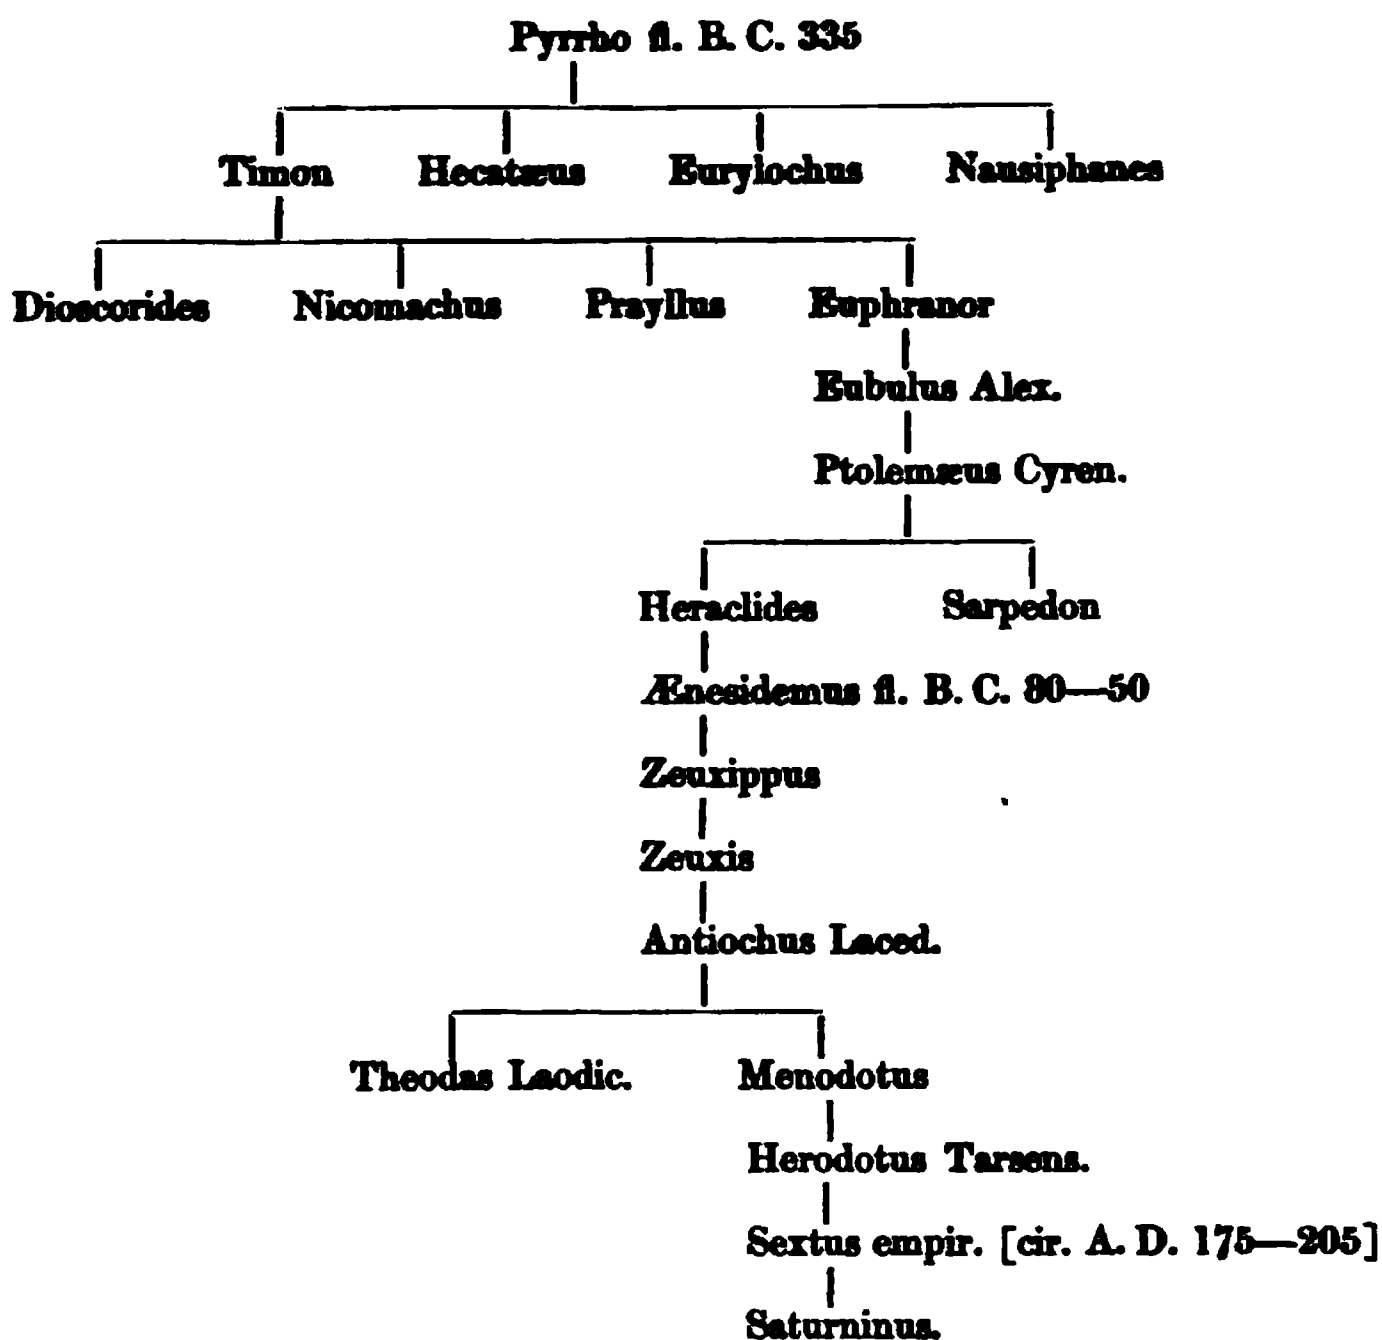

158 Damianus Ephesius sophista: heard Aristides and Adrianus. See A. D. 192. Known to Philostratus: A. D.

239. Damianus in the reign of Severus was governor of Bithynia.
- 159 Oppianus Cilix poeta: A.D. 171. He preceded Athenæus.
- 160 Adrantus. A philologer contemporary with Athenæus.
- 161 Diotimus. A friend of Athenæus.
- 162 Athenæus Naucratis: A.D. 181. 194.
- 163 Proclus: preceded Alexander of Aphrodisias (Nº 173), by whom he is quoted with Athenæus.
- 164 Herodotus Tarsensis empiricus. The disciple of Menodotus (Nº 139) and the preceptor of Sextus empiricus (Nº 172).
- 165 Antipater sophista: A.D. 199. 212. He was secretary to Severus, and taught Caracalla and Geta.
- 166 Hermocrates: A.D. 199. Hermocrates was descended from the sophist Polemo, and married the daughter of Antipater, as is exhibited in the following pedigree:

- 167 Antiochus Ægæus cynicus: A.D. 216.
- 168 Heraclides Lycius sophista: A.D. 195. 196. The rival of the Apollonii, of Ptolemæus (Nº 150), and Antipater.
- 169 Hippodromus sophista: A.D. 195. He presided at the Pythia of 195.
- 170 Varus Laodiceus: A.D. 158.
- 171 Quirinus sophista. The disciple of Adrianus (Nº 134). He was a native of Nicomedia, and died at the age of 70 years.
- 172 Sextus Empiricus medicus. The disciple of Herodotus of Tarsus (Nº 164). Sextus marks his own profession, and refers to his preceptor though without naming him.

The succession in the sceptical school of philosophy from Pyrrho to Saturninus was this:

From the acme of Pyrrho at B. C. 335 to the acme of Ænesidemus, assumed at B. C. 80, are six successions and 255 years, giving $42\frac{1}{2}$ years to each succession. From Ænesidemus to Sextus are six successions. These at 255 years or $42\frac{1}{2}$ to each, would place Sextus at A. D. 175. This period of 510 years for the whole succession from Pyrrho to Sextus, exclusive of Sextus himself, ($42\frac{1}{2} \times 12 = 510$) is as large an interval as any recorded accounts of similar successions will justify. Menodotus therefore is thrown back by this estimate to about A. D. 100. He might have flourished at A. D. 100—130. Galen, as already observed, mentioned the works of Menodotus and Theodas before the year 164: but he has not named Herodotus of Tarsus. This silence however of Galen is no decisive proof that Herodotus was not then living. Sextus might have flourished and composed his works in the latter years of the life of Galen.

- 173 Alexander Aphrodisiensis: A. D. 200. The merit of Alexander as the best interpreter of Aristotle is acknowledged by Simplicius and Philoponus. The works of Alexander of Aphrodisias are described in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 293. 294, where the 24 titles are given.
- 174 Dositheus magister. Wrote in A. D. 207.
- 175 Oppianus Apamensis poeta: A. D. 211.
- 176 Philiscus Thessalus: A. D. 212. 219. Pleaded before Caracalla.
- 177 Disciples of Chrestus N° 135. See A. D. 179.
 Isagoras tragicus poeta.
 Nicomedes orator.
 Aquila orator.
 Aristænetus orator.
 Callæschrus philosophus.
 Sospis philosophus.
- 178 Ælianus sophista: A. D. 222. He was taught by Pausanias (N° 147); and conversed with Philostratus of Lemnos in 222.
- 179 Heliodorus: A. D. 213. 217. He still lived when Philostratus wrote.
- 180 Aspasius Ravennas: A. D. 231. Secretary to the emperor Alexander, and still living when the Vitæ Sophistarum were written.
- 181 Cassianus sophista }
 182 Aurelius sophista } contemporary with Aspasius: see
 A. D. 231.
- 183 Saturninus scepticus. The disciple of Sextus empiricus: see N° 172.
- 184 Nicagoras sophista: A. D. 213. 245: known to Philostratus, Longinus, and Porphyry.
- 185 Apsines sophista: A. D. 213. 236. The friend of Philostratus, and the disciple of Heraclides of Lycia N° 168, and of Basilicus, who was therefore contemporary with Heraclides.
- 186 Philostratus Lemnius. A. D. 213. 214. 239. He was the disciple of Proclus N° 156 and of Antipater N° 165. Commanded by the empress Julia Domna to write the life of Apollonius Tyaneus. He wrote that work at Rome, and afterwards composed the Lives of the Sophists.

- 187 Philostratus Lemnius. Born A. D. 192: see A. D. 215. Conversed with Ælian: A. D. 222. He was still living when the Vitæ sophistarum were written.
- 188 Philostratus junior. Author of the Elkóves. This was a third Philostratus; younger than the other two.
- 189 Dion Cassius: A. D. 180—229. Dion mentions his call to write. He was ten years in collecting materials, and twelve years in composing the annals to the end of Severus.
- 190 Preceptors of Alexander Severus. See A. D. 220.

- 192 Herodianus historicus: A. D. 180. 204. 238.
- 193 Agathemerus. Lived after the wall of Severus in Britain (A. D. 210) which he mentions, and before Marcianus Heracleota, who quotes him.
- 194 Ammonius Saccas peripateticus. Taught at Alexandria in A. D. 201; taught Origen there in 206; Plotinus in 232—242. He flourished cir. A. D. 190—244. See A. D. 232.
- On Ammonius see Mosheim Eccles. Hist. Vol. 1 p. 137. 138 and the note of the English translator, and Brucker there quoted. But the English translator is confused, and misunderstands the question. There are two questions: 1 Whether Ammonius Saccas ever was a Christian, 2 whether he was the author of the work described in Eusebius H. E. VI. 10, Hieronymus Catal. c. 55. We answer both in the negative. Ammonius never was a Christian. Porphyry represents him as originally such, in order to cast a reproach upon Christianity. It necessarily follows that Ammonius the Christian writer was not Ammonius Saccas.
- 195 Theodosius: A. D. 270. The companion of Ammonius Saccas.
- 196 Olympius Alexandrinus. Studied for a while under Ammonius, and afterwards became the rival of Plotinus.

197 Plotinus. Born in 205, heard Ammonius in 232—242, taught at Rome in 244, and died in Campania in 270.

198 Herennius: A. D. 244. The companion of Plotinus.

199 Pisander Larandensis poeta: A. D. 224.

200 Origenes: A. D. 244. The companion of Plotinus, known to Longinus. Of this gentile Origen Proclus speaks in Timæum Platonis.

201 Aquilinus: A. D. 244. The companion of Plotinus.

Platonists known to Longinus, and described at A. D. 265.

He retired to Sicily in 268, and was addressed by Longinus in 271. His Life of Plotinus was composed in 301. Porphyry therefore was born in the 12th year of Alexander Severus, and lived through nearly the whole reign of Diocletian.
- The works of Porphyry may be divided into various classes, I de Homero. II de Platone. III de Aristotele. IV grammatica vel philologica. V reliqua opera. An account of 61 works of Porphyry is given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 298—302.
- 236 Anatolius: A. D. 312. The preceptor of Jamblichus.
- 237 Ephorus: wrote the history of Gallienus (A. D. 253—268) in 17 books. Composed also Corinthiaca, and a history of the Aleuadae.
- 238 Callicrates Tyrius: A. D. 276.
- 239 Minucianus sophista: A. D. 255.
- 240 Agapetus: A. D. 255. Contemporary with Minucianus.

- 241 Callinicus Suetorius: A. D. 266. Contemporary with Genethlius: A. D. 255.
- 242 Soterichus Oasites, an epic poet, flourished in the reign of Diocletian A. D. 284—304.
- 243 Genethlius Palæstinus sophista: A. D. 255.
- 244 Charax Pergamenus. He composed Hellenica or Chronica in 40 books.
- 245 Ulpianus Antiochenus. A. D. 276. 308. The preceptor of Proæresius.
- 246 Helladius Besantinus: A. D. 308. Quoted by Orion p. 153. 3 p. 135. 6.
- 247 Julianus sophista: A. D. 308. 340. He taught at Athens cir. A. D. 306—340.
- 248 Gymnasius Sidonius sophista: flourished in the times of Constantine.
- 249 Onasimus sophista: A. D. 309.
- 250 Dionysius periegeta. Within A. D. 280—300. See F. H. III p. 576.
- 251 Alypius: A. D. 312. Died in old age before Jamblichus.
- 252 Jamblichus: A. D. 312. See A. D. 367. The preceptor Ædesius. Taught cir. A. D. 309—329.
- Fourteen works of Jamblichus are described, and some of his fragments are given, in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 304. 305.
- 253 Proæresius. Born in 276. He visited Gaul between 341 and 345: see A. D. 342. Before that visit he had already succeeded Julianus (Nº 247) at Athens: see A. D. 340. He still taught at Athens in 362, and died at the age of 91 in 367. Proæresius was heard at Athens by Gregory of Nazianzus and Basil of Cæsarea in 355.
- 254 Anatolius Berytius. Anatolius, who is celebrated by Eunapius for his love of letters, was vicarius Asiæ in Nov. A. D. 339, prætorian præfect in May 346 and 1 April 349, præfect of Illyricum in 359. His death in 360 is mentioned by Ammianus.
- 255 Metrodorus philosophus: A. D. 330.
- 256 Musonius. At first a sophist, the rival of Proæresius, he afterwards engaged in public affairs. He was pro-consul of Achaia and is addressed as vicarius by the sophist Himerius at Thessalonica in 362. He was vicarius Asiæ, and slain in battle by the Isaurians in 367.

- 257 Ædesius. Succeeded Jamblichus about A. D. 329, and died in 355. See A. D. 312. 355.
- 258 Theodorus }
 259 Euphrasius } disciples of Jamblichus. See A. D. 312.
- 260 Dexippus philosophus Platonicus. The disciple of Jamblichus. He wrote upon the Categories of Aristotle a work in three dialogues, in which he explains the Categories to one Seleucus, and answers the objections of Plotinus.
- 261 Apsines, the son of Onasimus (N° 249): see A. D. 309. Apsines was the rival of Proæresius, A. D. 340.
- 262 Epagathus: A. D. 340.
- 263 Hephæstio. Contemporary with Proæresius. See A. D. 340.
- 264 Epiphanius Syrus: A. D. 340.
- 265 Diophantus Arabs: A. D. 340. 367. The preceptor of Libanius. See A. D. 314.
- 266 Tuscanus Syrus: A. D. 340. Contemporary with Proæresius.
- 267 Sopolis: A. D. 340.
- 268 Milesius poeta. Admired by Anatolius at Athens in the time of Proæresius, after A. D. 347. Milesius afterwards consoled Proæresius in a domestic calamity.
- 269 Eusebius Alexandrinus: a friend of Proæresius.
- 270 Alexander sophista. The brother, according to Suidas, of the sophist Eusebius, and the disciple of Julianus (N° 247). The brother of Alexander was either Eusebius of Caria N° 275, or Eusebius of Alexandria N° 269.
- 271 Maximus Ephesus: A. D. 355. 363. 364. For his death see A. D. 372. Maximus, the disciple of Ædesius, is quoted by Simplicius upon Aristotle, and alluded to, though not named, by Themistius Or. VII in A. D. 367. The death of Maximus is noticed by Zosimus.
- 272 Maximus Byzantinus. Contemporary with Maximus of Ephesus.
- 273 Claudianus. The brother of Maximus of Ephesus: favoured and employed by the emperor Julian.

- 274 Nymphidianus. Another brother of Maximus of Ephesus. He died after A. D. 373.
- 275 Eusebius Car.: A. D. 355. The disciple of Ædesius.
- 276 Zeno medicus: A. D. 355. Contemporary with Julianus the sophist.
- 277 Magnus medicus: A. D. 355. The disciple of Zeno N° 276.
- 278 Oribasius medicus: A. D. 355. 356. 362. The friend of the emperor Julian. Oribasius after an exile among the Goths was still living in A. D. 395.
- 279 Ionicus Sardianus medicus. The disciple of Zeno N° 276.
- 280 Acacius rhetor: of Cæsarea in Palestine. He flourished in the time of Libanius, and of the orator Tuscianus (N° 266).
- 281 Nicocles Laco. The preceptor of the emperor Julian. He was already eminent in A. D. 342, and was still living in 388.
- 282 Hecebolius. A preceptor of the emperor Julian.
- 283 Libanius. Born A. D. 314. At the Olympia of Antioch in 328, he is 14 years of age; 18 at the games of 332; 22 at the year 336; and 50 at the games of 364. Libanius was at Nicomedia in 346; at Constantinople in 352; at Antioch in 353 where he finally settled. He was 57 when Valens visited Antioch in 371. Libanius mentions his 76th year Ep. 866 Prisco (N° 290). That 76th year was completed in the close of A. D. 390. He addresses Ep. 940 Tatiano consuli. Tatianus succeeded Cynegius as præfect in 388, and was consul in 391; and that epistle brings down the life of Libanius to the 77th year.
- Some orations of Libanius are recorded at the years 349. 358. 362. 363. 365. 387. 388. An oration in praise of Cynegius after his death, not now extant, is mentioned by Libanius Ep. 1351. Cynegius died in March 388.
- 284 Himerius: A. D. 362. 368. Of Prusias in Bithynia. Flourished in the reigns of Constantine II and of Julian.
- 285 Parnasius. Contemporary with Himerius.
- 286 Eustathius: A. D. 312. The disciple of Jamblichus. Ambassador to Sapor in 358.

- 287 Callistus poeta. Attended Julian in his expedition into Persia in 363.
- 288 Chrysanthius: A. D. 355. 367. The preceptor of Eunapius. Chrysanthius died in his 80th year.
- 289 Hellespontius of Galatia. At an advanced age conversed with Chrysanthius at Sardis, and died at Apamea the year before Chrysanthius.
- 290 Priscus. Born in 306, died at the age of 90 in 395. Priscus is in Greece in 355, and in the expedition into Persia in 363. Libanius, as already observed, addressed Ep. 866 to this sophist in 390.
- 291 Epigonus } disciples of Ædesius. See A. D. 355.
- 292 Veronicianus } Veronicianus was still living in 395.
- 293 Sopater Apamensis: A. D. 326. Slain between the years 330 and 337. See A. D. 330.
- 294 Theon Sidonius sophista. Son of Gymnasius (N^o 248). Both the father and the son flourished in the reign of Constantine; and we may place Gymnasius at 310 and Theon at 335.
- 295 Eustochius Cappadox: A. D. 350.
- 296 Praxagoras Atheniensis historicus. Flourished cir. A. D. 329—341. See F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 311 note g.
- 297 Themistius. He was still young in 347, and still composed orations in 385. Favoured by Constantius II in 355, and 361. Appointed by Theodosius præfect of Constantinople in 384. Libanius addresses many epistles to Themistius.
- 298 Julianus imp. Born A. D. 331, slain A. D. 363. An account of his literary works is given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 107—109.
- 299 Andronicus poeta. Mentioned by Ammianus at A. D. 359.
- 300 Pappus. Flourished A. D. 380.
- 301 Theon mathematicus: A. D. 380.
- 302 Heliodorus Emisenus, Æthiopicorum Scriptor: described by Socrates as afterwards bishop of Tricca in Thessaly. The time of Socrates will carry back Heliodorus to about the year 380. His romance might be composed before that period.
- 303 Theodorus Asinæus. Heard by Proclus: from which we may infer that Theodorus was still living as late as A. D. 429, when Proclus was 19 years of age. He is quoted by Nemesisius, and with Porphyry, Jamblichus, and others, upon Plato by Proclus. The testimony of Proclus that Theodorus lived to his time refutes those who make him the disciple of Porphyry. See F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 314 notes l. m.

- 304 Eunapius Sardianus: was born in 347 and came to Athens in his 16th year in 362. He returned to Chrysanthius (N° 288) in 367. His life of Maximus was written after A. D. 395. His history ended at A. D. 404, but some passages were composed after 414.
- 305 Helladius } preceptors of the historian Socrates: A. D.
306 Ammonius } 389.
- 307 Nemesisius. In his treatise de natura hominis he quotes Apollinarius of Laodicea who flourished A. D. 362—380. Eunomius, who flourished A. D. 372—392; and Theodorus Asinæus, who still taught about A. D. 429. See N° 303. The work of Nemesisius might be composed in the latter time of Theodorus: within A. D. 409—429, and before Nestorius had published his opinions, who is not noticed by Nemesisius.
- 308 Troilus sophista: flourished in 408. See A. D. 401. 408,
- 309 Isidorus: A. D. 415. The husband of Hypatia.
- 310 Hypatia. Murdered at Alexandria in A. D. 415.
- 311 Palladas poeta: wrote after Hypatia had become eminent, and while she was yet living. Therefore about A. D. 410.
- 312 Eusebius poeta, author of the Γαῖνία. See A. D. 401.
- 313 Nonnus Panopolites is mentioned by Agathias. To him are ascribed the paraphrase of St. John, and the Dionysiaca. He is placed by Cave and Harles upon conjecture at A. D. 410. That he could not be much later is evident from the time of Agathias.
- 314 Ammonius poeta. Flourished in 438.
- 315 Heracleon sophista: the preceptor of Lachares. See A. D. 429.
- 316 Plutarchus Nestorii. Taught at Athens, and died there in old age in 431. Succeeded by Syrianus. See A. D. 429. 431. He is mentioned by Proclus ad Parmenidem, 317 Olympiodorus historicus : A. D. 407. 425. His history comprehended A. D. 407—425. Olympiodorus was ambassador to the Huns (about A. D. 412) : p. 455 Ed. Bonn. He mentions his visit to Athens p. 460 : describes himself and his danger at sea p. 465.

318 Olympiodorus peripateticus : A. D. 426. The preceptor of Proclus.

319 Leonas : A. D. 426. The preceptor of Proclus.

320 Orion : A. D. 426. The preceptor of Proclus.

Four grammarians named Orion or Orus may be traced. 1 Orion of Alexandria, who probably lived in the reign of Hadrian. 2 Orion of Thebes in Egypt, who dedicated to the empress Eudocia, within A. D. 421—444. 3 Orus of Alexandria, who wrote after the time of Herodian and Phrynichus. 4 Orion or Orus of Miletus. The Theban Orion was probably the preceptor of Proclus, whom he taught in A. D. 426—428, within the time of the empress Eudocia.

321 Heron mathematicus : A. D. 426. The preceptor of Proclus.

322 Syrianus : A. D. 429. 431. 536. The preceptor of Proclus. He succeeded Plutarchus in A. D. 431, and survived but a short time.

The works of Syrianus are described in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 317. 318 distributed into three classes. I Comment. in Platonem. II Comment. in Aristotelem. III Commentarii in Aphthonium et Hermogenem. IV Hymnus in Achillem. V In Ptolemæi μεγάλην σύνταξιν.

323 Ammonianus grammaticus. A kinsman of Syrianus the philosopher.

324 Domninus Syrus. The disciple of Syrianus.

325 Zosimus. End of his history in A. D. 410. An account of his time is given at A. D. 432. The errors of Zosimus in his account of the emperor Julian examined in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 103, and in his numbers of the reign of Theodosius at p. 129.

326 Lachares sophista : A. D. 429.

327 Superianus : A. D. 429.

328 { Eustephius } disciples of Lachares : A. D. 429.
{ Asterius }

- 329 Nicolaus. The disciple of Lachares, known to Proclus, A. D. 429.
- 330 Dioscorides grammaticus. Brother of Lachares the sophist A. D. 429.
- 331 Hierocles. The disciple of Plutarchus Nestorii: A. D. 431. Hierocles mentions Ammonius Saccas, Alexander of Aphrodisias, and his own teacher Plutarchus. Hierocles is named by Damascius. The disciple of Hierocles conversed with Damascius. Many fragments of Hierocles are preserved by Stobæus.
- 332 Joannes Stobæus. John of Stobi in Macedonia lived after Hierocles, whom he quotes: and in the opinion of Heeren not long after him. Perhaps where Heeren places him, within A. D. 450—500.
- 333 Hyperechius grammaticus: A. D. 453.
- 334 Proclus Lycius. Born in 410. His preceptors at Alexandria are described at A. D. 426. He was at Athens in 429, where he found Plutarch, Syrianus, Lachares, and Nicolaus. He was still at Athens in A. D. 437. His death is fixed by Marinus to April 475.
- In F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 320—322 an account is given of 38 works of Proclus, distributed into the following classes. I In Platonem. II Mathematica et Astronomica. III Philologica. IV Reliqua opera.
- 335 Ulpianus Gazzæus. Contemporary with Proclus.
- 336 Sallustius. He died in the time of Proclus, and was the friend of count Marcellinus, who was slain in A. D. 468.
- 337 Jacobus medicus: A. D. 462.
- 338 Priscus Thrax historicus: A. D. 448. Priscus was at Rome a short time before A. D. 451; and in Egypt in 452. He related the death of Aspar: See A. D. 471.
- 339 Malchus sophista. His history begins at A. D. 473, and is continued to 491.
- 340 Candidus Isaurus historicus. He begins at A. D. 457. His first book ends with 475: his third book included the death of Zeno in 491.
- 341 Nestorianus chronographus: A. D. 474.
- 342 Ammonius Hermæ. The disciple of Proclus. Hermæas the father of Ammonius was the disciple of Syrianus, according to the testimony of Damascius; who also mentions Gregorius the brother, and Ædesia the wife of Hermeas. Ammonius taught Damascius; see A. D. 525. He was also heard at Alexandria by Simplicius. He taught Asclepius of Tralles (N° 380), and Joannes Philoponus: see A. D. 617.

343 Timotheus Gazæus grammaticus: A. D. 494.

344 { Zosimus Gazæus rhetor. Put to death by the emperor Zeno: Cedren. p. 354 D.
Zosimus Ascalonita grammaticus, who lived in the reign of Anastasius, was the author of a life of Demosthenes, and of the commentaries which bear the name of Ulpian.

345 Eustathius Syrus historicus: A. D. 479. 491. He brought his history to A. D. 503.

346 Pamprepius: A. D. 484. Slain in 488.

347 Marinus Neapolites Palæstinæ. Succeeded Proclus in 485. See A. D. 525.

348 Theosebius: the disciple of Hierocles (N° 331) conversed with Damascius.

349 Hegias. Marinus relates that Proclus towards the end of his life (within A. D. 480—484) had great hopes of Hegias, then a young man; and Damascius affirms that, after the death of Marinus, his successor Isidorus, meditating to quit Athens, exhorted Hegias to sustain philosophy, which was then on the decline.

350 Zenodotus. A successor of Proclus: see A. D. 525.

351 Asclepiodotus philosophus. An eminent disciple of Proclus. He was a physician; the disciple of Jacobus N° 337.

352 Asclepiades Ægyptius. The friend Heraiscus. Mentioned with Heraiscus by Damascius apud Photium Cod. 242 p. 1048. apud Suidam p. 1662 c περὶ ἀρχῶν. p. 385.

353 Heraiscus. The disciple of Proclus: described by Damascius apud Suidam p. 1682 c, and in his own extant treatise περὶ ἀρχῶν c. 125 p. 385.

354 Æneas Gazæus. Flourished soon after A. D. 484, since he saw some who had suffered in Africa under the Vandalic persecution of that year.

355 Isidorus Alexandrinus. The successor of Marinus, and the preceptor of Damascius. See A. D. 500.

- 356 Theo rhetor : A. D. 525. He taught Damascius.
- 357 Agapius Atheniensis Procli discipulus : A. D. 511. Agapius was admired both at Constantinople and at Alexandria. Contemporary with him Damascius mentions as eminent Severianus and the two brothers Januarius and Nomus, of whom Nomus was of the same age as Damascius himself.
- 358 Christodorus poeta : A. D. 511.
- 359 { Anthemius Trallianus
Metrodorus
Olympius } A. D. 532.
- 360 Dioscorus medicus : A. D. 532.
- 361 Alexander Trallianus medicus A. D. 532. Brother of Anthemius, Metrodorus, Olympias, and Dioscorus.
- 362 Isidorus Milesius mechanicus : A. D. 532.
- 363 Zeno rhetor : A. D. 532.
- 364 Joannes Laurentius Lydus. Born A. D. 491. Came to Constantinople in 511. Was 62 years of age in 553.
- 365 Joannes rhetor historicus. Closed his history at A. D. 526.
- 366 Hesychius Milesius : A. D. 540.
- 367 Procopius Gazæus. The preceptor of Choricus (Nº 369). He flourished in the reign of Anastasius, to whom he addressed a panegyric still extant. His commentaries on various parts of Scripture are mentioned by Photius, who also gives an account of his other works. In his panegyric he mentions the wall built by Anastasius for the defence of Thrace from sea to sea, that is, from the Euxine to the Propontis, in 507. That panegyric was therefore composed after the 17th year of Anastasius. See for the Anastasian wall the Tables A. D. 507. In F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 325 s, that wall is inaccurately called the wall "across the Chersonese."
- 368 Petrus Thessalonicensis. An envoy to the Goths in Italy in 534, and 539; ambassador to Chosroes in 550. He negotiates a peace with Persia in 562. He was still living in 564.
- 369 Choricus Gazæus. Flourished in the reign of Justinian. The disciple of Procopius of Gaza (Nº 367). Villoison has published several declamations of Choricus, of which there are 19 letters given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 326.

370 Procopius Cæsariensis historicus. In Armenia in 526; in Africa in 533; in Sicily in 536; in Italy in 537, 538, 540. His Anecdota are mentioned at 559. His history of the Gothic war ends at 553.

371 { Januarius } Brothers, contemporary with Damascius.
 { Nomus } See N° 357.

372 Damascius. Described at A. D. 525. Withdrew to Persia A. D. 531. See 533. The preceptor of Simplicius: A. D. 536. The preceptors of Damascius himself were Ammonius Hermæ, Isidorus Alexandrinus (N° 355), Theo (N° 356), Marinus Zenodotus.

373 Simplicius. The disciple of Ammonius Hermæ. See N° 342, and of Damascius: see A. D. 525. He withdrew to Persia in 531, and returned in 533. In F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 327—329 eight works of Simplicius are described, some passages from the genuine text of his commentary in Aristot. de cœlo are given, and an abstract is inserted of his argument against Joannes Philoponus on the question of the eternity of the world. Philoponus denied the eternity of matter, and Simplicius attempts to answer him. Simplicius in his commentary de cœlo replies to a work of Philoponus who was then young, although already the author of voluminous works. We must therefore place this commentary of Simplicius de cœlo at the earliest at A. D. 555, when Philoponus was about 30 years of age. The commentary in VIII libros Aristotelis de phys. auscult. must be accounted among the last of the works of Simplicius. It was written after the death of Damascius, and after the work de cœlo, which is quoted. And as we have seen that the work de cœlo was not earlier than 555, this commentary on phys. auscult. may be placed within A. D. 555—560, more than 25 years after the return from Persia.

374 Eulamius: A. D. 525. 531.

375 Priscianus Lydus: A. D. 531. Philoponus wrote against him.

- 376 Hermeias Phcenix : A. D. 531.
 377 Diogenes Phoenix : A. D. 531.
 378 Isidorus Gazæus : A. D. 531.
 379 Hermolaus grammaticus ; A. D. 536.
 380 Asclepius Trallianus. A disciple of Ammonius Hermæ, whom he mentions as his preceptor.
 381 Joannes grammaticus Philoponus. Joannes, a native of Alexandria, was a disciple of Ammonius Hermæ (Nº 342) who had heard Proclus before A. D. 485. For memorials of Philoponus and of his time see A. D. 611. 617. 640. He was born about A. D. 525, wrote some works before the commentary of Simplicius upon Aristotle de cælo. His treatise against Joannes bishop of Constantinople was composed about the year 568, he addressed Sergius after 610, and still wrote in May 617, when he was probably 92 years of age.

The titles of 30 works of Philoponus are collected in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 331—333, distributed into their classes. I. Philosophica. II. Arithmetica vel astronomica. III. Theologica. IV. Grammatica. Of these the earliest is probably his extant work adversus Proclum de æternitate mundi, quoted by Philoponus himself in the work against Aristotle to which Simplicius replies in the comm. de cælo and in the comm. in Phys. Auscult. lib. VIII. An early work is also the treatise against Aristotle on the same subject. Libri sex in Aristotelem aliosque de æternitate mundi. Simplicius replies to the first five books of this work in his treatise de cælo lib. I. and to the 6th book in his comm. in Phys. Auscult. lib. VIII., and Simplicius testifies that Philoponus was still young when this work was written. In the first 5 books of that work Philoponus combated the opinions of Aristot. Meteorolog. and Aristot. de cælo, and in lib. VI. his dogmas concerning motion as set forth in Phys. Auscult. lib. VIII. The extant commentary upon the first four books of Aristot. Phys. Auscult. was probably the latest of the works of Philoponus, for it was written in A. D. 617. His work de creatione mundi libris VII, and the treatise entitled διατήρης, both composed at the request of Sergius, were written after A. D. 610.

382 Nonnosus historicus. He described his embassy to the Saracens and other eastern nations, in the reign of Justinian. His grandfather had been an ambassador to Arethas the Saracen in the reign of Anastasius; his father Abrames had been an envoy to Alamundarus in the reign of Justin, and again to Caisus the Saracen, a descendant of Arethas, in the reign of Justinian.

As the second mission of Abrames was in the reign of Justinian, after A. D. 527, the mission of Nonnosus himself was probably not early in that reign, and may be placed within about A. D. 540—550.

383 Isidorus mechanicus: A. D. 557.

384 Paulus Silentarius celebrated the dedication of St. Sophia in hexameter verse. The former edifice had been overthrown by an earthquake in December 557, and the church which Paulus celebrated was built soon after A. D. 558.

385 Macedonius, 41 of whose epigrams are extant in the Anthologia, flourished in the reign of Justinian in the time of Paulus.

386 Agathias scholasticus Myrinaeus. Contemporary with Paulus and Macedonius in the reign of Justinian. His history begins at A. D. 553, his fifth book included the year 559. Agathias wrote after the death of Justin II A. D. 578.

387 Joannes Epiphaniensis: A. D. 553. 578. He wrote after Agathias. His history contained 40 years A. D. 553—592.

388 Menander rhetor: A. D. 562. 576. He wrote his history in the reign of Mauricius.

389 Joannes Malalas. Quoted at A. D. 507. 528. He wrote after the death of Justinian. See A. D. 563.

390 Theophanes Byzantinus historicus: A. D. 567. 568. 571.

391 Theophylactus Simocatta. At Constantinople in 610. He wrote his history in the reign of Heraclius, after the death of Chosroes 28 Feb. 628. Theophylact was from Egypt. Petrus, who commanded at Alexandria in 602, was a relation of Theophylact.

392 Stephanus mathematicus: made a calculation with reference to the Saracens: "They issued forth Sept. 3

“ of the 10th indiction in the 12th year of Heraclius.” This refers to the Hejira, but with an error in the year. Sept. of the 10th indiction will give Sept. 3 A.D. 621, in the 11th year of Heraclius. But the 12th of Heraclius requires September of the eleventh indiction and of A.D. 622. And September A.D. 622 was also the true date of the Flight of Mohammed, to which the notice of Stephanus refers.

393 Georgius Pisides poeta: A.D. 622. 626. 628. Pisides also wrote against Philoponus (N° 381), than whom he was much younger; for Philoponus was about 85 when Heraclius began to reign, and Pisides still wrote in the 19th year of Heraclius.

394 Chronicon Paschale. The compiler lived in the reign of Heraclius, and ended his chronicle at the 20th year of that reign A.D. 630. See A.D. 628. The reasons for supposing only one compiler have been given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 209. The notation of the Chronicle is explained at A.D. 562. 616; and in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 210—212.

395 Georgius Syncellus: is described at A.D. 284. He wrote in A.D. 808, and marks his own time, 766 years after the Ascension, and anno mundi 6300 indictione prima.

Syncellus gives

y.	m.	d.
33	0	40
766	10	20

Syncellus, as we collect from p. 312 A. p. 315 D, computed the Incarnation not from the Nativity at Dec. 25 in the 43rd year of Augustus, but from the Conception at March 25 preceding. From that epoch he deduced the 33^y 0^m 40^d which terminate at the Ascension, May 3 of the 19th of Tiberius. He reckoned all his years from March 25, and, like the Paschal Chronicle, anticipated the beginnings of the years of Tiberius, and reckoned the 19th year not from Aug. 19 the true beginning, but from the 25th of March preceding. His epoch therefore for the Ascension is May 3. From this point the 33^y 0^m 40^d carry back the Annunciation to March 25 B. C. 1, and the Nativity to Dec. 25 of the same year; seven days only before the Vulgar Era began. Syncellus however has erred in the amount of the following period; for 766^y 10^m 20^d computed from May 3 A. D. 32 will terminate at March 24 A. D. 799, when the seventh indiction was current. Nine years then are to be added to bring his period to the first indiction in March 808. But indications that he had lost some years are supplied by Syncellus himself. We have seen at A. D. 284 that he lost 6 years between the death of Augustus and the death of Probus. And these are to be restored. The other 3 years he omitted between the death of Probus and the year 808. We conclude then from the place of the first indiction, and from the six years which we know to have been omitted, that the year 808, when the first indiction was current, was the epoch at which Syncellus wrote.

396 Theophanes is described at A. D. 284. 491. 565. He brought down his chronography to A. D. 812.

The few following names in alphabetical order contain some authors whose time is not fully known, and some who were omitted in the proper place in the Chronological Series.

397 Ariston Pellæus historicus. After A. D. 135 and before 325, when Eusebius quotes him.

398 Cornutus Leptites Libyæ, philosophus stoicus. Flourished in the reign of Nero, by whom he was banished. The works of Cornutus were studied by Origen.

399 Diodotus Astrologus. Contemporary with Alexander Ægæus (N° 3) by whom he is mentioned in the commentary upon Aristot. Meteorolog. as “οὐδενὸς δεύτερος “ τῶν καθ’ ἡμᾶς.”

400 Diogenes Laertius. After Saturninus (N° 183) whom he mentions, and before Sopater apud Photium cod. 161, who quoted from Laertius, and whom we have in Suidas as Sopater of Apamea, or Alexandria; a sophist whom, with Fabricius, we may place in the 6th century.

- 401 Eubulus. Before Porphyry, by whom he is quoted.
- 402 Hippobotus. Before Clemens Alexandrinus, and therefore before A. D. 194. Quoted also by Porphyry, Jamblichus, and Laertius.
- 403 Horapollo Panopolites grammaticus. He taught at Alexandria, and then at Constantinople, in the reign of Theodosius. Probably Theodosius II.
- 404 Marcianus Heracleota. Flourished after Artemidorus (N° 127) whom he quotes, and before Stephanus Byzantinus, by whom he is quoted.
- 405 Maximus Ægiensis. Between Apollonius Tyaneus A. D. 99 and Philostratus A. D. 235, who quotes Maximus in the affairs of Apollonius.
- 406 Menander Sophista: wrote commentaries in Hermogenis artem.
- 407 Mæragenes wrote memorials of Apollonius Tyaneus in four books, which are quoted by Philostratus and by Origen.
- 408 Onosander: a Platonic philosopher, author of Tactica still extant, addressed to Q. Veranius. The treatise was composed in a time of peace, and when the empire had attained its full measure of extent and power.
- 409 Ptolemæus Ascalonita grammaticus. Taught at Rome. He preceded Apollonius Dyscolus (N° 84) who quotes him.

§ 8. ECCLESIASTICAL AUTHORS.

Having described the Secular Greek Authors, I proceed in like manner to exhibit in order of time the Ecclesiastical Authors, both Greek and Roman, who belong to this work. In the account which was given of the early heretics in the larger work it was not proposed to enter upon a minute enquiry into all their dogmas, but only to assign them a place in the Chronological Series, and to collect some testimonies to these authors themselves and their opinions from writers either contemporary or near their time. The substance of what is thus collected shall be given in this epitome.

The early heretics are distributed by Theodoret into two classes: "My first book shall describe those who have feigned

 " another Creator, and, denying one principle of all things,
 " have supposed other principles which have no existence,
 " and who affirmed that the Lord was man in appearance
 " only. The first inventor of these dogmas was Simon Magus
 " the Samaritan; the last was that deceiver Manes the Per" sian. My second book will shew those who held an opposite " opinion, who acknowledged one principle of the universe,
 " but called the Lord a mere man. Ebion (Nº 5) began this " heresy, which received different forms down to Marcellus
 " (Nº 115) and Photinus (Nº 147)." He elsewhere observes
 " Simon and Menander, Marcion and Valentinus, Basilides,
 " Bardesanes, Cerdon (Nº 16) and Manes, absolutely denied
 " the human nature of Christ. While Artemon, Theodotus, " Sabellius (Nº 91), Paul of Samosata (Nº 92), Marcellus,
 " and Photinus, lapsed into an error directly opposite to this,
 " for they proclaim Christ a mere man, and deny his Divinity,
 " which existed before the worlds." Theodoret enumerates his own authorities: "I have collected the fables of the early " heretics from the ancient doctors of the church, namely
 " from Justin Martyr (Nº 30), Irenæus (Nº 51), Clemens
 " Alexandrinus (Nº 54), Origen (Nº 71), Eusebius Pamphili
 " (Nº 117), and Eusebius of Phœnicia (Nº 128); from Ada-
 " mantius, Rhodon (Nº 53), Titus (Nº 141), Diodorus (Nº
 " 162), and from Georgius of Laodicea, who, though an Arian,
 " was trained in philosophical learning."

Tertullian is an early writer upon this subject. A general sketch is presented in the following testimonies, given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 396: Justin Martyr dial. cum Tryphone c. 35, Hegesippus apud Euseb. H. E. IV. 22, Athanasius contra Arianos tom. 1 p. 308 D, Gregory of Nazianzus Or. 25 p. 460 A. The two classes of heretics, those who take away the human nature of Christ and accept only his divinity, and those who on the contrary circumscribe his divinity and only acknowledge him as the most holy and just of men, are noticed by Origen Comm. in Joannem tom. X Vol. 1 p. 285.

All these were heretics in one sense, as presenting false views of the Christian doctrine. But the founders of Gnosticism in its various forms may be more justly considered as philosophers, or rather sophists, who adapted the Law and the Gospel to Heathen Systems. They had the wild inventions of the Egyptians, the Indians, the Chaldæans; they had the Two Principles of the Persians; they had the mythology of Greece; they had the Philosophy of Pythagoras and Plato and other Grecian masters. Out of these elements, combined with the Hebrew Scriptures and with Christianity, they produced their systems.

- 1 Clemens Romanus. Although he was later in time than Simon magus, yet we place him first, that the succession in the Roman church may be touched upon before an account is given of the early heretics. Hieronymus: Clemens—quartus post Petrum Romanus episcopus [the fourth including Peter himself]; siquidem II Linus, III Anacletus, tamen plerique Latinorum secundum post Petrum apostolum putent fuisse Clementem. Scripsit ex persona Romanæ ecclesiæ ad ecclesiam Corinthiorum valde utilem epistolam quæ et in nonnullis locis etiam publice legitur; quæ mihi videtur characteri epistolæ quæ sub Pauli nomine ad Hebræos fertur convenire. Hieronymus adds from Eusebius Obiit tertio Trajani anno [A. D. 100].
- 2 Simon magus. Contemporary with St. Peter A. D. 35—65. See A. D. 134. According to Theodoret the sect of Simon spread into many branches, which soon disappeared.
- 3 Nicolaus Antiochenus. According to Tertullian and Hieronymus he was one of the seven deacons mentioned in the Acts, and author of a heresy which Tertullian and Hieronymus describe.
- 4 Cerinthus, who came after Carpocrates (Nº 13) founded a pretended Revelation of his own upon the Apocalypse of St. John, and taught that the reign of Christ upon earth during the millennium would be a period of sensual pleasure.
- 5 Ebion. Tertullian calls him the successor of Cerinthus. Hieronymus affirms that Ebion determined that the Mosaic law was still to be observed by Jewish converts. Eusebius does not speak of Ebion, but of the Ebionites; and relates that this sect taught that Christ was a mere man, the son of Joseph and Mary; and that the Mosaic Law was still to be observed.

- 6 Menander Samarites. The disciple of Simon Magus. See F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 123.
- 7 Ignatius bishop of Antioch : A. D. 90—115. See A. D. 115.
- 8 Polycarpus bishop of Smyrna. He flourished A. D. 100—166. See A. D. 150. 166. 197. Hieronymus : Polycarpus Joannis apostoli discipulus, et ab eo Smyrnæ episcopus ordinatus, totius Asiæ princeps fuit.—Smyrnæ sedente proconsule et universo populo—igni traditus est. Scripsit ad Philippenses valde utilem epistolam, quæ usque hodie in Asiæ conventu legitur.
- 9 Papias : may be placed at A. D. 100, for he was the disciple of St. John, who still lived at that year. Hieronymus after Eusebius : Papias Johannis auditor Hierapolitanus episcopus in Asia quinque tantum scripsit volumina, quæ prænotavit Explanatio Sermonum Domini, in quibus quum se in præfatione asserat non varias opiniones sequi, sed apostolos auctores habere, ait “ Considerabam quid Andreas, quid Petrus dixissent, quid Philippus, quid Thomas, quid Jacobus, quid Johannes, quid Matthæus, vel alius quilibet discipulorum Domini ; quid etiam Aristion et senior Johannes discipuli Domini loquebantur. Non enim tantum mihi libri ad loquendum prosunt quantum viva vox, usque hodie in suis auctoribus personans.” Ex quo apparet in ipso catalogo nominum alium esse Johannem qui inter apostolos ponitur, et alium seniore Johanne quem post Aristionem enumerat. Hoc autem diximus propter opinionem quam a plerisque retulimus traditam, duas posteriores epistolas Johannis non apostoli esse sed presbyteri. Hic dicitur mille annorum Judaicam edidisse δευτέρωσιον, quem secuti sunt Irenæus et Apollinarius et cæteri qui post resurrectionem aiunt in carne cum sanctis Dominum regnaturum.

Irenæus asserts, and Eusebius in Chronico admits, that Papias was the disciple of St. John the evangelist. Eusebius H. E. III. 39 denies this, and infers that Papias conversed only with Aristion and the presbyter John. But, as these were also disciples of the Lord—οἱ τοῦ Κυρίου μαθηταί—and therefore contemporary with the apostles and witnesses of the Ministry, Papias, who heard them, must have flourished at A. D. 100, or near that date.

- 10 Quadratus: A. D. 125. a disciple of the apostles.
- 11 Aristides: A. D. 125. Quadratus and Aristides addressed Apologies to Hadrian.
- 12 Saturninus Antiochenus: the disciple of Menander (N° 6), taught in the time of Basilides, cir. A. D. 110—134. See A. D. 134.
- 13 Carpocrates. Contemporary with Saturninus and Basilides. On Carpocrates and his son Epiphanes see the testimonies in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 403.
- 14 Basilides: A. D. 134. He had conversed with Glaucias a disciple of St. Peter, and came between Menander and Valentinus. He taught his dogmas in Egypt.
- 15 Valentinus: A. D. 140—144. Valentinus conversed with a disciple of St. Paul. See 144.
- 16 Cerdon: A. D. 140. The preceptor of Marcion. Irenæus: “ One Cerdon taking his principles from Simon magus “ came to Rome in the time of Hyginus, and taught that “ the God of the Law and the Prophets was not the “ Father of Jesus Christ. Marcion of Pontus succeeded “ him and spread his dogmas more widely.”
- 17 Marcion of Pontus: A. D. 140. 150. 151. 194.
 Marcion accepted St. Luke's Gospel, but is charged with corrupting it. In the epistles of Paul he is charged with omissions. He rejected also altogether some epistles of St. Paul. His mutilations of the text of Scripture are examined in detail by Epiphanius. Marcion held that the Old Testament and the New were by different authors. He held that Christ was a phantasma. He discouraged marriage, and recommended abstinence. Hieronymus admits that he was not charged with impurity. The tale of Epiphanius p. 302 C is refuted by the express declaration of Hieronymus, and the silence of other authors.
- 18 Isidorus Basilidis filius. He made some additions to the dogmas of his father. Basilides and Isidorus were opposed by Agrippa (N° 28), Irenæus, Clemens Alexandrinus, and Origen.
- 19 Epiphanes Carpocratis filius. Theodoret relates that Carpocrates of Alexandria (N° 13) and his son Epiphanes taught their dogmas in the reign of Hadrian.

- 20 Prodicus. The disciple of Carpocrates.
- 21 Secundus. The disciple of Valentinus.
- 22 Ptolemæus. Also a disciple of Valentinus. Tertullian:
 “ Ptolemæus and Secundus agree in all other points
 “ with Valentinus: in this alone they differ, that, while “ Valentinus imagined only 30 Æons, they have added
 “ others, namely, first four, and then four others.”
 Theodoret: “ Secundus the successor of Valentinus “ divided the ogdoad into two parts, one he called the “ right, the other the left, and added Light and Dark“ ness. From hence innumerable other heresiarchs
 “ have issued, Cassianus, Theodotus, Heracleon, Ptole“ mæus, Marcus (N° 25), who invented various other “ dogmas.”
- 23 Heracleon: the disciple of Valentinus, and the most noted of his school. His interpretations of St. John's Gospel are often quoted and censured by Origen.
- 24 Alexander: a disciple of Valentinus. Described by Tertullian.
- 25 Marcus: a Valentinian. See N° 22.
- 26 { Lucanus. A disciple of Marcion.
 { Apelles. A disciple of Marcion, known to Rhodon (N°
 53). See A. D. 196.
- 27 Montanus Phryx: A. D. 173. 212. Author of the sect called Montanists from him; Cataphrygian from Phrygia the country; and Pepyrian from Pepyza the town in Phrygia.

Tertullian in a treatise written after he became a Montanist affirms that “ The new prophets are rejected,
 “ not because Montanes, Priscilla, and Maximilla preach “ another God, or disparage Christ, or overturn any “ rule of faith, but because they teach fasting and ab“ stinence from marriage.” In another work he relates that “ the then bishop of Rome recognised the prophe“ cies of Montanus, Prisca, and Maximilla, and from “ that recognition secured the peace of the churches of “ Asia and Phrygia; but that Praxeas by false accounts “ of the prophets and their churches compelled him to “ recal his letters of peace.” That bishop of Rome was probably Eleutherus. Hieronymus thus compares the dogmas of the church with those of the Montanists :

 “ We place the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit,
 “ each in his own person, though we join them in sub-

28 Agrippa Castor : A.D. 135.

29 Hermas : A.D. 136. Author of the Pastor. The brother of Pius bishop of Rome. Origen supposed the author of the Pastor to be Hermas the companion of St. Paul, and quotes that work as a book of authority.

30 Justinus Martyr : A. D. 151. His first apology was published in 151 : after which his Dialogue with Trypho.

31 Hegesippus : flourished A. D. 152—173. See A. D. 152. 173 F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 409 e.

32 Athenagoras : A. D. 168.

33 Melito bishop of Sardis : A. D. 172. The titles of 21 works are given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 409 f.

- 84 Theophilus Antiochenus: A. D. 171. 181. He was appointed bishop of Antioch in 171, and presided 12 or 13 years.
- 85 Apollinarius Hierapolitanus: A. D. 172. 174.
- 86 Dionysius Corinthius: A. D. 173.
- 87 Pinytus: A. D. 173. 183. Bishop of Cnossus.
- 88 Tatianus: A. D. 173. A Syrian, the founder of the enkratitæ. Tatian was the disciple of Justin Martyr. Hieronymus: "Tatian after he left Justin founded a new heresy called the enkratitæ; which afterwards Severus carried yet further, from whom the heretics are called the Severians."—"Tatian rejected some epistles of St. Paul, as that to Titus. The apostle condemns those who forbid marriage and ordered abstinence from meats. He designates Marcion and Tatian and others who enjoin perpetual abstinence, and forbid marriage." Tatian is charged by Tertullian, Eusebius, and Theodoret, with adopting some of the errors of Valentinus.
- 89 Philippus: A. D. 183.
- 40 Musanus or Musianus: A. D. 183. He wrote against the Severians.
- 41 Modestus: A. D. 183. Wrote against heresies.
- 42 Julius Cassianus. Quoted by Clemens Alexandrinus as one of the Doketæ. From the time of Clement, we may assign Cassianus to A. D. 174—190.
- 43 Bardesanes: A. D. 173. For Bardesanes see the testimonies in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 410. 411 note i.
- 44 Praxeas: against whom Tertullian wrote. According to Tertullian, Praxeas held Patrem compassum esse cum Filio.—Ipsum descendisse in virgine; ipsum ex ea natum; ipsum passum.—Iste primus ex Asia hoc genus perversitatis intulit homo. Praxeas was at Rome, and not yet accounted a heretic in the time of Eleutherus. See N° 27.
- 45 Theodotus Byzantius coriarius. He held that Christ was a mere man. Theodotus was excommunicated by Victor of Rome. Another Theodotus and Asolepiades were his disciples.
- 46 Victor Romanus: A. D. 189. Succeeded Eleutherus about

A. D. 185. His conduct in the dispute concerning Easter is recorded at A. D. 197.

47 Theodotus trapezites. See N° 45.

48 Artemon. Theodoret: "Artemon or Artemas agreed "with us concerning God, and held that he was the "Creator of all things, but he affirmed that Jesus Christ
"was a mere man born of a virgin, although superior to "the prophets." According to Eusebius Artemas was the precursor of Paul of Samosata.

49 Florinus, whom Irenæus while a boy saw in western Asia associated with Polycarp, follows the errors of Valentinus. From the letter of Irenæus ad Florinum, preserved by Eusebius, it seems that Florinus added new opinions of his own to the dogmas of Valentinus.

50 Hermogenes: against whom Tertullian wrote. Mentioned as still living by Tertullian præscr. hæc. c. 30. Theodoret: "Hermogenes taught that God made all things "out of uncreated matter, and that the body of the Lord
"was lodged in the Sun, and that the devil and his "angels would be poured back into matter. Theophilus
"of Antioch and Origen wrote against Hermogenes;
"Irenæus, Clemens, and Origen against Valentinus."

51 Irenæus. Succeeds Pothinus bishop of Lyons A. D. 177. Named at 183 and at 197.

52 Pantænus: A. D. 180. 190. 194. The preceptor of Clemens Alexandrinus.

53 Rhodon: A. D. 196. Wrote against heresies.

54 Clemens Alexandrinus: A. D. 180. 194. Still living in 203. Named at 205 by Eusebius.

55 Miltiades: A. D. 184.

56 Apollonius: A. D. 212. Wrote against the Montanists.

57 Serapion. Appointed bishop of Antioch A. D. 190. Is succeeded by Asclepiades in 203.

58 Theophilus Cæsareæ
59 Bacchylus Corinthius } A. D. 190. 196.
60 Polycrates Ephesius }

Theophilus, Bacchylus, and Polycrates all took part in the controversy concerning Easter in A. D. 197.

61 Demetrius Alexandrinus. His episcopate was at A. D. 190—233. For his conduct to Origen see A. D. 228.

62 Heraclitus : A. D. 195.

63 Maximus περὶ ὕλης. See A. D. 195.

64 Candidus

65 Apion

66 Sextus

67 Arabianus

68 Judas : A. D. 202.

69 Tertullianus. Flourished cir. A. D. 190—214. A Montanist before A. D. 207. He lived to extreme old age: see A. D. 208. He alludes to his early paganism. He joins Montanus: Et nos quidem postea agnitio Paracleti atque defensio disjunxit a psychicis. He attests his own time: Grande documentum nostræ etiam ætati proposuit: M. Aurelio apud Sirmium reipublicæ exemplo. He names Cassius, Niger, Albinus; and observes in another place, Nonne vanissimas Papias leges—Severus constantissimus principum exclusit? He marks Africa as his country.

Tertullian testifies to the equal authority of all the apostolical churches for establishing by tradition what the apostles taught upon the fundamental doctrines.

70 Hippolytus : A. D. 222. 227. As he conversed with Irenæus, and still wrote in the sixth year of Alexander, he may be placed at A. D. 190—227. If he was a martyr (which is not however mentioned by Eusebius) his life was extended beyond the reign of Alexander to the time of Maximin A. D. 235.

The name of his bishoprick was unknown to Eusebius, Hieronymus, and Theodoret. Later writers assign him a diocese.

The genuine titles of the works of Hippolytus may be gathered from Eusebius and Photius, from Hieronymus c. 81, and from Theodoret. See the list in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 414. 415^a.

71 Origenes. Born A. D. 185; in his 17th year at the death of his father Leonidas in A. D. 202. He studied under Ammonius at Alexandria in 206. In his early youth he wrote commentaries upon philosophy. Origen visited Antioch in 226, was ordained a presbyter in 228. He was at Cæsarea in 231. He died in his 69th year in 253.

^a In the list of the works of Hippolytus given in Vol. 2 of F. Rom. the nineteenth is entitled "Contra omnes hæreses." The manuscript, lately edited by M. Emmanuel Miller and printed at the University Press Oxford, which is considered by M. Miller to be the lost Treatise of Origen, is probably as the Chevalier Bunsen maintains, this work of Hippolytus. Editor.

His works at Alexandria between A. D. 226 and 235 are the following :

Comm. in Joannem tom. I—V.

In Genesin tom. I—VIII.

In Psalmos 1—25.

In Lamentationem.

De principiis.

Stromateis libris X.

In A. D. 235 de martyrio. After that date Comm. in Joannem tom. XXII. Within A. D. 239—249 Comm. in Esaiam, Comm. in Ezekiel.

After A. D. 235

Contra Celsum libri VIII.

Comm. in Matthæum tomi XXV.

In prophetas XII minores tomi XXV.

Epistolæ varicæ.

Among the other works of Origen, of which the time is uncertain, may be named the following :

Hexapla et Tetrapla. The Hexapla before the Tetrapla. One contained six Greek versions, the other contained four.

Comm. in I Corinth. Before Hom. 17 in Lucam.

Homiliæ in Lucam, Comm. in Lucam. Before Comm. in Joann. tom. XXII. 2.

Epistola ad Africanum de Susanna.

Epistola ad Gregorium Thaumaturgum.

Comm. in Galatas tomi V.

Hieronymus, who praised Origen in A. D. 392, afterwards condemned him as heretical. Origen's heretical opinions are set forth by Epiphanius, and are collected by Hieronymus into eight points.

1 That the persons of the Trinity are not equal.

2 He held the preexistence of souls, which were placed in human bodies as a punishment for former transgressions.

3 That future punishments would not be eternal, and that the devils would be forgiven at last.

4 He interpreted Genesis IV. 21 to mean "He gave them bodies."

5 That there will be no resurrection of the body and no difference of sexes in the future world.

6 He treats the description of Paradise in Genesis II. 8—14 as an allegory.

7 He allegorises Genesis I. 6. 7.

8 That the image of God in which man was made (Genes. I. 26. 27) was lost after the fall.

The charges against him were afterwards enlarged into fifteen propositions apud Anonymum Photii cod. 117, in which however all the articles named by Hieronymus are not included.

But although Origen was rudely assailed by Theophilus of Alexandria, by Epiphanius and Hieronymus, yet he was more favourably judged by others of equal name: by Athanasius himself, by Titus of Bostra, by the two Gregories, of Nazianzus, and of Nyssa, by Dionysius of Alexandria, by Alexander of Hierapolis. Augustine thus speaks: "The Origenists," says Epiphanius, "reject the resurrection of the dead; they introduce Christ and the Holy Spirit as created beings: they allegorise Paradise and Heaven and all other things. Thus Epiphanius of Origen. His defenders however assert that he taught that the Father the Son and the Holy Spirit were of one and the same substance; and that he did not deny the Resurrection of the dead, although those who are more conversant in his works attempt to convict him upon this charge. But there are other dogmas of Origen which the church does not receive, in which she neither charges him falsely nor can be misled by his advocates: especially his scheme concerning the purification and liberation of rational created beings, and their return to the same evils in the revolution of time; of which absurd impiety I have “ treated in my work de civitate Dei against the philosophers by whom Origen was misled.”

In behalf of Origen we may contend that his meaning was sometimes exaggerated or perverted by his adversaries ; that much was added by his followers which was not his own ; that his zeal in combating an error sometimes carried him (as it has carried others) into the opposite extreme ; that his opinions are sometimes corrected and explained by other passages in his works ; that his speculations were not all intended to be published ; that he sometimes proposed opinions as problems for consideration, as conjectures, and not certainties ; that he was humble and unpresuming and by no means confident in himself ; finally, that his errors of judgment were very much outweighed by his merits.

72 Ammonius. Hieron. Catal. c. 53. A distinct person from Ammonius Saccas the preceptor of Origen. See above, Greek Authors N° 194.

73 Ambrosius. The disciple and friend of Origen. See A. D. 235. 246. He died before A. D. 253.

74 Noetus. Of Smyrna or of Ephesus. Theodoret : “ Noetus “ revived a heresy of which one Epigonus had been the “ inventor, and which Cleomenes adopted. They say “ that there is one God and Father the Creator of all “ things, that he is invisible when he will, and visible “ when it is his pleasure. The same Being is invisible “ and visible, begotten and unbegotten : unbegotten “ from the beginning, but begotten when it was his will “ to be born of a virgin : impassible and immortal, and “ again passible and mortal : for being impassible, he “ chose to suffer on the cross. This Being they call “ both the Son and the Father, adapting the appellation “ to the circumstances.” Noetus according to Epiphanius published his opinions about 130 years before A. D. 375.

75 Heraclas Alexandrinus. Bishop of Alexandria, in A. D. 233. Succeeded by Dionysius in 249.

76 Tryphon Origenis discipulus : A. D. 254. 261.

77 Minucius Felix. Hieronymus : “ A distinguished lawyer “ at Rome, author of a dialogue entitled Octavius : an-

“ other book, de fato vel contra mathematicos bears his name, but seems to me to be written in a different style. Lactantius makes mention of Minucius.” He flourished therefore before A. D. 306, when Lactantius lived, and after Origen, since he is placed by Hieronymus below Trypho the disciple of Origen. Minucius himself speaks of an intended treatise de fato.

- 78 Caius: A. D. 210. He received only 13 epistles of St. Paul, and rejected the epistle to the Hebrews.
- 79 Beryllus. Bishop of Bostra, flourished A. D. 210—227.
- 80 Alexander Hierosolymitanus. Succeeded Narcissus A. D. 214, and perished in the Decian persecution in 250.
- 81 Julius Africanus. For his chronology and works see A. D. 221. Mentioned again at 222.
- 82 Geminus ecclesiæ Antiochenæ presbyter: A. D. 227. He flourished in the reign of Alexander, and in the episcopacy of Zebinus at Antioch, and about the time of the appointment of Heraclas at Alexandria; within A. D. 222—235.
- 83 Theoctistus Cæsareæ Palæstinæ episcopus. Received Origen in 231; is mentioned at 252; and is succeeded by Domnus in 261.
- 84 Gregorius Thaumaturgus. The disciple of Origen: A. D. 232. Addressed by Origen in a letter still extant. Appointed bishop of Cæsarea in Pontus about the year 261. He was present at the council upon Paul of Samosata in 264. As he is not named by Eusebius in the last council upon Paul in 269, he probably died before the accession of Aurelian within A. D. 265—268.
- 85 Cornelius Romanus. Elected in A. D. 251, and died in exile 14 Sept. 252.
- 86 Cyprianus. Appointed bishop of Carthage in 248. His letters to Cornelius of Rome are at A. D. 252. His treatise de mortalitate at A. D. 253. His exile is in A. D. 257; his death 14 Sept. 258.
- 87 Pontius diaconus Cypriani: A. D. 259.
- 88 Firmilianus, bishop of Cæsarea in Cappadocia, favoured Origen in 231. He is mentioned in 252. 261. He was present at the council against Paul in 264, and died on his way to the third synod in 269. He was therefore bishop about 39 years, A. D. 231—269 inclusive.

- 89 Dionysius Alexandrinus succeeds Heraclas in the catechetical school in 233, and in the episcopate in 249. He died in 265.

The letters and tracts of Dionysius were distributed over a space of 17 years current, the term of his episcopate. They are given in F. Rom. Vol. 2. p. 419—421 for the most part in the order in which they lie in Eusebius; by whom they are partly quoted in the order of time, and partly classed according to their subjects. Hieronymus enumerates the works of Dionysius, but not in the same order.

- 90 Novatianus: A.D. 251. 252. Hieronymus: "Novatianus
 " a presbyter of the Roman church having attempted to " obtain the episcopate of Rome in preference to Cor" nelius, establishes the dogma of the Novatians or " Puritans, which refuses to receive back again penitent
 " apostates. He was influenced by the counsels of No-
 " vatus the presbyter of Cyprian." The Novatians are described by Asclepiades apud Socratem, a Novatian bishop in the time of Atticus of Constantinople A.D.
 406—425. The account which is given by Cornelius apud Eusebium is the account of an adversary.

- 91 Sabellius may be placed at A. D. 256—270. He was the disciple of Noetus, and was recent in the time of Epi-phanius. And Noetus, who preceded Sabellius, flourished in A.D. 245. Sabellius was contemporary with Dionysius of Alexandria and Dionysius of Rome, both of whom wrote against him. Sabellius was an African.
 His opinions were already known in 257. They are thus set forth by Theodoret: "He held that there was " one hypostasis of the Father the Son and Holy " Spirit, and one person bearing three names. He calls
 " the same person sometimes the Father sometimes the " Son sometimes the Holy Spirit. He holds that the " same person legislated in the Old Testament as the " Father, and assumed man in the New Testament as " the Son, and inspired the apostles as the Holy Spirit.
 " Dionysius of Alexandria wrote against him."

- 92 Paulus Samosatenus. Bishop of Antioch in 262. See A. D. 260. The first council upon Paul was held in 264. He was deposed in 270. Paul was condemned by 70 bishops.
- 93 Malchion : A. D. 269.
- 94 Eusebius Laodicens episcopus : A. D. 273. 279.
- 95 Anatolius Laodicens episcopus : A. D. 279.
- 96 Theotecnus Cæsareæ Palæstinæ episcopus : A. D. 261—264. Succeeded by Agapius : A. D. 284.
- 97 Manes. Probably born towards the close of A. D. 239. Escapes into Mesopotamia in 261. Was put to death within A. D. 273—275. See A. D. 272. 278. He might be 21 years of age in 261, and from 33 to 35 at his death.

As Manichæism was widely diffused and continued long, and as Manes is treated by some modern writers with more favour than he deserves, I propose to insert a brief outline of his system. The reader is referred for the testimonies to F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 424—431. The scheme of Manes was this.

The Good God reigned from all eternity in a region of light, surrounded by luminous intelligent beings, emanations from himself, substances without definite forms. This world of light contained five elements; light or lucid earth, water, air, fire, ether. But there also existed from all eternity another independent world, the realm of Darkness and Matter and Evil. The Being who ruled in this region was a giant in human shape. From him had been produced a race of demons of either sex, who from their conjunction after the manner of human generation had peopled that world of darkness. This region also had its five elements; darkness or earth instead of light, wind instead of air, an evil and destructive fire, smoke instead of ether. The two Beings who reigned in these two worlds were independent of each other. Each was supreme within his own limits^a. The God of Light was conscious of the existence of the world of darkness, but the realm of light was unknown to the Evil One.

^a The Manichee in Augustine denies that they acknowledged two Gods. But although they withheld the name they gave the substance. Their Evil Principle like his adversary was eternal, self-existent, independent, supreme within his own domain.

At length, after countless ages, the demons (princes or ἀρχόντες) of the world of darkness chanced to discover the region of light. They entered that domain, captured some of those bright substances the emanations of the God of light, and bore their prize away. Those particles of light, destined hereafter to be the souls of men, are carried to the king of the dark region. The God of Light essayed to recover those emanations of himself from their captivity. He first formed a Power, the Mother of Life. From her issued a Being of similar form to the king of darkness himself. This Being, named the First Man because he bore the form which was afterwards given to Adam, proceeded on his mission to recover the captured substances. He failed in his attempt^b. The God of Light prepared an agent more potent than the first, and produced the Living Spirit, who was to invade the realm of darkness and to rescue those imprisoned particles of light by force. What followed shall be told by Manes himself apud Augustinum de natura boni, c. 46: Iniquis igitur commentis ad eos qui aderant ait (princeps tenebrarum) "Quid vobis videtur maximum hoc lumen quod oritur? Intuemini quemadmodum polum movet [sc. Spiritus Vivens], concutit plurimas potestates. Quapropter mihi vos æquum est id quod in vestris viribus habetis luminis prærogare; sic quippe illius magni [sc. Primi Hominis] qui gloriosus apparuit imaginem fingam, per quam regnare poterimus, tenebrarum aliquando conversatione liberati." Hæc audientes ac diu secum deliberantes justissimum putaverunt id quod postulabantur præbere. Nec enim fidebant se idem lumen jugiter retenturos. Unde melius rati sunt principi suo id offerre, nequaquam desperantes eodem se pacto regnaturos. Quo igitur modo lumen illud quod habebant præbuerint considerandum est. Nam hoc etiam omnibus divinis scripturis arcanisque cœlestibus adpersum est; sapientibus vero quomodo sit datum scire minime est difficile, nam coram aperteque cognoscitur ab eo qui vere ac fideliter intueri voluerit. Quoniam eorum qui convenerant frequentia promiscua erat, feminarum scilicet ac masculorum, impulit eos ut inter se coirent; in

^b The First Man in his contest with the Powers of Darkness produced the Passible Jesus (not the Christ, who is, in the scheme of Manes, the Impassible Jesus). The soul or luminous part of the offspring of the First Man was seized and imprisoned in the elements of matter with the other particles of light.

quo coitu alii seminarunt, aliæ gravidæ effectæ sunt. Erant autem partus iis qui genuerant similes, vires plurimas parentum, uti primi, obtinentes. Hæc sumens eorum princeps uti præcipuum donum gavisus est^c. Et, sicuti etiam nunc fieri videmus; corporum formatricem naturam mali inde vires sumentem figurare, ita etiam antedictus princeps sodalium prolem accipiens habentem parentum sensus, prudentiam, lucem simul secum in generatione procreatam, comedit, ac plerisque viribus sumptis ex istiusmodi esca, in qua non modo inerat fortitudo sed multo magis astutiæ et pravi sensus ex fera genitorum gente, propriam ad se conjugem evocavit, ex ea qua ipse erat stirpe manantem, et facto cum ea coitu seminavit ut ceteri abundantiam malorum quæ devoraverat, nonnihil etiam ipse adjiciens ex sua cogitatione ac virtute ut esset sensus ejus omnium eorum quæ profuderat formator atque descriptor; cujus compar excipiebat hæc ut semen consuevit culta optime terra percipere. In eadem enim construebantur et contexebantur omnium imagines cælestium ac terrenarum virtutum, ut pleni videlicet orbis id quod formabatur similitudinem obtineret. Briefly but accurately expressed by Augustine hæc. 46. Adam et Evam ex parentibus principibus fumi asserrunt natos, cum pater eorum nomine Sacras sociorum suorum fetus omnium devorasset, et quidquid inde commixtum divinæ substantiæ ceperat cum uxore concumbens in carne prolis tanquam tenacissimo vinculo colligasset.

By this process Adam contained those luminous particles which had been captured by the demons, and which were to be disseminated among all his posterity. The God of Light thus frustrated commanded the Living Spirit to create the earth for the habitation of Adam and his race; from whence the imprisoned souls might gradually be transferred to their original seats. The earth was formed of mixed materials, partly good and partly evil. It had five elements, after the pattern of the five elements in the world of light. Adam being the offspring of the Evil Principle, Moses and the prophets are rejected by Manes as adversaries of the God of Light. They are the interpreters of the fathers of Adam.

To withdraw the luminous substances, the souls of men,

^c According to Manes however in another fable the demons retained a part of the luminous substance, which from their evil tabernacle of matter, Christ was sent; who was a man in appearance only, and not really born or crucified. Through Christ those luminous particles, those imprisoned souls, after various transmigrations, and after purification in the fires of the Sun and in the waters of the Moon, are to be restored to the region of the God of Light. When all is accomplished, the two empires of Light and Darkness will return to their primeval state, each ruled by its own independent Chief; except that some of the particles of light, the souls of men, who had not been purified, are for ever excluded from the world of Light. The Frontiers of the Realm of Light are to be secured by a strong guard against future invasion^d.

The God of the Manichees is not omnipotent, for he cannot subdue the realm of darkness; nor omniscient, for he did not foresee the issue of the contest, when he sent forth the First Man with insufficient powers; nor omnipresent, for he reigns in limited space. Manes assigned to his God the North, the East, and the West, and the South to the Power of Darkness. That land of darkness was of immense extent; although the world of light was larger than the world of darkness. But, as it is impossible for the Deity to be present in any place in which he is not supreme, he is necessarily absent from that part of space which is occupied by the Evil Principle of Manes.

Manes calls himself the apostle of Jesus Christ, or the Paraclete promised in the Gospel of St. John. He appointed twelve masters and seventy-two bishops, under whom were presbyters and deacons. His disciples were divided into the elect, and the auditors or catechumens. The account of gross and impure rites imputed to the Manichees may be rejected as calumnies invented by their enemies. They were by all testimonies of austere lives, given to fasting and abstinence. They discouraged marriage that they might hasten the return of souls to the realm of Light.

^d The guard which is to defend the frontiers is to be composed of those souls, (part of the luminous substance,) who are to dwell neither in the world of light nor in the world of darkness.

Whether the souls which are not purified are only excluded from the realm of light, or whether they are plunged into the realm of darkness, in either case the Evil Principle has the advantage in the contest; for he either disables those bright substances from regaining their original nature or retains possession of a part of his conquest.

Lardner is unwilling to pronounce Manes an impostor. But he cannot be acquitted of the charge of imposture. The fundamental dogma of the Two Principles he received from others, and probably believed; and in asserting this he might be no impostor. But the details of his system contained absurd fables which were inventions of his own. He knew them to be fables, and yet he laboured to persuade others to accept them as truth.

81 Eusebius Cæsareæ A. D. 308—340.

100 Pierius: A. D. 283.

102 Theognostus: A. D. 285.

103 Miletius Ponti episcopus: A. D. 283.

104 Pamphilus: A. D. 284. Imprisoned A. D. 307. Libri pro Origene A. D. 308.

105 Lucianus Antiochenus presbyter. He perished at Nicomedia in the renewed persecution under Maximin, soon after the death of Galerius, towards the close of A. D. 311.

- 106 Phileas. Hieronymus: De urbe Ægypti quæ vocatur Thmuis, nobili genere et non parvis opibus, suscepto episcopatu elegantissimum librum de martyrum laude composuit. He also suffered martyrdom under Maximin in Egypt, when Lucian suffered at Nicomedia.
- 107 Arnobius. Taught at Sicca in A. D. 284. See A. D. 296. Arnobius was not wholly approved of by Hieronymus.
- 108 Lactantius: A. D. 290. The preceptor of Crispus: A. D. 317. Damasus speaks of Lactantius, but not with approbation.
- 109 Antonius monachus. Born A. D. 252. Completed his 104th year: see A. D. 357.
- 110 Methodius: A. D. 300. Suffered martyrdom in 312.
- 111 Rheticius Æduorum episcopus: A. D. 313.
- 112 Cæcilianus Carthagini episcopus. Opposed by the Donatists: A. D. 313. Mensurius bishop of Carthage, who had been summoned to Rome by Maxentius, died before his return to Carthage; and, with the permission of Maxentius, Cæcilianus was appointed successor to Mensurius. This might happen at the end of A. D. 311, a year before the death of Maxentius.
- 118 { Donatus Numida, Casarum Nigrarum episcopus. His party accused Cæcilianus in A. D. 313.
Donatus Carthagini episcopus. Banished from Carthage in A. D. 355. Distinguished by Augustine from Donatus de Casis Nigris.
- 114 Arius. His doctrine was condemned in A. D. 321. He was expelled from the Church by Alexander bishop of Alexandria. Athanasius, then a deacon, advised Alexander to expel him. Eusebius of Nicomedia supported Arius, who was restored by the Arian council of Jerusalem at the close of A. D. 335, and died in 336. For the testimonies to Arius and his doctrine and his book Thalia see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 434. 435.
- 115 Marcellus Ancyrae episcopus. At the council of Nice: A. D. 325. Deposed by an Arian synod of Constantinople in 336. Restored by the council of Sardica in 347. Marcellus was expelled again after the death of Constans in 350. See A. D. 351. He died in about the year 373, two years, more or less, before Epiphanius published the work upon Heresies. His life was therefore prolonged to extreme old age.

Marcellus wrote many volumes upon various subjects, but especially against the Arians. In a work against Asterius (see A. D. 335) he condemned the Arians, Asterius, Eusebius of Nicomedia, Paulinus (who was first bishop of Tyre and then of Antioch), Narcissus of Neronias, Eusebius of Cæsarea. Eusebius composed the two books against Marcellus, about the year 336, at the time of the deposition of Marcellus. These were followed by the three books de ecclesiastica theologia adversus Marcellum. Eusebius was appointed by the Arian Synod of CP. in 336 to refute Marcellus, and that work was composed in compliance with the wishes of the council.

The dogmas of Marcellus were a modified Sabellianism in the description of Theodoret, whose account is this: "He denied the Trinity of Hypostases, and held "that a certain extension of the divinity of the Father "passed into Christ, and this he called God the Logos; "and that, after the consummation of all things, when "the divine economy shall have been perfected and "finished, the Logos would again be drawn back and "collected into the Deity from whom he had been "extended. The Holy Spirit he calls an additional extension of that extension and says that this was given "to the apostles. In a word he held that the Trinity "was extended and again contracted according to the "different dispensations of God." Marcellus himself however affirmed that his opinions were supported by Julius of Rome and Athanasius. Montfaucon (to whom Schulze the editor of Theodoret refers) has carefully and critically examined this question^e, and makes it appear that the opinions of Marcellus were exaggerated ret, and the hostile passages of Eusebius, and compares the fragments of Marcellus himself.

by his adversaries, and that they were not far distant from the catholic doctrine.

- 116 Eusebius Nicomediæ episcopus: A. D. 337. He died in 342. Eusebius after the Council of Nice was banished by Constantine; but upon delivering a recantation of his opinions was recalled and restored to his bishopric.
- 117 Eusebius Cæsareæ episcopus. For his time see A. D. 296. 297. He taught at Cæsarea in A. D. 306, he died in 340. That Eusebius was at first an Arian is marked by Athanasius, by Hieronymus, and Theodoret. His works mentioned in this volume are the following:

- 118 Eustathius presbyter CP.: A. D. 336.

- 119 Jacobus Nisibenus: A. D. 338. 350.

- 120 Eustathius Antiochenus episcopus: A. D. 324. According to Hieronymus Eustathius was calumniated by his adversaries.

- 121 Juvenus presbyter: A. D. 329, of a noble family in Spain.

- 122 Maximinus Treverorum episcopus: A. D. 343.

- 123 Athanasius. Succeeds Alexander at Alexandria A. D. 326, is sent into exile in 336, returns in 338. Withdraws to Rome A. D. 341. After three years at Rome he is at Milan, in Gaul, and at Sardica: see A. D. 347. He returned to Alexandria in 349. He retired to the desert in 356, where his apology to Constantius was composed. Athanasius returned to Alexandria in 362, but was again expelled by Julian. Restored by Jovian in 363. His letters to Joannes and Palladius in A.D. 372. His death 2 May 373.

124 Julius Firmicus Maternus : A. D. 343.

125 Basilius Ancyranus episcopus. Appointed in the place of Marcellus in A. D. 336, deposed in 347, but bishop again in 351. The synod which was held at Constantinople in 360 deposed him upon charges which are related by Socrates, and are more fully described by Sozomen. In A. D. 363 Basilius applied in vain to Jovian to be restored.

126 Audæus : A. D. 341.

127 Theodorus Heracleota : A. D. 341.

128 Eusebius Emesenus episcopus : A. D. 347. 348.

129 Triphyllius : A. D. 346.

130 Asterius Cappadox sophista. Charged by Athanasius with sacrificing in the time of persecution. He agreed in the opinions of Arius. For an account of his time and works, see A. D. 335.

131 Acacius Cæsareæ episcopus. Succeeded Eusebius in A. D. 340. See A. D. 348. 355. Composed the Acts of the Synod at Constantinople in A. D. 360. He was succeeded by Euzoius : see A. D. 367.

132 Serapion Thmuis episcopus A. D. 348. Supported Athanasius in 355.

133 Dionysius Mediolanensis episcopus. Was banished for supporting Athanasius in 355.

134 Hilarius diaconus : A. D. 355.

135 Aëtius. The preceptor of Eunomius : A. D. 353. Recalled from exile by Julian in 362. Aëtius died at Constantinople, where, according to Philostorgius, his eyes were closed by his disciple Eunomius.

136 Aërius presbyter. According to Epiphanius (whom Augustine repeats) Aërius held the Arian doctrine, and also maintained the following opinions ; that prayers ought not to be offered for the dead ; that fasts ought not to be solemnly appointed, but that each should fast at his own discretion ; that there was no difference between a presbyter and a bishop. Aërius was still living in A. D. 376, when Epiphanius wrote.

- 137 Lucifer Caralitanus episcopus. Banished in A. D. 355, recalled from exile in 362. Lucifer died in A. D. 370. From him arose a rigid sect, the Luciferiani.
- 138 Eusebius Vercellensis episcopus. Banished in 355, returned in 362. His death is recorded at A. D. 370.
- 139 C. Marius Victorinus: A. D. 354. In his old age he became a Christian.
- 140 Fortunatianus: A. D. 357.
- 141 Titus Bostrenus episcopus: A. D. 348. 363. Banished by Julian in 362.
- 142 Hilarius episcopus Pictaviensis: A. D. 356. 360. Restored in 362 after the death of Constantius. Hilarius died in 367.
- Hilarius translated many works of Origen into Latin. But that he was not qualified to translate from the Greek appears from Hieronymus Marcellæ tom. 3. p. 216.
- 143 Damasus Romanus succeeded Liberius in 366. Died in 384.
- 144 Apollinarius Laodicens episcopus. See A. D. 366 and the passages there quoted. Philostorgius: “ Apollinarius of Laodicea, Basilus of Cæsarea, Gregorius of Nazianzus, flourished in those times. These three men were then the champions of the Homousian doctrine, and far surpassed all those who before or since down to my time advocated that sect. Athanasius was a child in comparison with them: for these men had made immense progress in secular learning, and had great skill in the Scriptures, especially Apollinarius, who understood the Hebrew language. Each of them excelled in his own peculiar style of writing. Apollinarius was the best commentator, Basilus surpassed in splendour of diction. The eloquence of Gregory, compared with that of the other two, had a larger foundation; more copious than Apollinarius, he had greater firmness of style than Basil.”
- Epiphanius writes thus in 376: “ Apollinarius of Laodicea—an old man, grave and venerable, a man always dear to myself and to the late bishop Athanasius and to all the orthodox.”

Towards the end of his life Apollinarius adopted the dogma that the Man Christ Jesus had not a human soul, but that the Logos was in Christ what the rational soul is in man. Other extravagant opinions connected with this were imputed to him, but there is not sufficient proof that they were held by Apollinarius himself.

He was a millenarian, and believed that Christ will reign upon earth with the saints for a thousand years. He defended this opinion against Dionysius of Alexandria.

- 145 Gregorius Bæticus. Described at A.D. 361. Still living in 392.
- 146 Pacianus Barcelonensis. Survived to the reign of Theodosius: see A. D. 379.
- 147 Photinus. His heresy in A. D. 342. Condemned by a synod at Sirmium in 351. He died in 376. Theodoret: "Photinus asserted one operation of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit; publishing under other names the dogmas of Sabellius. .
- 148 Phœbadius: preserved his constancy at the synod of Ariminum in 359. Still living when Hieronymus wrote the Catalogue^f. Sulpicius Severus adds that Phœbadius made some concessions at last.
- 149 Didymus Alexandrinus. Described at A. D. 350. At ^f Hieronymus gives the last names in his Catalogue in this order.

Alexandria in 363. Didymus in 372. He is 63 in 392, and died at the age of 85 years.

The notice of Hieronymus, who fixes the 33rd year completed of Didymus to A. D. 392, determines his death at 85 to A. D. 394, when Palladius had been six years in his monastic life. Sigebertus in Chronico p. 4 a places the death of Didymus before the war with Eugenius and before the death of Theodosius, but assigns all these events to wrong years : A. D. 396 Didymus absque oculis anno ætatis 85 Alexandria obiit. A. D. 397 Theodosius Eugenium et Arbogastem in bello perimit et ipse non multo post obiit. He has the right order ; but the true dates of these events are Didymus obiit A. D. 394, Eugenius opprimitur Sept. 6 A. D. 394, Theodosius obiit Jan. 17 A. D. 395.

150 Optatus Afer. Described at A. D. 371.

151 Macedonius CP. Appointed by the Arians in A. D. 342 after the exile of Paul. Macedonius was deposed in 360.

152 Rogatus. An African bishop who seceded from the other Donatists. He flourished in the reign of Julian A. D. 361—362, and in the youth of Augustine. His successor was living in A. D. 408.

153 Aquilius Severus : A. D. 371.

154 Cyrillus Hierosolymitanus episcopus. First appointed in 348. He was restored a third time in the close of 380 : see 381. He died in 388.

155 Agelius, a Novatian bishop of CP. A. D. 345—384. See A. D. 383.

Acesius, a Novatian bishop, was present at the council of Nice in 325, and was bishop of CP. before the death of Constantine, within A. D. 330—336. Agelius seems to have been his immediate successor. The successors of Agelius were Marcianus A. D. 384, Sisinnius A. D. 395, Chrysanthus A. D. 407, Paulus A. D. 419, Marcianus II Aug. 21 A. D. 438.

The Novatians were persecuted by Cyril at Alexandria in 412, and at Rome by Celestinus in 425.

156 Ephrem Syrus. Described at A. D. 350. His death in 373. For his disciples see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 443 o.

- 157 Euzoius Cæsareæ Palæstinæ episcopus. The successor of Acacius, A. D. 367. Deposed in December 380 : see A. D. 381.
- 158 Basilius Cæsareæ episcopus. Studied at Athens in 355. He is described at A. D. 370. • He succeeded Eusebius. Basil died Jan. 1 A. D. 380. His successor Helladius is present at CP. in 381.
- 159 Gregorius Nazianzenus Episcopus. Born in A. D. 326. Educated at Athens in 355. His two orations against Julian A. D. 363. Epitaphius in Cæsarium fratrem A. D. 368 : in Gorgoniam sororem A. D. 369 : in patrem suum A. D. 374. Gregorius is at CP. in 379. He is appointed to the Church at CP. by Theodosius Nov. 26 A. D. 380. For his orations see 381. He retires from CP. in July 381. His death and age are given A. D. 390.
- 160 Sabinus Macedonianus. Bishop of Heraclea in Thrace ; made a collection of various synods which is quoted by Socrates. He wrote between A. D. 373 and 439. Sabinus was half an Arian.
- 161 Lucius Arianus : A. D. 373.
- 162 Diodorus Tarsensis episcopus : A. D. 378. Present at CP. in 381.
- 163 Epiphanius. Appointed bishop of Constantia in Cyprus in 367. • Wrote his work concerning heresies in 376, and his work de ponderibus et mensuris in 392. Epiphanius assisted at Constantinople in the measures of Theophilus against Chrysostom in 402, and died on his return to Cyprus in 403, after an episcopate of 36 years, A. D. 367—402 both inclusive.
- 164 Philastrius Brixiae episcopus. Known to Augustine, who saw him at Milan with Ambrosius about A. D. 385. Philastrius wrote a work upon heresies still extant ; but, in the opinion of Augustine, was far inferior in learning to Epiphanius. Philastrius was succeeded in the episcopate of Brixia by Gaudentius (Nº 179) in the time of Ambrosius.
- 165 Optimus Pisida : A. D. 375.
- 166 Eunomius Cyzicenus. Described at A. D. 372. Appointed bishop of Cyzicus in 360. Constantius a little before his death summoned Eunomius to Antioch and deposed him. We collect however from Theodoret that Eunomius resided at CP. "Eunomius remained, supported by Eudoxius, although despoiled of his episcopal rank." Eunomius in 366 met Procopius at Cyzicus, and was banished by Valens for taking part with the usurper. In the reign of Theodosius he is again at CP., and is again sent into exile. Eunomius died soon after A.D. 392, in which year Hieronymus records that he still lived, and that he dwelt in Capadocia.

According to Theodoret Eunomius neglected his master; but Philostorgius attests that he was present at the death of Aëtius. Their heresy is described by Sozomen: "Aëtius the Syrian was the first inventor of the dogma, that the Son was unlike the Father; and he held with Arius that the Son was created out of nothing. Those who held this doctrine were at first called Aëtians. But when Aëtius was banished (in the reign of Constantius) his heresy was concealed for a time, till Eunomius having obtained the episcopate of Cyzicus, reproduced the dogmas of Aëtius." Augustine: "Aëtians from Aëtius, Eunomians from Eunomius his disciple. Eunomius, who had more skill in logic, defends this proposition, that the Son is in all things unlike the Father, and the Holy Spirit unlike the Son."

167 Priscillianus. Mentioned at A. D. 379. 380. 385. He was put to death by Maximus. His persecutors were condemned. See A.D. 389.

168 Latronianus }
169 Tiberianus } Described at A. D. 385.

170 Idacius Hispanus. See A. D. 380. In conjunction with Ursacius he procured the death of Priscillian in 385, and for this was banished in 389.

171 Martinus Turonensis. See A. D. 381. Converses with Maximus in 386. Dies in his 81st year in 397.

172 Ambrosius Mediolanensis episcopus. Appointed Dec. 7 A.D. 374. His conduct on the massacre at Thessalonica A. D. 390. Ambrosius died at Easter A. D. 397.

His works described in this volume are

A. D.

384 Valentiniano contra Symmachum.

388 Theodosio.

392 de morte Valentiniani.

395 de morte Theodosii.

- 173 Maximus episcopus CP. Described at A. D. 379. He is rejected by Theodosius A. D. 380, and deposed in 381.
- 174 Evagrius Antiochenus episcopus A. D. 389—392. See A. D. 389.
- 175 Ambrosius Alexandrinus episcopus. See A. D. 391. Hieronymus does not record that he began to be eminent in 392, but that he still lived. Wherefore we may place Ambrosius with those who began to be eminent about 20 years before, at 371 or 372.
- 176 Gregorius Nyssenus. See A. D. 375. His epitaphius in Meletium in 381. Is present at the council of CP. in 394. Bishop of Nyssa in Cappadocia. Gregory was in exile in A. D. 376. He refers to his own exile de vita Macrinæ sororis, written in October 380, when he had been for almost 8 years persecuted by the Arian party; which carries back the beginning of his troubles to A. D. 373. We collect from Greg. Naz. Ep. 197 that Gregory bishop of Nyssa had a wife, called Theosebia.
- 177 Theotimus episcopus Tomitanus. Mentioned by Hieronymus at A. D. 392, by Socrates and Sozomen at 394. 402. See A. D. 394.
- 178 Dexter: A. D. 393.
- 179 Gaudentius Brixiae episcopus. The successor of Philastrius (Nº 164), whom he succeeded in the time of Ambrosius of Milan. Philastrius still lived in 385; Ambrosius died in 397. Gaudentius was appointed within that period.
- 180 Amphilochius Iconiensis episcopus. Mentioned in A. D. 375. Present at the Council in 381. Amphilochius presided at the synod of Side about A. D. 383. He was also present at the council of CP. in 394.
- 181 Sophronius: A. D. 393.

- 182 { Macarius Ægyptius monachus. Born A. D. 298 died A. D. 387 : of these ninety years he passed 60 in the desert.
- 182 { Macarius Alexandrinus monachus. The companion of the former, although somewhat younger. Rufinus was taught at Alexandria by both. Macarius apud Rufinum in Hieron. tom. 4 p. 136 c is neither of them; but another Macarius, for whom Rufinus translated the Apology of Pamphilus into Latin.
- 183 Evagrius monachus. The disciple of Macarius of Egypt. The preceptor of Palladius (N° 207). See A. D. 420. Evagrius was of the nation of the Iberes, near the Euxine sea, and was trained under Gregory of Nazianzus at Constantinople in A. D. 381. His works were translated into Latin by Rufinus.
- 184 Prudentius poeta. Born A. D. 348. See A. D. 404.
- 185 Commodianus. Cave places him at A. D. 270 before the time of Constantine. But Hieronymus in Catalogo, who wrote in 392, makes no mention of Commodianus; Gennadius, who wrote in 493, places him after Evagrius, who lived in 388, and after Prudentius, who lived in 400: and Honorius has the same order. Lastly, Gennadius observes that Commodianus followed Lactantius; and Lactantius himself lived in the reign of Constantine. These considerations may outweigh an inference drawn from certain obscure expressions in the work of Commodianus.
- 186 Faustinus: A. D. 382.
- 187 Helvidius. Against whom Hieronymus wrote in A. D. 382. His treatise is entitled Hieronimi adversus Helvidium de perpetua virginitate beatæ Mariæ tom. 2 p. 451—473.

Helvidius had four arguments. His first argument was founded on Matt. I. 18 Cum esset desponsata and priusquam convenirent. Hieronymus contends in reply Non sequitur eum cum Maria post partum convenisse, cujus conveniendi desiderium uteri conceptione sublatum est. And he endeavours to explain by sophistries founded upon Deuteronomy the phrase accepit uxorem suam in Matt. I. 24. He argues however with some force that, as Joseph is called the father of Jesus in the Evangelists ex opinione vulgi, so other expressions may be used in a popular sense. The 2nd argument of Helvidius is from Matt. I. 25 Et non cognovit eam donec peperit filium. Apparet igitur cognitam esse post partum. Hieronymus p. 456 again sophistically attempts to explain cognoscebat and donec and usque. To the inference of Helvidius p. 459 Post partum ergo cognovit cujus cognitionem ad partum usque distulerat, the reply of Hieronymus is gross and revolting, and is no answer to Helvidius. The 3rd argument is that the term primogenitus in Luke II. 7 implies other sons. This argument Hieronymus has failed to answer. The 4th argument is p. 462 that the brethren of Jesus are mentioned; as in Matt. XII. 47 XIII. 55. 56 Mark VI. 3 John II. 12 VII. 5. 10 Acts I. 14 Galat. I. 19 1 Cor. IX. 5. Helvidius supposed p. 463 that Mary the mother of James and Joses in Mark XV. 40 Matt. XXVII. 56 Luke XXIV. 10 was the virgin Mary. Hieronymus answers, that if Mary had other sons, she would not have been recommended to the care of John in John XIX. 26. Which is no sufficient reply; because the brothers of Jesus did not believe on him, John VII. 5; and therefore would not be mentioned on that occasion. He argues well p. 463 that Mary the mother of James and Joses could not be the virgin Mary, because the latter is always called by the evangelists the mother of Jesus. Hieronymus next contends that the term brother is often used in Scripture in other senses, and that Mary the wife of Cleopas the sister of the virgin Mary (John XIX. 25) was the mother of James and Joses; and that these were the first cousins of Jesus, though called his brothers. Helvidius finally argued that there was no merit in virginity, which was needlessly therefore ascribed to the mother of Jesus. He asked, were virgins more holy than Abraham, or Isaac, or Jacob, who were all married? Hieronymus replies in his usual manner; not denying the lawfulness of marriage but asserting the superior merit of celibacy. He affirms that under the Old Testament marriage was allowed from necessity, but that since St. Paul had recommended celibacy, virginity was become preferable and of higher dignity than marriage; that the world was now too full. Jam plenus est orbis, terra nos non capit; that the daily cares of common life with a family of children interfere with the service of God.

It was incumbent upon Hieronymus to shew against Helvidius that the evangelists do not affirm that the marriage of Mary and Joseph was consummated after the birth of Jesus. But the three first arguments of Helvidius remain unshaken. The fourth proposition founded on the mention of brethren is not refuted. If the term brother is sometimes used of other relations and in another sense, it will not follow of necessity that the term is so used by the evangelists when speaking of the brethren of Jesus. But it was not enough to shew that the evangelists do not affirm what Helvidius maintained. Hieronymus was bound to prove that the Scriptures positively attest the perpetual virginity. This he has not done. All the texts cited favour the proposition of Helvidius. Helvidius with reason asks p. 459, if Mary remained perpetually a virgin, why do the Scriptures use language contrary to the real meaning? Numquid non potuit Scriptura dicere "Et accepit uxorem suam et non fuit ausus amplius contingere eam." Sicut de Tamar dixit et Juda. Aut defuerunt Matthæo verba quibus id quod intelligi volebat posset effari? It may be added that Mary after the birth of Jesus is nowhere in the Scriptures called a virgin. Hieronymus p. 470 lays down the rule Ut hæc quæ scripta sunt non negamus, ita ea quæ non sunt scripta renuimus. He affirms natum Deum esse de virgine credimus quia legimus: Mariam nupsisse post partum non credimus quia non legimus. But the last proposition must stand thus; and his own canon is against him: Natum Deum esse de virgine credimus quia legimus: Mariam post partum virginem permansisse non credimus quia non legimus.

Helvidius is addressed with coarse abuse in every part of this treatise. But it is not said that he denied any fundamental doctrine. He did not deny the Incarnation: Hieron. p. 469 Vere Joseph pater fuit? Quamvis sis hebes, dicere non audebis. Some in Hieronymus had explained the brethren of Jesus by supposing plures habuisse uxores Josephum, et de his esse fratres Domini. But he rejects this: Audaci temeritate confingunt. Hieronymus asserts that Ignatius, Polycarp, Irenæus, Justin Martyr, multosque alios apostolicos viros, had maintained the perpetual virginity against Hebion, Theodotus of Byzantium, and Valentinus. Helvidius quotes in favour of his own opinion Tertullian and Victorinus. Upon the reply of Hieronymus on this point see Beausobre tom. 1 p. 360. 361.

188 Jovinianus. Against whom Hieronymus wrote in A. D. 393 the work entitled adversus Jovinianum libri duo. tom. 2 p. 474—610. Died before A. D. 406.

Jovinian held four propositions. 1 No merit in virginity. 2 No lapse after baptism. 3 No merit in fasting. 4 That in the Resurrection all would be equal. Hieronymus in lib. I answers the first proposition. His reasoning p. 501 is fanciful. He endeavours p. 502 to give a reason for circumcision. The five kings of Canaan p. 505 typify the five senses. He argues p. 506 upon Joshua having no children. He affirms p. 511. 512 that only Peter was married. It is assumed that John was beloved above all the other apostles because he was unmarried: ideo plus amatur. But in the first place most of the other apostles were also unmarried; and secondly, Peter, who was married, was next to John in the highest degree of favour. Hieronymus renders John XXI. 22 ἐὰν αὐτὸν θέλω μένειν, si cum sic volo esse, and understands a reference to his virginity. He critically examines Isaiah VII. 14, and rightly determines the meaning p. 521. But his inference p. 523 from Ezekiel c. XXIV is not warranted. Hieronymus reasserts his proposition, which he has not yet proved. He draws an unwarrantable argument p. 526 from 1 Tim. III. 2 μὴς γυναικὸς ἄνδρα. Two arguments of Jovinian are stated but not answered in p. 527. Hieronymus p. 528 confounds the use with the abuse, and represents the apostle's praise of chastity as a praise of abstinence. He applies 2 Pet. III. 3 to Jovinian, and proceeds to a coarse invective against him. Of all the texts quoted by Hieronymus p. 538 only Apocal. c. VII has any reference to his purpose. Hieronymus states the argument of Jovinian from the marriage in Cana, John II. and proceeds to shew that the heathen valued virginity. He enumerates Atalanta, Harpalice, the vestal virgins, Minerva, and others; gives a fabulous narrative of the thirty tyrants of Athens; another equally fabulous at p. 543; mentions the voluntary sacrifice of the Indian widows; gives examples of those who only married once; asserts in conclusion that the Athenian hierophant abstained from marriage.

He examines lib. II p. 553 the second proposition of Jovinian, that there was no lapse after baptism. He contends that God considers good works, and shews that works are necessary from the epistle of St. James. He collects against Jovinian examples from the Old Testament. Hieronymus p. 535 quotes Josephus on St. James without suspicion.

Jovinian's third proposition de cibis is treated at p. 561 and his argument fairly stated p. 562. Hieronymus argues that different meats are in use among different nations: which is no answer to Jovinian. He asserts that abstinence is necessary as a discipline, that the five senses are the passages through which the mind is corrupted. Here again Hieronymus confounds the use with the abuse. He produces arguments for abstinence drawn from the Old Testament. The fasting of Daniel is extolled upon wrong grounds. Arguments are adduced from the New Testament. He notices an argument of Jovinian founded upon Matt. XI. 19 φayδς καὶ οἰνοπότης, and another founded upon Peter's eating in Acts c. X. He again gives examples from the Old Testament in favour of fasting.

Hieronymus proceeds p. 583 to consider the fourth and last proposition. Jovinian maintained that the sheep and the goats in Matt. c. XXV represent the good and the wicked. (Hieronymus however ad Marcellum tom. 3 p. 266 corrects an opinion expressed in this treatise upon the sheep and the goats.) It was argued that the good would be all equal in their lot and the wicked equal in their punishment; that "many mansions" in John c. XIV meant "many churches;" that there was an unity in the church and an equality of merit, an equality of rewards and punishments. Hieronymus p. 586 answers him, but mingles with his argument a personal abuse of Jovinian himself. Jovinian contended that in the wilderness the same measure of manna was given to all, both to the good and to the evil. To which Hieronymus p. 593 justly replies that the same is given in the Lord's Supper to all communicants; Christi corpus æqualiter accipimus; but that the spiritual efficacy is in proportion to the different degrees of merit in the receivers: pro accipientium meritis diversum fit quod unum est. He shews p. 600 that there are gradations in guilt: Sunt peccata levia, sunt gravia. Aliud est decem millia talenta debere, aliud quadrantem. He notices p. 601 the various destiny of Esau and Jacob. He thinks p. 602 flying from persecution less meritorious than martyrdom: Si fugero, non eadem erit corona morientis. He shews p. 603. 604 from various texts that different degrees are appointed in heaven. He admits p. 603 that it is a difficult thing to believe Revelation: In crucifixum credens Dominum difficultate fidei magnitudinem meruit præmiorum, and contends again p. 605 that different degrees of merit will obtain different rewards.

Hieronymus p. 606 returns to the question of virginity. In his peroration he recapitulates Diximus de nuptis, viduis, virginibus—transivimus ad secundam partitionem—tertio venimus ad jejunia—quarta, id est, extrema divisio oves et hædos—in duos ordines distribuerat. From p. 607 to the end he pours forth an abusive address to Jovinian. It appears from p. 607 that Jovinian had many followers: multi acquiescunt sententiæ tuæ.

Hieronymus in another treatise, Apologia ad Pammachium condiscipulum quondam et sodalem tom. 2 p. 611—633 answers the objection that some thought him too vehement in asserting the merits of virginity. Pammachius and Victorinus had procured the condemnation of Jovinian at Rome. It is asserted p. 612 “There is no medium between Jovinian’s opinion “and mine. If I am reprovèd for preferring virginity to the “married state, let Jovinian be commended, who makes them “equal.” He owns p. 621 that he sometimes says more than he means, and that in calm doctrine he is more cautious than in polemical writings: Aliud est quærere, aliud definire: in altero pugnandum, in altero docendum est, &c. and he asserts p. 622 that this is the practice of other ecclesiastical writers. Interdum coguntur loqui non quod sentiunt, sed quod necesse est. He repeats p. 623 his sophistical exposition of 1 Cor. c. VII Bonum est mulierem non tangere; and p. 626 interprets 1 Cor. VII. 5 nolite fraudare invicem &c. in a sense which is contrary to the meaning of the Apostle.

189 Rufinus Aquileiensis presbyter. Translated into Latin many works of the Greek fathers, and the works of Josephus. Rufinus proceeded to the East in A. D. 371, and was absent from his native city, by his own account, almost 30 years. After he left Aquileia in 371, he passed 6 years at Alexandria, and afterwards many years with Melania. He was not at Alexandria after Theophilus was bishop: that is, not after July 385. At the time of the destruction of the Serapeum at Alexandria in 390, he was in Palestine.

The elder Melania at 22 years of age lost her husband, abandoned her family at Rome, and proceeded to the East in the beginning of the reign of Valens. She remained 27 years at Jerusalem, 37 years in all in the East, and returned to Italy at the age of 60 in A. D. 402.

Rufinus returned from the East in A. D. 397, and in 398 was at Rome where he passed at least a year before he returned to Aquileia. At Rome at the request of Macarius, he translated into Latin the treatise of Origen de principiis, when he had, as he himself affirms, for 30 years discontinued the use of the Latin tongue. The two first books he translated in Lent A. D. 398. In 399 he returned to Aquileia after his long absence, and had been two years at Aquileia, when he wrote his Apology to Anastasius of Rome in A. D. 401. Rufinus translated the Ecclesiastical History of Eusebius when Alaric ravaged Italy. Perhaps in A. D. 408. At the close of 410 he was in Sicily when Alaric just before his own death occupied Rhegium. That Rufinus died in Sicily soon after we learn from Hieronymus, who alludes to the event in his preface to the Comm. in Ezekielem written in 413.

- 190 Asterius Amasenus episcopus. His discourse pronounced Jan. 1 A. D. 400 is noticed in the Tables.
- 191 Dorotheus Arianus. The Arian bishop of Antioch, succeeded Euzoius in 376. Afterwards transferred to Constantinople, where he died in 407. His predecessor Euzoius had been appointed by Constantius II in the place of Melitius bishop of Antioch; and Constantius a little before his death was baptized by Euzoius.
- 192 Joannes Chrysostomus. Taught by Libanius: see A. D. 369. He was then 3 years with Meletius, 6 in retirement, 5 years a deacon, 12 a presbyter: see A. D. 375. He succeeded Nectarius at CP. in 398. His exile: A. D. 403. His second exile 20 June 404. At Cucusus: A. D. 405. At Arabissus: A. D. 406. His death 14 Sept. 407. His remains are brought to CP. in 438.

His treatise de sacerdotio was composed within A. D. 381—386. Some of his discourses are recorded in this volume at A. D. 387. 399. 403. Some of his epistles at A. D. 405. Palladius was auctor Dialogi de vita Chrysostomi, A. D. 408.

193 Gelasius succeeded Euzoius at Cæsarea in 381. He was still living in 394.

194 Tichonius. Contemporary with Rufinus (N° 189): see A. D. 391.

195 Sulpicius Severus: A. D. 400.

196 Severianus. The rival of Chrysostom: A. D. 399. Some works of Severianus are preserved among the works of Chrysostom.

198 Isaac. Contemporary with Olympius.

199 Theophilus. Succeeded Timotheus at Alexandria in July 385: destroyed the temple of Serapis in 390. See A. D. 389. He is present at CP. in 394. Addressed by Joannes of Jerusalem in 397. His conduct in promoting the exile of Chrysostom is marked at A. D. 403. He died 15 Oct. 412. For the three Paschal epistles of Theophilus see A. D. 401. 402. 404. His writings against Origen are mentioned by Hieronymus, who speaks of the violent measures of Theophilus against the Origenists. Theophilus had obtained an imperial rescript against them. The violence of Theophilus against the Origenists is related by Socrates, and the stratagem by which he obtained the support of Epiphanius. He describes the duplicity of Theophilus in 388 when the war with Maximus was yet pending, when he employed Isidorus as his agent. For this service Theophilus proposed Isidorus as the successor of Nectarius at CP. in 398 instead of Chrysostom. But Chrysostom prevailed. Theophilus afterwards quarrelled with his friend Isidorus. The avarice of Theophilus is marked by Socrates.

200 Joannes Hierosolymitanus: A. D. 397. His predecessor Cyrillus died in 388. Joannes lived till 416; for he was one of the fourteen bishops who absolved Pelagius in the synod of Diospolis in December A. D. 415. An abstract is given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 456 of what Hieronymus writes against Joannes, whom he treats throughout with too much asperity. Chrysostom from Cucusus in A. D. 405 addresses a friendly letter to Joannes.

202 Panodorus } A. D. 412.

203 Vigilantius: A. D. 406.

Hieronymi Ripario adversus Vigilantium in A. D. 404. A coarse invective against Vigilantius for teaching that the relics of martyrs were not to be honoured. He wonders p. 641 that the bishop of the presbyter Vigilantius should spare him. Through the whole letter Hieronymus is not only angry but furious. He desires in conclusion that the book of Vigilantius might be sent to him. In the treatise against Vigilantius p. 644—657 A. D. 406 he argues in this manner p. 646 “This short discourse dictated by me is drawn “from me by Riparius and Desiderius the presbyters, who “write that the parishes in their neighbourhood are contaminated, and have sent me his book by Sisinnius. They “tell me that some are found who favour him and acquiesce “in his blasphemies.” He had won some bishops p. 645. Hieronymus quotes p. 647 some passages of Vigilantius shewing the folly of venerating relics of martyrs, and arguing p. 648 that while we live we ought mutually to pray for one another, but that after death prayers are unavailing. The reply of Hieronymus to this reasoning is abusive in language and weak in argument. At p. 648 he assumes without proof that because God can give to martyrs the power of being present every where, he has given them this power. The lighting of candles at the shrines of saints, which Vigilantius had condemned, is defended. Eunomius (N^o 166) is mentioned p. 650. 651 as the author of this heresy. Vigilantius p. 651 disapproved of vigils as full of mischief. To which Hieronymus p. 652 gives no sufficient answer. Vigilantius argues against the miracles pretended to have been wrought at the tombs of saints. Hieronymus replies with rude invective.

The resources of distant provinces were remitted to Jerusalem for the subsistence of the monks. This Vigilantius condemned p. 654, and held that each province ought to maintain its own poor by charitable contributions. He censured monachism p. 655, and enquired, if all secluded themselves in solitude, who could attend the churches? These reasonable objections are met by Hieronymus with furious declamation p. 653—655. He concludes by remarking p. 656 that this invective was dictated in haste: hæc unius noctis lucubratione dictavi, festinante admodum fratre Sisinnio.

204 Hieronymus. Born A. D. 331. His age is examined at A. D. 363. Hieronymus left Rome in August 385, and was in Egypt and then at Bethlehem in 386. Still living in 416. He died in his 90th year 30 Sept. 420.

Memorials of himself collected from his own works, of his early studies, his baptism at Rome, his preceptors, his retreat to the wilderness, his return to Rome in the time of Damasus, are given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 457. The works of Hieronymus consist of commentaries, translations, letters, and treatises. The titles of 161 works of Hieronymus are collected and described in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 457—463, where the letters to Marcella, which formed one book, are brought together under one point of view. The other works are placed for the most part in the order of time. Among his works recorded in this volume are the following: Chronicon A. D. 378. Adv. Helvidium A. D. 382. Ca- talagus A. D. 392. In Jovinianum A. D. 393. In Joannem Hierosolymit. A. D. 397. In Rufinum A. D. 402. Epitaphium Paulæ A. D. 404. Adv. Vigilantium A. D. 406. Ageruchie A. D. 409. Epitaphium Marcellæ A. D. 412. In Pelagianos libri tres A. D. 415; completed in 416.

- 205 Augustinus. Born 13 Nov. 354. From the age of 19 to 28 he was a Manichee: see A. D. 373. At 29 years of age he proceeds to Rome: see A. D. 383. At Milan in 385. Augustine in 387. Coepiscopus to Valerius in 395. He is appointed bishop of Hippo in 395: has a coadjutor in 426. He died 28 Aug. 430.

Augustine in the first book of his Retractations enumerates 27 works composed before his episcopate, within A. D. 386—395. In the second book of his Retractations he describes 68 works (including the Retractations) written during his episcopate, within A. D. 395—430. In all 95 works, to which is added a 96th, Contra Juliani secundam responsionem, left unfinished at his death. See these works recorded in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 464—465.

- 206 Anonymus de morte Pauli A. D. 396.
- 207 Palladius Helenopolis episcopus. Begins his monastic life A. D. 388. Appointed bishop A. D. 400. Historia Lausiaca A. D. 420. Transferred to Aspona A. D. 421.
- 208 Atticus. Succeeds Arsacius at CP. in Feb. A. D. 406. Died Oct. 10 A. D. 425.
- 209 Orosius. A young man in A. D. 415. His apology contra Pelagium A. D. 415. Orosius is described at A. D. 416. His history ends at the year 417.
- 210 Pelagius: A. D. 409. Published his doctrine in 413. In Palestine in 416. Pelagius and Coelestius are condemned A. D. 418.
- 211 Coelestius. A disciple of Pelagius in A. D. 409. 413. Still taught in 429. On his dogmas see N^o 220.
- 212 Julianus Capuæ episcopus. A disciple of Pelagius A. D. 413. 418. 430. Julianus still lived in A. D. 439.
- 213 Patricius. Born at Kirk Patrick in Scotland. He visited Gaul when Martinus was bishop of Tours, who died in 398; and was the disciple of Germanus who was bishop of Antisiodora in Gaul from 7 July 418 to 31 July 448. Patricius was contemporary with Palladius, who was sent into Scotland in 431. After the death of Palladius, he proceeded to Ireland. The progress then of Patricius as a missionary to Ireland was soon after A. D. 431.

Sigebert affirms that Patricius lived 122 years. His biographer Probus assigns him 132 years. But these accounts may be suspected. The more moderate term of 83 years (Pagi tom. 2 p. 442) is more probable. And these 83 years, if that was the true period, may be placed at about A. D. 371—454.

214 Maximus Taurinæ civitatis Galliarum episcopus. He still lived 17 Nov. 465, when he was present at a synod at Rome.

215 Avitus presbyter. Hispanus genere. The presbyter Lucian described in the Greek language his discovery of the relics of St. Stephen in the reigns of Honorius and Theodosius. Avitus translated this into Latin, for the edification of the western churches.

216 Paulinus Nolæ Campaniæ episcopus.

Paulinus, who was a little older than Augustine, was more than 40 years of age in 394. He was ordained a presbyter at Christmas, Dec. 25 A. D. 393. He was appointed bishop of Nola after 402, when his predecessor Paulus was still living; and before 405; for Pelagius attests that he was already bishop 12 years before A. D. 417. His death is fixed to 22 June 431.

Therasia the wife of Paulinus is described by Ambrosius in 393, by Hieronymus in 395, and is addressed in letters of Augustine in 396. 406. She was still living in 408. The time of her death is not known.

217 Evagrius. A. D. 423.

218 Chrysanthus Novatianus episcopus: A. D. 407, died in 419. See N° 155.

219 Theodorus Mopsuestiæ episcopus. Appointed bishop in A. D. 394, died in 429. The friend of Chrysostom, and the disciple of Diodorus of Tarsus.

 “ elegance of his discourses and his exemplary life.”

Of the innumerable works of Theodorus but few fragments remain in the Greek language. One entire treatise is extant in MS. in 223 pages, and Photius has given an account of four other works. But the writings of Theodorus were much read and highly valued in the East, and his works, or most of them, were translated into the Syriac, some into the Armenian and Persian languages^k. Ebed-Jesu apud Assemanum, quoted by Lardner and by Fabricius^l, has described them, and given a catalogue. He observes “Theodorus the “ commentator composed 41 tomes;” but in his detail he records more than that number.^m

Evagrius H. E. I. 2 asserts that Theodorus taught Nestorius : “ Anastasius a presbyter, and a warm admirer of Nestorius and his doctrines, accompanied him on his journey to take possession of his episcopate ; when Nestorius meeting Theodorus at Mopsuestia and hearing his doctrine was diverted from the path of orthodoxy, as Theodulus relates in a certain epistle. This Anastasius at Constantinople ventured to say in public : ‘ let no one call Mary the mother of God, Mary was a human being. It was impossible that God should be born from a human being.’ ” This charge against Theodorus of Mopsuestia, repeated from Theodulus scribed by Gennadius and by Theodorus himself.

2 Pro Basilio contra Eunomium libris XXV (ul. XXVIII) Phot. Cod. 4. 177. Supposed by some (who have been followed in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 468) the same work as that which Gennadius describes. But others more justly distinguish it from that work. Ebed-Jesu has tomus unus de Incarnatione : duo adversus Eunomium : unum pro Basilio.

3 Mysticum. Of which lib. XIII is quoted by Facundus III. 2.

Some passages from various works of Theodorus, selected and quoted by his enemies, are exhibited in a Latin version apud Acta Concil. tom. 6 p. 42. 43 48—66.

who flourished in the reign of Zeno, 50 years after the death of Theodorus, might be regarded as a calumny of his adversaries, but that it seems confirmed by Photius, who discerns in some works of Theodorus the Nestorian principle. See F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 468 f. That Theodorus adopted the Pelagian doctrine appears from his own work adversus eos qui natura non voluntate peccare homines affirmant, in five books, of which Photius has left an abstract: "Theodorus writes this work " against those of the west who have fallen into this error.
 " He says that the author of this heresy is one who came " from them, and is now dwelling in the country of the East;
 " and that he composed discourses in defence of his newly " discovered heresy to be sent to his countrymen. Thus he " has drawn many in these countries by his writings to his " way of thinking, so that whole churches are filled with his
 " unreasonable doctrine. He calls the leader of this sect
 " Aram; but I cannot clearly tell whether this is the name " of the man, or only an appellation superadded to the name.
 " Theodorus says that Aram feigns a fifth Gospel, which he " pretends that he has discovered in the library of Eusebius
 " of Palestine; rejects the old Septuagint version, and that " of Symmachus Aquila and the rest; and presumes to com-
 " pose a new version of his own, although he had neither been " exercised from a boy in the Hebrew language, as they were,
 " nor had been taught the scope and meaning of Scripture,
 " but had delivered himself up to the instruction of some He" brews of mean condition, and with such helps thought him" self qualified to draw up an edition of his own."

Norisius Hist. Pelag. l. 9 tom. 1 p. 87—90 shews that the writer called Aram, of whom Photius knew nothing, is no other than Hieronymus himself. And this interpretation has been adopted by Ittigius de hæresiarchis p. 466—478. To Hieronymus belong the incidents in Theodorus—the new version of the LXX, and the search in the libraries of Eusebius in Palestine. The five books of Theodorus of Mopsuestia, being composed after the dialogues of Hieronymus against the Pelagians, were written after A. D. 416, therefore after the 23rd year of his episcopate.

Fragments from this work are extant in a Latin version, chiefly from the third book, which are published by Norisius Hist. Pelag. I. 9 tom. 1 p. 93—98. In these passages, which have been quoted and translated by an adversary of Theodorus, he asserts the Pelagian doctrine that Adam was created mortal.

220 Marius Mercator. Flourished A. D. 429. Quoted on the Pelagians at A. D. 413. 416. 418.

Marius affirms that the Pelagian doctrines taught by Coelestius were these :

1 " That Adam was created mortal, and would have died whether he had sinned or not."

2 " That the sin of Adam injured himself alone and not his posterity."

3 " That children at their birth are in the same state in which Adam was before his fall."

4 " That neither does the whole race of man die through the death or sin of Adam, nor the whole race of man rise again through the Resurrection of Christ."

5 " That the Law as well as the Gospel admits men to heaven."

6 " That men were without sin before the Advent of Christ."

221 Nestorius. Appointed bishop of Constantinople in A. D. 428. He was deposed and banished in A. D. 431, but still living when Socrates wrote, in 439. He died before the council of Chalcedon A. D. 451. For the opinions of Nestorius see Tables A. D. 428. p. 174.

222 Hesychius presbyter Hierosolymitanus. According to Theophanes he flourished in A. D. 414 and died in A. D. 433. Described by Photius Cod. 275, who has another Hesychius, a presbyter of CP., at Cod. 51.

223 Nilus. A native of Constantinople. Contemporary with Isidorus of Pelusium and Theodoretus of Cyrus. He flourished in the reign of Theodosius II. For testimonies to Nilus and his works see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 469.

224 Theodorus or Theodotus Ancyranus episcopus. His discourse against Nestorius at the council of Ephesus A. D. 431 is given in Actis Concil. tom. 3 p. 1545.

- 225 Cyrillus succeeds Theophilus at Alexandria 18 Oct. 412. he opposed the Nestorians in A. D. 428, and influenced the council of Ephesus against Nestorius in 431. Cyril died in A. D. 444.

His character is given by Isidorus of Pelusium :
 “ Many of those who were assembled at Ephesus (in “ A. D. 431) ridicule you as gratifying your private en-
 “ mities, and not seeking to promote the orthodox faith.”
 “ He is the nephew,” they say “ of Theophilus, whose “ maxims he imitates ; for, as Theophilus madly perse“ cuted the divine Chrysostom, so this man desires to “ vaunt and to display himself, although the questions
 “ in debate are very different.”

- 226 Philippus Sidetes : A. D. 426. 428. 431.

- 227 Leporius. First a monk, then a presbyter : begun to adopt the opinions of Pelagius ; but, being admonished by the Gallic bishops, and in Africa by Augustine, he renounced these opinions. His time is determined by the times of Pelagius and Augustine, between the years 413 and 430.

- 228 Philostorgius. His history ends at A. D. 425. His grandfather Anysius was a presbyter who dwelt in a village of the second Cappadocia, and whose daughter Eulampias was the mother of Philostorgius. Her husband Carterius adopted the opinions of Eunomius, whom Philostorgius, then in his 20th year, saw at Constantinople. Eunomius was at Constantinople in the reign of Theodosius before his exile, within A.D. 380 and 388. Within this period he was seen by Philostorgius, who was accordingly 20 years of age between the years 380 and 388.

- 229 Synesius. A native of Cyrene, descended from the ancient kings of Sparta : is ambassador to Constantinople in A. D. 398—400, and delivers a discourse de regno in A. D. 399. He is appointed bishop of Ptolemais, in the Libyan Pentapolis, in the close of 409, about two years after the death of Chrysostom. His brother Euoptius, to whom many of his letters are addressed, was his successor in this episcopate, and was present at the council of Ephesus in A. D. 431.

- 280 Isidorus Pelusiota. The disciple of Chrysostom. Isidorus condemned Cyril for his conduct at the council of Ephesus. See N^o 225.
- 281 Victorinus rhetor Massiliensis. Better acquainted with secular learning than with Scripture. Died within A. D. 425—450.
- 282 Cassianus: A. D. 401. He still lived in 433. Cassianus took a middle course between Pelagius and Augustine. His followers were Faustus, Vincentius Lirinensis, and Gennadius Massiliensis. His opponents were Augustine and Prosper.
- 288 Socrates. Instructed by Helladius and Ammonius: see A. D. 389. Socrates is described at A. D. 395. His history terminates at 439. Socrates knew the Arian bishop Timotheus cir. A. D. 410, and the Novatian bishop Paulus in 419. He passes a moderate judgment upon Nestorius, whose errors he ascribes to ignorance. Socrates receives from a presbyter of Alexandria named Eudæmon a transaction of the time of Neotarius within A. D. 382—390. He treats v. 22 fully and clearly of various customs which prevailed in the different churches in his time, and gives vii. 36 a remarkable list of bishops who had been translated to other sees.
- 284 Sozomenus: flourished in the reign of Theodosius II, to whom he dedicates in 439. His preface was written after A. D. 443. His history begins at 324 and terminates at 415. See A. D. 439.
- 285 Philippus presbyter: the disciple of Hieronymus, died in 456.
- 286 Petronius Bononiensis episcopus: A. D. 432.
- 287 Eucherius: A. D. 432. Died in 451: see A. D. 456.
- 288 Vincentius Lirinensis presbyter. His work adversus hæreticos in A. D. 434.
- 289 Syagrius. Placed by Gennadius between Vincentius (N^o 288) and Salvianus (N^o 246).
- 240 Dracontius. Composed a hexaemeron in hexameter verse, still extant. The poem entitled Dracontii satisfactio ad Guntharium regem Wandalorum, dum esset in vinculis, is addressed, according to Arevalus, to the brother of Genseric. See for this king the Tables A. D. 428.

Under him Arevalus computes that Dracontius lived in Bætica about A. D. 425, and while in prison wrote the extant poems.

241 Hilarius Arelatensis episcopus. Described by Gennadius quoted in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 473. He presided at a council in November 439, and died in 449.

242 Theodoretus Cyri episcopus. His history ends in A. D. 429. It was written within A. D. 443—450: see A. D. 444. Theodoret was deposed by the plundering council of Ephesus in 449, at which Dioscorus of Alexandria presided. At that time he had held his episcopate 26 years: which determines his appointment to 423. Theodoret was restored by the council of Chalcedon in 451. See the laws of Marcian in 453, in F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 647. He was condemned in the 5th council A. D. 553 by the command of Justinian.

Theodoret was the disciple of Chrysostom, and was approved by Theodotus and Joannes, bishops of Antioch. He mentions his works in Ep. 145 monachis CP. and in an epistle to Leo of Rome in A. D. 449, where he speaks of his old age. The diocese of Theodoret contained 800 parishes.

243 Eutherius Tyanorum episcopus. Eutherius was present at the council of Ephesus A. D. 431.

244 Leo Romanus. Appointed bishop A. D. 440. Leo detects the Manichees A. D. 443; is ambassador to Attila in 452; and intercedes with Genseric in 455. Leo died in 461.

245 Proterius Alexandrinus episcopus. Successor to Dioscorus in 451: slain in 457. See A. D. 452. Proterius ad Leonem de Pascha A. D. 454.

247 Eutyches. A. D. 448.

248 Victor Africanus, Cartennæ Mauritaniae civitatis episcopus. Flourished in the reign of Genseric, within A. D. 440—476.

249 Cerealis Afer episcopus. Contemporary with the Arian bishop Maximinus, who is mentioned at A. D. 440 in the reign of Genseric; from whence we collect the time of Cerealis.

- 250 Possideus Africanæ provinciæ episcopus. The friend and biographer of Augustine: A. D. 430.
- 251 Arnobius junior. In the Roman synod held by Gelasius cir. A. D. 494 Arnobius is named among apocryphal authors: "The works are apocryphal—of Faustus the Manichee, of Commodian, of Arnobius, of Tichonius, of Cassianus the Gallic presbyter, of Faustus of Regium in Cisalpine Gaul." Arnobius therefore flourished before Gelasius of Rome. That he lived after Leo is shewn by Cave from his commentary on the Psalms, in which Leo is quoted. Therefore between A. D. 461 and 494. Augustine wrote against Faustus the Manichee. The other writers thus proscribed by Gelasius are in this catalogue at N° 185. 194. 232. 264.
- 252 Musæus: A. D. 458.
- 253 Basilius Seleuciæ Isauriæ episcopus. The name of Basilius is in the council of Constantinople against Eutyches in A. D. 448, and in the plundering council of Ephesus in favour of Eutyches in 449, and also in the council of Chalcedon in 451; and annexed to the epistle episcoporum Isauriæ ad Leonem imp. in A. D. 457 or 458, the 1st or 2nd year of Leo.
- 254 Claudianus Viennensis ecclesiæ presbyter. He was the brother of Mamertus bishop of Vienne, and the friend of Sidonius Apollinaris. Sidonius writes the epitaph of Claudianus.
- 255 Cæcilius Sedulius presbyter. The author of three books in hexameter verse still extant. Sedulius flourished within A. D. 425—450. His works were collected by Asterius. He was consul in A. D. 494.
- 256 Prosper Aquitanus. Addressed Augustine on the Pelagians A. D. 428. For his chronicle see the Tables A. D. 378. 445. Prosper still lived in 463.
- 257 Victorius Aquitanus: A. D. 457.
- 258 Gennadius CP. episcopus. Appointed successor to Anatolius in A. D. 458, died in 471.
- 259 Isaac Antiochenus presbyter: A. D. 459.
- 260 Sabas magnæ Lauræ abbas. Born January A. D. 439, died in December A. D. 532 in his 94th year.
- 261 Samuel Edessenus presbyter: A. D. 467.

- 262 Vincentius presbyter: natione Gallus. Still living in A. D. 493.
- 263 Idatius Lemicanus episcopus. Memorials of himself are at A. D. 407. 427. His captivity A. D. 460. Conclusion of his Chronicle A. D. 468. It began at the 1st year of Theodosius, and included the 12th of Leo A. D. 379—468: see A. D. 427.
- 264 Faustus Regii Galliae Cisalpinæ episcopus. See N° 251. He still lived in 493, when Gennadius wrote.
- 265 Gelasius Cyzicenus. A. D. 475. See F. Rom. Vol. I p. 683. 685.
- 266 C. Sollius Apollinaris Sidonius. In early youth in A. D. 449. Married the daughter of Avitus: A. D. 456. He is at Arelate in 461, at Rome in 467. Panegyricus Avito A. D. 456. Panegyricus Majoriano A. D. 458. Panegyricus Anthemio A. D. 468. Sidonius after A. D. 468 became a bishop, and held his episcopate at least 12 years. He began to be eminent in the reign of Marcian and died in the reign of Zeno.
- 267 Euthalius: A. D. 458.
- 268 Theodulus: presbyter in Coele-Syria: A. D. 478.
- 269 Victor Vitensis episcopus: A. D. 488.
- 270 Joannes Antiochenæ parochiæ ex grammatico presbyter. Still living in A. D. 493.
- 271 Eugenius episcopus Carthaginiensis: A. D. 483. 484. 493. He died in 505.
- 272 Gelasius Romanus. He was appointed bishop 2 March 492 and died 19 Nov. 496.
- 273 Julianus Pomerius: natione Maurus, in Gallia presbyter ordinatur. Still living in A. D. 493.
- 274 Gennadius: A. D. 493.
- 275 Basilus Cilix: A. D. 500. 520. His work is described from Photius A. D. 500. 520.
- 276 Cæsarius Arelatensis episcopus. Already bishop in A. D. 506. Present at a council at Arelate in 524, and at the synod of Arausio in 529.
- 277 Ennodius Ticinensis episcopus: A. D. 510.
- 278 Alcimus Avitus Viennensis episcopus: A. D. 496. 501. Still living 15 Sept. 517.
- 279 Fulgentius Afer Ruspensis episcopus: A. D. 497. He died Jan. 5 in the 25th year of his episcopate and the 65th of his age, and, as Basnage calculates, in A. D. 533 : which will place his episcopate at A. D. 508—532.

280 Theodorus Anagnostes wrote an ecclesiastical history from the time of Constantine to the reign of Justinian. Theodorus flourished in the reign of Justinian. Fragments down to the reign of Anastasius are published by Valesius.

281 Fulgentius Ferrandus Carthaginis ecclesiæ diaconus. Already dead in A. D. 547, when Facundus wrote. He was the disciple of Fulgentius Ruspensis.

282 Aprigius : A. D. 531.

283 Cyrillus Scythopolitanus. The author of the Life of Sabas (Nº 260). That work was written about A. D. 555.

284 Justinianus Hispanus }
285 Justus Hispanus } A. D. 534.

286 Cosmas Indicopleustes : A. D. 548.

287 Aurelianus Arelatensis episcopus : A. D. 546.

288 Julianus Halicarnassensis episcopus. Banished with Severus in A. D. 539. Victor Tununensis : “ (In A. D. “ 539) Severus the head of the Antiochian heresy, called “ from him Severian, and Julianus bishop of Halicar- “ nassus, both opponents of the council of Chalcedon, are “ banished from Alexandria by command of Justinian. “ They affirmed against that council that Christ had “ one nature composed out of two. This nature Seve- “ rus called corrupt, but Julianus incorrupt. Alexan- “ dria, Egypt, and Libya, were divided between them. “ The Theodosians followed Severus, and the Gaianitæ “ Julianus. But two other sects issued from the Theo- “ dosian, one was the Agnoitæ who held that Christ in “ his divine nature was ignorant of the final Day and “ Hour ; the other was the Tritheitæ, who held that the “ three persons of the Trinity were three Gods.” For the Theodosians and Gaianitæ see the Tables A. D. 567.

289 Benedictus Casinensis. The founder of many monasteries, flourished from the reign of Anastasius to the reign of Justinian. The year of the death of Benedictus is not clear. The monastery of Casinum was destroyed by the Lombards in the reign of Agilulfus, who began to reign in May A. D. 591.

- 290 Theodorus Cæsareæ Cappadociæ episcopus. Theodorus, who had been already several years a bishop in 551, favoured the Origenists; and perceiving that they had been condemned by an edict of Justinian (which is still extant apud Acta Concil. tom. 6 p. 312—353, and which, although the precise date is not known, was issued about A. D. 543) planned an attack upon the works of Theodorus of Mopsuestia, because in many treatises he had written against Origen and was on that account odious to the Origenists, and because he had been approved by the council of Chalcedon. Theodorus of Cæsarea was anathematized by Vigilius in August 551. See 552. But the influence of Theodorus prevailed with Justinian, and in the 5th council the works of the bishop of Mopsuestia were condemned.
- 291 Zacharias rhetor. His Ecclesiastical History treated of the times of Marcian, Leo, and Zeno. According to Evagrius he favoured the Nestorians, and was not always accurate. The ecclesiastical history of Zacharias is said to be still extant.
- 292 Primasius Adrumetinus episcopus. Summoned to CP. in 551, he joined with Vigilius in the condemnation of Theodorus of Cæsarea in August A. D. 551. But he afterwards changed his opinion. Victor Tunun. (A. D. 552): “Reparatus the archbishop, for defending of the “three chapters is deprived, and banished to Eucayda.
 “Firmus corrupted by the gifts of Justinian assented
 “to their condemnation. Primasius had been banished “to a monastery; but, that he might obtain the “appointment of president of the council of Ryzacium,
 “he yielded to the will of Justinian, condemned what “he had before approved, and persecuted those who “adhered to the opinions which he himself had formerly maintained. But he did not escape punishment, the members of his own synod condemned him, “what he had acquired by fraud was taken from him,

“and he perished by a miserable death.” He died therefore before A. D. 566, when Victor wrote.

- 293 Liberatus. At Rome in A. D. 534. His breviarium see A. D. 555.
- 294 Agapetus diaconus : A. D. 527.
- 295 Facundus Afer Hermianensis episcopus : A. D. 545.
- 296 Rusticus diaconus Romanus. Rusticus was the kinsman of Vigilius, and accompanied him to CP. in 547, but afterwards condemned and opposed him; for which Vigilius deprived Rusticus, who for steadily resisting the condemnation of the three chapters was banished by Justinian in 553 to the Thebaid. Rusticus is the author of a work still extant, dialogus adversus acephalos: in which he mentions his conference at Constantinople, and Alexandria, and in Antinoe of the Thebaid, and the adjacent places.
- 297 Junilius Africanus episcopus. Contemporary with Primasius (N° 292) in the reign of Justinian.
- 298 Martinus Hispanus Bracarenensis episcopus: A. D. 561. 572.
- 299 Victor Tununensis episcopus. His chronicle begins at A. D. 445 and ends at 566. Victor was imprisoned in 555, and 556, and was brought before Justinian in 564.
- 300 Agnellus Ravennæ episcopus. He lived in the time of Narses, who governed Italy A. D. 554—567. And his epitaph records “that he presided 13y 1^m 8^d, and that “he was buried Aug. 1 of the second indiction.” These numbers will place the birth of Agnellus at A. D. 486, his episcopate at about 24 June 556, and his burial at 1 Aug. 569.
- 301 Joannes scholasticus. Appointed to succeed Eutychius at CP. in 565. On his death 31 Aug. 577 Eutychius was restored. Philoponus wrote against Joannes about the year 568: see 617.
- 302 Venantius Fortunatus Pictaviensis episcopus: A. D. 570.
- 303 Conon
- 304 Eugenius
- 305 Theodosius
- 306 Themistius
- } Wrote against Philoponus. See F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 332 note.
- 307 Gregorius Turonensis episcopus. Succeeded Euphronius about the close of 573, and probably died 17 Nov. 595.

See A. D. 574.

- 308 Eustratius CP. presbyter. Lived in the time of the patriarch Eutychius, upon whom he composed a funeral discourse in A. D. 582, still extant in a Latin version. Eutychius died 6 April 582.
- 309 Joannes Gerundensis ecclesiæ episcopus: Biclariensis monasterii fundator: A. D. 569. His chronicle begins at the accession of Justin II A. D. 566, and ends at 590.
- 310 Eulogius Alexandriæ episcopus: A. D. 578. 580. 607.
- 311 Columbanus. In A. D. 565 passed from Ireland into Scotland, where he taught the Gospel to the Picts, and received from the king of the Picts the little island of Iona. Here he founded a monastery, which was long celebrated. Columbanus, according to Bede, died at the age of 77 years, about 32 years after he had entered Scotland, and was buried in Iona. These dates will fix the birth of Columbanus at A. D. 520 and his death at A. D. 597.
- 312 Licinianus. Carthagini Spartariæ episcopus. He flourished in the reign of Mauricius, within A. D. 583—601, and died at Constantinople of poison as some report.
- 313 Severus Malacitanæ sedis antistes. The colleague and companion of Licinianus: died in the reign of Mauricius.
- 314 Leander Hispalensis ecclesiæ provinciæ Bæticæ episcopus. He flourished and died in the reign of Recaredus A. D. 586—601. He presided at the council of Toledo 8 May 589. His successor was his brother Isidorus, whose episcopate of 40 years terminating 4 April 636 will place the death of Leander at 596 or 597.
- 315 Columbanus Luxoviensis. A native of Ireland. In his 20th year he visited Britain, and from thence proceeded to Gaul in the reign of Sigebert; therefore before A. D. 575, when Sigebert died. Some time after the death of Sigebert he founded Luxovium, and at the accession of Theodebert and Theoderic in 596 was already celebrated. He was expelled by Theoderic 20 years after the foundation of Luxovium, and took refuge with Clothaire—and afterwards visited Theodebert; after whose death he entered Italy and received from the king of the Lombards the valley in which he founded Bobium, where he died Nov. 23 a year after the foundation.

Theodebert was slain in A. D. 612, and the transactions which followed, inclusive of a year passed at Bobium, may bring the death of Columbanus to 23 Nov. 614.

- 316 Gregorius Romanus. Descended from a senatorian family, and from Felix III who was elected bishop of Rome in A. D. 483. Paulus Diaconus in vita Greg. Felix istius apostolicæ sedis antistes atavus fuit. Joannes Diaconus in vita c. I. 1 Quartus Felix [A. D. 526—530] sedis apostolicæ pontifex—ejus atavus fuerit. But Binius ad Gregorii vitam apud Acta Concil. tom. 6 p. 734 observes natus atavo Felici papa ejus nominis tertio, non quarto, ut vult Joannes Diaconus. And as there were six generations, both inclusive, from Felix to Gregory, the period of 107 years A. D. 483—590 is more probable than the shorter interval 74 years A. D. 526—590.

Gregory was appointed to the episcopate Sept. 3 A. D. 590: see A. D. 578. He died March 12 A. D. 604.

Some passages from the epistles of Gregory are quoted at A. D. 603 and in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 486 note a, where in an epistle Joanni CP. 1 Jan. 595 he condemns in bishops the assumption of an universal authority. And in another epistle also Joanni CP. he characterises the first five Councils and their objects. The praise which Gregory bestows upon the first four General Councils would have been more valuable, if he had not bestowed equal praise upon the fifth; of which he says quintum quoque concilium pariter veneror.

- 317 Evagrius: A. D. 540. 542. 553. 570. His history was completed towards the close of 593: see A. D. 542. 578. 593.

- 318 Maximus Cæsaraugustanæ civitatis episcopus. Still living when Isidorus wrote. We collect from the Acts of Councils that Maximus was not yet bishop 1 Nov. 599; though he was already bishop 23 Oct. 610; and still living 13 Jan. 615.

- 319 Leontius scholasticus Byzantius et monachus. His treatise de sectis was written according to the probable conjecture of Fabricius after the death of Philoponus, of whom he speaks; and therefore after A.D. 617. Leontius also wrote against the *διατριβή*s of Philoponus, which was composed after A.D. 610. See Philoponus Gr. N° 381.

Leontius wrote de sectis while he was scholasticus, but he is called monachus by Nicephorus, who describes his other work, H. E. XVIII. 47. 48. If this is to be understood literally, that Leontius was already a monk when he composed that other work, the treatise de sectis was first written, and the work in Nicephorus against the *διατριβή*s of Philoponus was later.

- 320 Isidorus Hispalensis episcopus: A. D. 612. 636. His chronicle of the Gothic kings from A. D. 369 to 625: see A. D. 625.
- 321 Maximus monachus. Of a noble family at Constantinople, he received a liberal education, and was at first in the service of the emperor Heraclius. But when the monothelete question began to be mentioned (about A. D. 622) he withdrew from the court and became a monk. He was a distinguished opponent of the monotheletes. His zeal and influence and the treatment which he endured are recorded by Theophanes. The death of Maximus is fixed by his fellow sufferer Anastasius to 13 Aug. 662. Testimonies to Maximus are collected in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 487. 488.
- 322 Ildefonsus episcopus Toletanus. His predecessor Eugenius II, who is described by Ildefonsus himself, died in the 9th year of the reign of Reccesuinthus, and in the 12th year of his episcopate. The 12 years current of Eugenius II are at A. D. 646—657. Ildefonsus fled from his parents and became a monk. He was afterwards chosen bishop of Toledo. He presided 9y 2^m and died Jan. 23 A. D. 667, on the first day of the 19th year of Reccaredus. The 9y 2^m of his episcopate carry back his appointment to November A. D. 657ⁿ.

ⁿ Julianus the biographer of Ildefonsus was also himself afterwards bishop

Thus far of authors who lived within a period of about 630 years, from the times of the Apostles to A. D. 667. The five remaining names added in alphabetical order are of writers quoted in the Fasti Romani, but either of uncertain age, or belonging to later times.

323 Alexander Lycopolitanus. Mentioned by Photius among the writers against the Manichees: "Cyril of Jerusalem has shewn their impiety, and Epiphanius, and Titus of Bostra, and Serapion of Thmuis, and Alexander archbishop of Lycopolis." From the title of his works it appears that Alexander was once a gentile; and Tillemont, Beausobre, and Mosheim, quoted by Lardner, rejecting the account of Photius, think that the work was written by a heathen. Some passages from Alexander are given in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 489. 490.

324 Andreas Cæsareæ Cappadocum episcopus. Oudin has this account: "Andreas—A. D. 840. De quo eximie Cavus ad annum 500 'Videtur—floruisse anno 500. 'Scripsit ad Macarium quendam commentarios in 'Apocalypsin quos Latine vertit Theodorus Peltanus 'soc. Jesu. Extant Græco-Latine ad finem comment. 'Chrysostomi in evangelium Joannis in editione Morelliana tom. VIII.' Ita Cavus—ex Bellarmino, quem etiam non nominatum expressit."

325 Andreas Cretensis. Fabricius: "Andreas, a native of Damascus, lived some time as a monk at Jerusalem, before he went to Constantinople; hence called Andreas of Jerusalem, afterwards archbishop of Crete." Placed by Cave at A. D. 635—680, by Fabricius at A. D. 680: and Fabricius relates that he was sent by Theodorus patriarch of Jerusalem to the sixth council held at CP. in A. D. 680 to act against the Monotheletes; that he was appointed a deacon at Constantinople, and then Archbishop of Crete. Oudin upon conjecture places Andreas at A. D. 840—850. But his arguments, of Toledo, and his episcopate of 107 1m 7^d terminated 6 March 690. These numbers carry back his appointment to 29 Jan. 680. The succession of bishops was this:

Eugenius II A. D. 646

Ildefonsus Nov. A. D. 657

Quiricus Feb. A. D. 667

Julianus quartus ab Eugenio Jan. 29 A. D. 680.

given by Harles ad Fabricium, are far from satisfactory. A Catalogue of forty extant homilies of Andreas is given by Fabricius; twenty of which are contained in the edition of Combefis.

- 326 Arethas Cæsareæ Cappadociæ episcopus. Oudin: "Certam ejus ætatem docuit me B. de Montfaucon Palæographia Græca, ubi profert codicem: "Codex annum et calligraphi nomen in fine profert. ἐγράφη κ.τ.λ. ἔτει κόσμου 5914. scil. A. D. 914." In his commentary on the Apocalypse he quotes his predecessor Andreas of Cæsarea. The commentary of Arethas is published with Œcumenius in ed. Veron. 1532 and in ed. Cramer Oxon. 1840.
- 327 Beda. He brings down his History to A. D. 731, and at the close of his history gives an account of himself: "Born in the territory of the monastery of Wearmouth and Jarrow, I was educated from the age of seven by the abbot Benedict and his successor Coelfrid. I have passed my whole life in that monastery. In my 19th year I was ordained deacon, and presbyter in my 30th year. I am now in the 59th year of my age." If we suppose that this account of himself was subjoined by Beda in A. D. 732, the 59 years current will carry back his birth to A. D. 574. He died 26 May 735, in about his 62nd year.
- 328 Hermias. Author of διασυρμὸς τῶν ἔξω φιλοσόφων. His time is unknown.
- 329 Joannes Damascenus. Flourished A. D. 730—755, within the reigns of Leo Isaurus and of Constantine. At the time of a synod held at Constantinople Feb. 10—Aug. 8 A. D. 754 Joannes was still living.
- 330 Isidorus Pacensis episcopus. Still living in A. D. 754, in which year he closes his Chronicle. Isidorus is quoted by Fabricius de Ildefonso p. 59: Wamba Gothorum rex anno regni sui quarto in æra 723 [A. D. 685] in Toletana urbe—concilium salutis parat, præsidente tunc sanctissimo Ildefonso [Nº 322] mellifluo in libris de virginitate nostræ Dominae Mariæ, ut anchora fidei. There are two errors in the text of Fabricius or of Isidorus, in this passage. 1. We must read in æra 714. sc. A. D. 675 when the 4th year of Wamba was current. 2. Ildefonsus there named was dead eight years before, and Quiricus presided in that council.

331 Nicephorus Callisti. Described at A. D. 579. 610.

332 Œcumenius. Author or compiler of commentaries upon the Acts of the Apostles, the Epistles of St. Paul, and the Apocalypse. Œcumenius was later than A. D. 914, for he quotes not only Photius who flourished A. D. 858, and Andreas of Cæsarea cir. A. D. 840, but Arethas of Cæsarea, who lived in A. D. 914. How long after the time of Arethas Œcumenius lived is not known.

The second volume of the Fasti Romani p. 496 contains some abstracts of Origen and Hieronymus, the whole of which cannot be conveniently inserted in this epitome. The abstract of Origen de principiis will accordingly be omitted, but the abstracts of the treatises of Hieronymus against Rufinus and against the Pelagians shall be repeated in this volume.

Rufinus had translated Origen περὶ ἀρχῶν in 398. Hieronymus was informed of that work by Pammachius and Oceanus. He addressed a letter to Rufinus himself in 400, and composed these books in A. D. 402.

I Lib. I Rufinus^a objects to me that I have translated the work of Origen περὶ ἀρχῶν, and that I formerly commended Origen. But Hilarius also translated from Origen 40,000 lines on Job and the Psalms. The works of Ambrosius are full of Origen. Victorinus the martyr approves. Now, because I have censured some doctrines of Origen, Rufinus has renounced my friendship, and is said to have written three books against me^b. To those books, whenever they

I come to light and reach my hands, I will endeavour to reply. They ask why I translated Origen περὶ ἀρχῶν. My answer is short. Your letters, Pammachius, and those of your friends persuaded me. You told me that these books had been fraudulently translated by others. You sent me a copy of that translation, which when I compared with the Greek original, I immediately perceived that what Origen had impiously said of the Father and Son and Holy Spirit had been softened by the interpreter; that other doctrines, on the fall of the angels, on the descent of souls, on the resurrection, on the world of Epicurus, on the restitution of all things, had been either so rendered as they stood in the Greek, or had been confirmed from the commentaries of Didymus a known vindicator of Origen. Now one who was not his friend might say “ Either “ change all that is evil or publish all that is good. If you omit “ some hurtful things which you pretend are interpolations of the “ heretics, prune away all that is noxious. But if you profess to “ give a faithful translation, why do you change some things and “ leave others untouched?” But I, desirous only of vindicating myself, have expressed in my version simply what I found in the Greek, not that the reader might trust my version, but that he might be put upon his guard against trusting the other. My translation had a double use; that Origen might be shewn to be heretical, and that Rufinus might be shewn to be a false interpreter. True, I have translated formerly seventy books of Origen, and much from his tomes; but no one ever complained of my labours. What was fit for Latin ears was delivered to them. But why publish to them what Greece condemned? what the world rejected? I, a translator of many works of Origen, for many years have given no offence; you, Rufinus, are now distinguished by a rash attempt. You tell us in your preface that you have translated the book of Pamphilus the martyr in defence of Origen, and you labour to obtain for Origen the sanction of a martyr’s approbation. Eusebius of Cæsarea, an Arian, composed six books in defence of Origen. p. 796 The first book of this work you publish under the name of the martyr Pamphilus. If this is the work of Pamphilus, which of the six is the first of Eusebius? In the very book which you render mention is made of the book that follows. In the second and following books Eusebius refers to the first. If the whole six books are written by Pamphilus, why did you not translate the others?

Rufinus against Hieronymus is lost; the second in two parts is extant apud Hieronymum tom. 4 p. 134—153 ed.

Frankfurti, 1684, from which edition it is here quoted.

I I do not suppose that you were ignorant that Pamphilus left no written work ; for Eusebius himself, the friend of Pamphilus, in his three books of the Life of Pamphilus asserts in the third book “ He “ himself wrote nothing except some letters to his friends.” p. 797 And this account is given after Pamphilus was dead. By that book which you have published with the name of the martyr the consciences of many have been wounded^c. Of what weight are the letters of Theophilus and Anastasius proclaiming Origen a heretic, when you have placed against them the testimony of a martyr in his favour ? Acknowledge your fault. Say that Pamphilus was not the author. I have myself translated many works of Eusebius. Am I therefore an Arian because he was an Arian ? Are you offended because I translated the books περὶ ἀρχῶν ? What could I do ? I was told from Rome that your commendation of me in your preface involved me in the charge of being an Origenist. I was called upon to reply ; my silence would imply an assent to the charge. You will observe that this burden was laid upon me against my will. If you had translated these books without naming me, you might complain with reason that I had translated after you. Now you complain without cause. My translation is my defence. But my translation is directed not against you but against Origen. You corrected what you supposed was added by the heretics ; I published what all Greece admits to have been written by Origen himself.

I hear that you ridicule my letter and affirm that I make Barabbas my preceptor in Hebrew^d. No wonder that you can write Barabbas for Barkanina, when you can write Pamphilus for Eusebius. Hear then, thou man of wisdom. I did not call him my preceptor, but I wished to shew my diligence in the study of the Scriptures. Was any injury done to you if I followed Apollinarius and Didymus instead of you ? Could I not name in that letter Gregorius, in whom I glory as my teacher ? I named those only who were in the same charge as myself, that I might shew myself, like them, an admirer of the learning of Origen but not of his faith. Origen himself, Clements, Eusebius, are wont to write “ The Hebrews so explained it.” p. 801 Origen names the patriarch Huillus, who lived in his time, and ends the 30th tome upon Isaiah with his exposition of the 89th Psalm ; which is inscribed “ The song of Moses.” And the eleven others which have no inscriptions he gives to Moses with the same expositor.

I I hear that Rufinus, when the letters of Theophilus against Origen were read to him, exclaimed that he had never known before that Origen had written such things. And yet Rufinus had translated him and had published his defence (written by a heretic) under the name of a martyr. Let it be allowed to me then not to have known the books περὶ ἀρχῶν, which I had not read before, and to have known only the homilies which I had translated, and in which there was no mischief. Let me hear wherein I am heretical. Let me know his charge. For it is not possible that in my commentaries on the Ephesians, which I hear he censures^e, I have spoken both well and ill; have drawn both sweet and bitter from the same fountain. What his actual charge is against those books I know not. For the report only of his writings has reached me and not the writings themselves. The style of authors differs according to the subject. Chrysippus and Antipater, Demosthenes and Æschines, Lysias and Isocrates, exhibit three different forms of style. Read the rhetorical books of Cicero and he will teach you that there is one style of writing for history, another for orations, another for dialogues, another for letters, another for commentaries. I have so followed Origen, Didymus, and Apollinarius in the commentary on the Ephesians as not to surrender my own faith. Is any one responsible for all the different interpretations because he records the various expositions of preceding commentators? He is angry because I have said that Origen justifies falsehood. Now Origen does this in the 6th book of his Stromata. I am told that he also criticises me because in my exposition of the second Psalm I have mentioned the variations in the Hebrew upon one word of that Psalm. Is the orthodox faith in danger, then, if the reader is informed in how many ways a Hebrew line is interpreted? Read Aristotle, and his commentator Alexander^f, and learn what ambiguities there are in words.

But since Paulinianus has mentioned to me some passages of his censure upon my commentary on the Ephesians, I will dwell a little on this point. Origen wrote three books upon that epistle; Didymus and Apollinarius also wrote upon it; whom I translating or imitating will now add what I have said in the preface to that work, &c.—p. 809 I dictated that commentary 18 years ago, when Origen was a celebrated name, and the books περὶ ἀρχῶν were not yet known to the Latins. And yet at that time I declared my opinion, and

I shewed what displeased me in Origen's doctrines.—(Hieronymus proceeds to vindicate his commentary p. 810—814 upon five other points on which he is informed that Rufinus founds objections. He then passes p. 816 to another charge against him.) Rufinus objects to me mingled sacrilege and perjury because in my letter to Eustochium I had promised to lay aside profane studies in future^g. But I did not engage to forget all that I had learnt already, and besides what I have there related passed in a dream^h. I hear also that his follower Chrysogonus objects to my sentiments on baptism. They have the treatise to which they object. Let Rufinus reply to it.

II Lib. II p. 820 Thus far in vindication of myself. I now come to his apology, in which he endeavours to satisfy Anastasius of Rome. He would have gone to Rome to refute the charge against him, but that he had now returned to Aquileia after an absence of 30 years, and was unwilling again to leave his parents. Now his parents are dead. He has been two years at Aquileia and might, if he felt it requisite, have journeyed to Rome to defend his character in person. He boasts that in the time of the Arian persecution in Africa he was imprisoned for the faith at Alexandria and was exiled. p. 821. 822 What imprisonment? what exile? State to us now your creed on the points disputed; on the incarnation, on the resurrection of the body, on the devil, on the state of the soul. p. 826 I know that various opinions on the origin of the soul are expressed by Tertullian, Lactantius, and others. Rufinus treats the subject in a style full of faults and absurdities, and concludes by professing ignorance, like another Arcesilaus or Carneades. p. 828 He is cautious of pronouncing, lest, if he condemn Tertullian or Lactantius, he should also condemn Origen. Having set forth his creed, or rather his profession of ignorance, he proceeds to excuse himself for translating the books περὶ ἀρχῶν. p. 829 “He has been requested to translate “ some pieces of Origen into Latin. If there were any merits, or “ any faults, they did not belong to him. Why should the faults
“ of the author be imputed to the translator? He has only rendered
“ the Greek sense in Roman language.”—And do you wonder that men should censure you, when you can say of open blasphemies
“ If there are any faults?” p. 830 “You were requested to render
“ the Greek into Latin.”—I wish you had done so. You have added,

^g The passage of Hieronymus tom. i p. 212. 213 is quoted by Rufinus in Hieron. p. 145 D—G &c. where he absurdly insists upon the merit of abandoning profane studies and the guilt of reading the εἰσαγωγή of Porphyry. Hieronymus takes a juster view of this subject in his epistle to Magnus, Works n. 114 p. 461.

II you have omitted, and then you say that the faults and merits belong to the author. In the first book περὶ ἀρχῶν you justify by reasons borrowed from Didymus the blasphemies of Origen. p. 831 Your own preface condemns you as a bad translator. You there tell that you have omitted much, although you are silent upon what you have inserted. You say "I could not change all. I have omitted only " what was added by the heretics." What you have left, then, is Origen's own.—(Hieronymus p. 832 proceeds to survey Origen's opinions.)

(He then resumes his address to Rufinus p. 833.) No one objects to you that you have translated Origen—otherwise the same objection might be made against Hilarius and Ambrosius—but that you have translated heretical opinions. I myself so translated 70 homilies and some tomes of Origen as to keep out of view the evil¹. In the book περὶ ἀρχῶν I openly shewed what the reader was to avoid. If you will not hear the admonition of a brother, hear the censure of a bishop. I subjoin a copy of the letter which Anastasius addressed to Joannes against you.

You say you have proved in your supplement to the Apology which Pamphilus wrote for Origen that his books had been corrupted by the heretics, and especially the books περὶ ἀρχῶν.—(Hieronymus proceeds to quote and examine some parts of the first book of Pamphilus, or rather Eusebius, pro Origene.)—There is blasphemy in the very passage which you produce in his defence.—Eusebius, a most learned man—learned I say, not orthodox—through six volumes labours no other point than to shew Origen of his own creed; that is, an Arian. Didymus also, who in his opinion of the Trinity is certainly orthodox, acknowledged as genuine those very passages in the books περὶ ἀρχῶν which you reject as spurious.

But how does he prove that Origen has been corrupted by heretics? Clement of Rome (he says) in the books called the Recognitions speaks the language of Eunomius. Clement of Alexandria sometimes calls the Son a creature. Dionysius of Alexandria disputing against Sabellius lapses into Arianism. Hence he concludes that their writings have been interpolated by heretics. p. 837 By this mode of reasoning neither Marcion nor Manes nor Arius nor Eunomius can be accused; because whatever they have written amiss tenuit: and that Hieronymus had set him the example of this free translation: Verbum de verbo interpretari antea et stultum esse et malitiosum pronuntiasti. In hoc secutus sum te.

II has been inserted by their enemies. Certain passages of Origen are objected to, and instead of defending him you accuse others, and tell us of the errors of Dionysius or of Clemens.

Rufinus affirms that Origen himself in a letter to his friends at Alexandria complains of corruption in his writings. He subjoins a copy of this letter; and he who charges others with falsifying has himself falsified the meaning of this letter, of which he gives an unfaithful interpretation. Origen in that letter inveighs against Demetrius and other bishops for excluding him from the Church. But Rufinus, concealing the true object of the letter, ascribes to Origen what Origen never said. (Hieronymus subjoins a part of Origen's letter, and a specimen of the fraudulent translation of Rufinus. He quotes p. 840 a dialogue between Candidus a Valentinian and Origen, in which Candidus misrepresents him.) If all the heretical passages in Origen's works are not Origen's own, but inserted by others (and almost all his tomes are full of such passages), then nothing is Origen's.

Rufinus not content with calumniating the Greeks passes to the Latins, and first produces Hilarius. We are told that after the council of Ariminum [in A. D. 359] his book was corrupted by the heretics: that in a certain synod of bishops he ordered his book to be brought to him from his house—the book containing without his knowledge heretical passages—that when these passages appeared the author was excommunicated and left the synod. Now shew me where this synod was held in which you pretend that Hilarius was excommunicated. In what city? under what consuls? by the rescript of what emperor? Who were these bishops? of Gaul only, or also of Italy and Spain? You have not produced a single fact; but, that you may defend Origen, you bring this charge against that eminent man. He next proceeds to Cyprian and informs us that the book of Tertullian de Trinitate is read under the name of Cyprian by the Macedonian heretics at Constantinople. Now in this there are two falsehoods; for neither is the book Tertullian's nor is it ascribed to Cyprian, but to Novatian: whose name it bears and whose style it exhibits. He then attacks Epiphanius who had pronounced Origen heretical in his letter to Joannes. He affirms that Epiphanius had read by his own acknowledgment 6000 books written by Origen, and was therefore indebted to Origen for his knowledge. Rufinus insinuates that many attempt to deter others from reading Origen, that they may themselves steal from him without detection. Thus Anastasius Theophilus Venerius and Chromatius and the whole synod which condemned Origen as heretical are plagiarists from his works.

II But the chief attack is against Epiphanius, whose various knowledge of five languages, the Greek the Syrian the Hebrew the Egyptian, and in part even the Latin, is made a subject of accusation. But of the 6000 books of Origen who believes you? How could Epiphanius read what Origen never wrote? Compute the lists of his books contained in the third book of Eusebius on the life of Pamphilus; you will not find the third part of six thousand.

With respect to that book which passes under the name of Pamphilus, I was deceived by your manuscript and imagined that Pamphilus and Eusebius had written different works. Whence ten years ago in my Catalogue of authors I ascribed that book to Pamphilus. But as Eusebius himself says that Pamphilus left no writings except letters to his friends, and as the book which bears his name is no other than the first of the six books of Eusebius, it is clear that you wished to introduce a heresy under the sanction of a martyr's name. I have now read the books περὶ ἀρχῶν and many other pieces which I had not read before; that I may now know what to avoid and what to approve. In my youth I translated his homilies.

I am told that a letter is circulating in my name in which I am made to say that I repent of my translations made from the Hebrew in my youth. I am astonished at this forgery. The author of this forged epistle insinuates that I had translated the Scriptures from the Hebrew in order to disparage the Septuagint Version. I disparage the Septuagint^k, which I gave diligently amended in the Roman language many years ago? All my tracts are built upon that text; my commentaries on the twelve prophets interpret mine and the Septuagint edition.—He gives his preface to Genesis. He observes that in the New Testament many things are quoted from the Old which did not appear in their copies^l. He mentions that the interpreters in the time of Ptolemy wilfully suppressed some particular texts; that the tale of the 70 cells was false; that Aristeas, who lived at the time, and Josephus after him, only relate that the

^l He instances Matt. II. 15 from Hos. XI. 1, John XIX. 37 from Zech. XII. 10, Matt. II. 23 from Isaiah (in reality 1 Sam. I. 11), John VII. 38 from Proverbs XVIII. 4, and 1 Cor. II. 9 from Isaiah LXIV. 4. Passages not found in the Septuagint. Hieronymus Algasie tom. 3 p. 306 marks in Isaiah XLII a difference between the Septuagint and the Hebrew; and observes that Matthew XII. 17 follows the Hebrew. p. 307 Matthew II. 15 quotes Hosea XI. 1 from the Hebrew and not from the Septuagint. p. 307 When the Septuagint differs from the Hebrew, the evangelists and apostles follow the Hebrew. Hieronymus Rustico tom. 1 p. 335 marks in Jerem. III a passage juxta Hebraicam veritatem, quod in Græcis et Latinis codicibus non habetur. In Pelag. p. 992 he notices in Ecclesiastes X. 1 a variation between the Seventy and the Hebrew. Ibid. p. 1015 a variation in Isaiah VI.

II translators met in one hall; that they translated but did not prophesy^m; that they were not inspired but used their learning and knowledge of languages in executing the work. They translated before the Advent of Christ; we, who live after the Resurrection, write not a prophecy but a history. I do not condemn the Seventy, but I prefer the Apostles to them all. If you think that I have erred in my translation, ask the Hebrews. What they have concerning Christ your copies want.—(He quotes p. 848 his remarks on the four books of Kings to shew his respect for the Septuagint, and his preface to the Chronicles addressed to Chromatius, in which he had said that, if the text of the 70 interpreters remained as they had left it, his translation from the Hebrew would have been unnecessary; but now there were different copies in every region, and the genuine and ancient translation was corrupted.) Alexandria and Egypt follow Hesychius in their copy of the Septuagint. From Constantinople to Antioch the copies of Lucianus are approved. The intermediate provinces use the Palestine copies which Eusebius and Pamphilus published as corrected by Origen. And the whole world is ranged under this threefold division. Origen not only exhibited four editions in four columns but with greater boldness added the edition of Theodotion, marking with asterisks what was omitted and with virgulæ what was superfluous. Why then may not the Latins admit my labours? I leave the old edition untouched. I found a new one upon Hebrew, and, what is more, upon apostolical authority. I have given five texts on the authority of the Apostles and of our Lord himself, which are not in the Septuagint. p. 850 The Apocrypha is rejected by the church. We find those texts in the Hebrew original. The Greeks themselves after the Septuagint version, and after the Gospel had been preached, diligently read the Jews and Ebionites, Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion, and used these interpreters in their churches through the labours of Origen in his Hexapla.

(Hieronymus proceeds to tell p. 851 that he had many years before translated into Latin the book of Job from the Septuagint as marked by Origen; that he afterwards rendered that book from the Hebrew, and he quotes the preface in which he vindicated his own labour. It was there urged) If among the Greeks, after the Septuagint version, after the preaching of the Gospel, the Jew Aquila and the Judaizing heretics Symmachus and Theodotion were received, who cellulas interpretantium unam et consonam vocem dubitandum non est Spiritus Sancti inspiratione prolata.

II craftily glossed over many texts, and are even yet read and expounded in the churches, how much more should I, a Christian, escape censure for my translation?—(He then gives p. 852 his preface to the Psalms which he had rendered long ago from the Septuagint and then again from the Hebrew; and the end of his preface to the books of Solomon p. 853, which he had also translated first from the 70 and then from the Hebrew, dedicated to the bishops Chromatius and Heliodorus; and a part of his prologue to Isaiah translated from the Seventy. Upon Daniel he says p. 854,) I wished to shew what the Hebrew said, and to inform the reader that this prophet is read in the churches according to Theodotion and not according to the Septuagint. There are four editions, Aquila, Symmachus, the Seventy, Theodotion. The churches read Daniel in the last^a. And when I observe what the Hebrews say against the story of Susanna, of the three children, and of Bel and the dragon, (which are not in the Hebrew copy,) he who censures me for this proves himself a sycophant^o; for I have not declared my own opinion but what they urge against us. Now you, who are so curious in all that concerns me, and bring an accusation against all that I have written in so many years, why did not you read at least these prefaces to the books which you accused? p. 855 You have, as I know, at a great cost purchased the editions of Aquila, Symmachus, and Theodotion. Your Origen—and let me call him mine—mine for his genius and learning but not for the truth of his doctrines—in all his works, after the Seventy interpreters explains the Jewish translators. Eusebius and Didymus do the same. I omit Apollinarius, who, with a zeal but not according to knowledge, attempted to combine the translations of all in one, and to weave a text of Scripture not by the rule of truth but by his own judgment. The apostolical men, the apostles and evangelists, our Lord himself, use the Hebrew copies; as in John VII. 38, and on the cross itself quoting Psalm XXI. 1 p, he quotes as in the Hebrew and not as in the Seventy. p. 855 I say then without disparaging the Seventy that the authority of the Apostles is better. Wherever the Seventy and the Hebrew agree, they quote the Seventy; but wherever they differ the Apostles quote the Hebrew. Let my accuser then shew some text in the New Testament quoted from the Seventy which is not in the Hebrew, and our dispute is at an end.

II I have exceeded the limits of an epistle, and intending to refute a heresy have been compelled to vindicate myself. I wait for the three books of Rufinus.

III Lib. III. Addressed to Rufinus himself in reply to his letter. Hieronymus examines p. 859. 860 the statement of Rufinus in his letter, that copies had got abroad against his will^q. He quotes p. 861 and examines another passage in which Rufinus charges him with boasting of his own eloquence. p. 862 Hieronymus himself possessed three languages, Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, Epiphanius five^r. The invectives of Rufinus had reached him two days before^s.

He relates p. 863 the causes of their dispute from the beginning. He calls upon Rufinus p. 864. 865 to a reconciliation, and to join with him in condemning the errors of Origen. He repeats p. 866 that he was misled by Rufinus when some years before (namely in A. D. 392) he ascribed the first book of Eusebius pro Origene to Pamphilus; that when the question against Origen was agitated he sought with greater diligence and found in the library at Cæsarea the six books of Eusebius ἀπολογία Ὀριγένους. He renews p. 867 his complaint against the preface to the books περὶ ἀρχῶν. He restates with great vehemence the charges against Rufinus, the forgery of a book in the name of the martyr Pamphilus, the garbled translation of the work περὶ ἀρχῶν, the insidious praise of Hieronymus in the preface. Hieronymus p. 868 justifies himself for quoting in his commentaries Origen, Didymus, and Apollinarius, though differing in their views of the subject. He affirms p. 872 that the heretical faction lately driven from Egypt and Alexandria had taken refuge at Jerusalem; that Rufinus falsely called himself the disciple of Theophilus. He denies p. 873 that he had ever charged Vigilantius with participating in the heresy of Alexandria. He ridicules the plea of Rufinus that the letter of Anastasius against him was not genuine, and challenges him to come to Rome and prove the fact.

Hieronymus p. 875 relates his own departure from Rome in August 385; his voyage to Rhegium, his interview with Epiphanius in Cyprus, with Paulinus at Antioch; his arrival at Jerusalem in the winter, his progress to Egypt, his return to Bethlehem. He lays open the conduct of Rufinus in misrepresenting Epiphanius. He III explains the causes of the journeys of his own friends Vincentius, Paulinianus, Eusebius, and the presbyter Rufinus to Rome.

He again p. 879 vindicates his version of the Hebrew Scriptures, which he had already treated largely in the second book. He replies p. 880 to the cavil of Rufinus^t that he had at one time censured Origen and Didymus and praised them at another. The same men were not equally right in all their notions. We praise the genius of Tertullian, we condemn his heresy. We admire in Origen his knowledge of the Scriptures, we reject his false doctrines. We celebrate in Didymus his retentive memory and his pure faith in the Trinity; we withdraw from him in the matters in which Origen has misled him.—Hieronimus ridicules Rufinus for his profession of ignorance. He states p. 882 the perplexing question of the origin of souls. Three opinions were proposed, one Origen's, another Tertullian's, the third the general opinion of Hieronimus and others. But the true difficulty p. 883 is omitted by Rufinus, who asserts what no one ever questioned, but is silent upon the point really in dispute.

He returns p. 885 to the charge made by Rufinus that his papers had been stolen by the emissaries of Hieronimus. He justifies p. 887 his own translation of the work περὶ ἀρχῶν as necessary, and asserts his right to do it. He repeats that Eusebius and not Pamphilus was the true author of the Apology. p. 888 That Rufinus called upon him to produce the books of Pythagoras^u, which was an idle cavil; for, though Pythagoras left no writings, yet he left doctrines and precepts, which Hieronimus p. 889 had learnt from Cicero, Iamblichus, and other writers.

He remarks p. 891 upon the conclusion of the letter of Rufinus, and ends his invective p. 893—895 by applying some texts from the book of Proverbs and from the 57th Psalm.

HIERONYMI ad Ctesiphontem adversus Pelagianos, tom. 2
p. 897—911 ed. Rom.

He answers the questions of Ctesiphon to the following effect. p. 898 The Pelagians say that man is capable of attaining perfection.

^t Rufinus in Hieron. p. 147 E—H Ait duas esse solas præfatiunculas suas in quibus laudare visus est Origenem. Rufinus proceeds to quote many passages from the works of Hieronimus in praise of Origen, and affirms p. 149 F that he had produced ten: Agnoscatur quam verum sit hoc quod scribit, quod in suis duabus tantum præfatiunculis

Origenis meminerit, in his non fidem ejus sed ingenium, non dogmatisten eum sed interpretem laudans. Adhibui interim decem.

^u Rufinus in Hieron. p. 145 H Denique inter cætera etiam Pythagoræ libros legisse se jactat: quos ne exstare quidem eruditi homines asserunt.

This is derived from Manes, from Priscillian, who have a part of the gnostic heresy of Basilides. p. 899, 900 Evagrius of Pontus, who writes to virgins, to monks, to Melania, has published a book περὶ ἀσθείας. His works have been interpreted into Latin by his disciple Rufinus, who also has written a book in which he enumerates many whom he calls Origenists, Ammonius, Eusebius, Euthymius, Evagrius himself, Isidorus and others. Rufinus ascribes a book of Xystus the Pythagorean to Sixtus the Roman bishop, that the Pythagorean dogma which equals man to God might pass under the authority of a martyr. p. 901 From this book you have quoted many testimonies. Rufinus did the same in the name of the martyr Pamphilus, to whom he attributed the first six books written by the Arian Eusebius, that he might pour into Latin ears with better effect the far-famed books of Origen περὶ ἀρχῶν. Your doctrine is an offshoot from Origen.

The second opinion of Jovinian (that there is no lapse after baptism) is your opinion. My answer to him is an answer to you.— (After mentioning that Simon Magus, Nicolaus, Marcion, Apelles, Montanus, Arius, Donatus, and Priscillian were all aided by women, he proceeds to the Pelagian doctrine.) They affirm the grace of God assisting us means no more than that he has given us free will. p. 903 One of their doctors argues thus: “If I do nothing “without God’s help, and all that I do is his, then not I but God “works all things, and free will is given in vain. I therefore either “use the power of willing once given to me, or, if I want aid, “free will is destroyed in me.” They assert then that, having freedom of will, they have no need of further aid, not knowing the Scripture “What hast thou that thou didst not receive &c. Now, who destroys free will? He who gives God thanks and refers all that flows into the stream to the fountain, or he who says “I have no need of thee—Thou hast given me free will. Am I to do nothing without thy help?” But hear the Apostle^x: Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God. Hear St. James^y: Ye ought to say, If the Lord will, we will do this or that. Is freedom of will then destroyed if you recur in all things to God as the author? p. 905 You say the commands of God are easy, and yet you can shew me no man that has fulfilled them all. Answer me. Are they easy or difficult? If easy, shew me the man that has performed them. If difficult, why do you dare to affirm that they are easy, when none has fulfilled them?

You sometimes say “Either the commands are possible and rightly given by God, or impossible, and therefore no fault in those who cannot perform them." You say that man can be without sin if he will; and then you vainly add "not without God's grace." For if man can be without sin of himself, what need of God's grace? If he can do nothing without the grace of God, why affirm that man can do what he cannot do? You say, God has commanded what is possible. Granted. Who denies it? p. 906 But the Apostle^a teaches how that is to be understood: What the law could not do, God, sending his own Son—condemned sin in the flesh. And again^a: No flesh shall be justified by the works of the law. By the Law he means not the Law of Moses only, but all commands. For he says^b I consent to the Law of God after the inward man &c.

You will say that we assent to the dogmas of the Manichees, who assert two natures. Impute this to the Apostle who assures us that God is of one nature and man of another. p. 907 The spirit and the flesh oppose each other^c. In what manner the flesh is frail hear from the Apostle^d: What I would I do not, but the evil which I hate, that I do. What power hinders his will? Hear the Apostle again^e: Shall the clay say to the potter, Why hast thou made me thus? Object further, why he said^f Jacob have I loved, Esau I have hated. Why so many thousands died for the sin of Achan^g? Why the ark was taken for the offence of the sons of Eli^h? Why 70,000 perished for the fault of *David*ⁱ? and finally p. 907—what your Porphyry is wont to object—why God suffered whole nations from Adam to Moses and from Moses to Christ to perish in ignorance? Why should Christ come at the end of time, and not before that innumerable multitude had perished? The Apostle will answer, acknowledging his own ignorance and leaving the knowledge to God. Consent then to be ignorant. Concede to God the power over his own acts. p. 908 We do not differ from brute animals merely in this, that we are formed with freedom of will. The Free Will itself rests upon God's help and wants his aid in all things.

You who boast that man is capable of perfection and yet confess yourself a transgressor answer me. Do you wish or not to be free from sin? If you do, why not fulfil your wish? If you do not, you shew yourself a contemner of God's precepts, and if a contemner, then a sinner. You have another argument which is not to be endured. "It is one thing to be, and another thing to be capable of being. To be is not in our own power; to be capable of being is affirmed generally ; though another has not attained it, yet he who will is able to attain it." Now what kind of reasoning is this? That is possible to be, which has never been. That is possible to be done, which no one has ever done. You attribute to some one, of whose existence you are ignorant, you assign to this nameless person what you cannot shew was ever found in the patriarchs and prophets and apostles.

(He charges them in conclusion p. 909 with concealing their real sentiments and not daring to speak out.) The Eunomians the Arians the Macedonians tell us their meaning. This heresy alone is ashamed to publish what it fears not to teach in secret. p. 911 Upon the point that many are called just in Scripture, as Zacharias, Elizabeth, Job and others, in my promised work I will with God's assistance speak more largely ; it may be sufficient now to say that they are so called not because they are wholly faultless but because they are righteous for the most part.

In his preface p. 912—914 he mentions the preceding letter to Ctesiphon. He mentions again Manes, Priscillian, Evagrius, Jovinian. He notices the heretics of Syria, the εὐχίται. In the present work he proposes to write in the Socratic form of dialogue. Atticus speaks the doctrine of Hieronymus himself, Critobulus delivers the opinions of Pelagius¹.

- I Lib. I. Critobulus contends p. 917 that, Free Will being once granted, the rest is in our own power. p. 918 that man can be without sin if he will ; that if no man has been without sin it is because the will was not perfect ; p. 921 that Job, Zacharias, and Elizabeth were examples of just persons. Atticus replies p. 925. 926 that St. Paul himself was not perfect ; that the perfection ascribed to men was not the complete and divine perfection, but such as suited the infirm nature of man ; that Job and Zacharias and Elizabeth were called just only in a lower sense ; that there were different degrees of merit. Zacharias and Elizabeth were in the opinion of Hieronymus p. 929 inferior in merit to the virgin Mary. p. 930 While we are in the body, we must be satisfied with incomplete perfection ; when the mortal shall have put on immortality, God will be all in all ; so that there will not be wisdom only in Solomon,

I gentleness in David, zeal in Phineas, faith in Abraham, love of his Lord in Peter, but all qualities will be in all.

Critobulus argues p. 933 that either God has given possible commands or impossible. If possible, we can do them if we will; if impossible, we are not accountable for not performing them. In either case man can be without sin if he will. It is replied p. 934 that of many virtues and qualities each is possible to some, all are attainable by none; that different kinds and degrees of merit will be required from different men according to their lights and opportunities. p. 936 To have all perfection, not one being wanting, belongs only to Him who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth^m. In the various pursuits of men in the art of rhetoric, or in commentaries on the Scriptures, all have not the same gifts.

Atticus p. 938—954 examines many positions of Pelagius, quoted from his rules or heads of discourse. It is held that no one can be without sin except he has a knowledge of the law. This is too severe a condition, and would exclude multitudes. The rules quoted and censured by Atticus are the following, taken from the book of Pelagius. § 14 “That women may sing in the churches.” This is contrary to the Apostle’s precept 1 Tim. II. 12. Pelagius adds “that the servant of God should say nothing bitter; his conversation should be sweet and gentle,” and yet § 22 and § 31 he asserts “that the priest should boldly censure all.” These are held by Atticus p. 939 to be inconsistent. § 72 “The grace of God consists in the power of free will once given.” § 73 “In the day of judgment the wicked must not be spared.” This is an intercepting of God’s mercy. § 20 “No man can have a knowledge of the Scriptures except he learns them.” “That an uninstructed person ought not to use a knowledge of the law.” § 73 “That a Christian ought to be of such patience as to part with his goods joyfully and gratefully if any one spoils him.” This goes further than the Gospel requires. Is it not enough to lose our own with patience? Must we give thanks and express joy at our losses? § 164 “Love your enemies as your neighbours.” § 161 “Never trust your enemy.” Two contrary propositions. But though we are commanded to love our enemies, are we required to love them as our neighbours? as we love our friends? If I love them as my friends, what more can I do for my friends? § 123 “The kingdom of Heaven is promised in the Old Testament.” On the contrary it is manifest that the kingdom of heaven is first promised in the Gospel. You call us Manichees (says Atticus) because we call the Law a

^m 1 Pet. II. 22.

I shadow. We do not condemn the Law with Manes, we only assert that the Gospel is better. The Law is the promise, the Gospel the fulfilment; the Law is the beginning, the Gospel the completion; the Law is the foundation, the Gospel the superstructure.

§ 100 "Man can be without sin and perform God's will." This has been considered already. § 123 "Thou must not sin at all—ne leviter quidem." § 131 "Evil must not be in the thoughts." Atticus p. 946—954 treats of sins of ignorance. But all his examples of expiations for sins of ignorance are from the ceremonial Law and from the Old Testament.

II Lib. II. Critobulus replies p. 955 that sins of ignorance were expiated under the Law, but that under the Gospel no man is punished for sins of ignorance. He repeats that men being delivered from death by Christ need sin no more. Atticus p. 956—958 quotes Rom. VII and other texts to shew the corruption of man. To the position that the commands of God are easy Atticus p. 960 opposes many texts of Scripture, and the perturbations to which the mind of man is subject. God alone is immortal, because other beings are so per gratiam. God is immortal per naturam. God alone is wise, because others who are called wise are only so in an imperfect sense. The perfection of man is ex gratia; the perfection of God alone ex natura. It is one thing to be purified by God, another thing to be without sin of ourselves. What have you that you have not received? And if you have received it, why do you boast as if you had it of yourselvesⁿ? We are not preserved then by the power of free will but by the clemency of God. Having proved these positions from St. Paul, Atticus p. 997 proceeds to quote the Gospels and shews that God has there commanded things so difficult as almost to seem impossible, overthrowing the doctrine that his commands are easy. p. 1001 The Son of God in his human nature could not do some things^o. Are we then, who are altogether carnal, able to do all things that we would? The Son knows not the day and hour^p. Shall we then pretend to full knowledge? The Son of God felt human infirmity, and prayed, if it were possible, that the hour might pass^q.—You say that it is possible to be always free from sin. Christ is tempted^r. And yet this successor of Jovinian presumes to say that those who have been baptized in faith cannot be tempted afterwards. The Apostles themselves are fallible. The Saviour in his agony is comforted by an angel^s.—You want no help from God, ⁿ 1 Cor. IV. 7. ^o Mark VI. 5. ^p Mark XIII. 32. ^q Mark XIV. 35.

II having once received freedom of will. The Saviour says I can do nothing of myself^t. On which the Arians found a calumny. To whom the church replies that this is said in his human character.—You on the contrary say “I can be without sin if I will.” Paul and Silas were prevented by the Spirit from preaching in Asia or from going into Bithynia^v. Why so, if the free will once given was all-sufficient? Atticus p. 1007. 1008 confirms by other texts and by examples from the Old Testament, and by many passages from the prophets p. 1013. 1014 that man can only stand through the help and compassion of God. And yet this heir of Jovinian can say “I am altogether without sin. I am greater than the Apostle. He “does what he would not, and what he would he does not^w. But I “do what I will, and what I do not will I forbear to do. I have prepared the kingdom of heaven for myself by my own virtues. I am “not obnoxious to the sentence incurred by Adam.” (He quotes p. 1016—1021 other passages to shew the infirmity the insufficiency and the evil propensities of man.) You ask in what Abel Enoch Joshua and other holy men have transgressed. I answer that I know not; for I am not conscious of what passes within. But God sees the thoughts, and in his sight no man is justified.

III Lib. III. (Critobulus p. 1022 affirms that those who are baptized, being cleansed from all sin, are just and may remain so. This is called the exploded invention of Jovinian, long since condemned in Rome and Africa; and he is referred to the books against Jovinian for an answer.) Baptism remits former sins but does not ensure our future righteousness; this is to be maintained by labour, industry and diligence, and by the help of God. We can only ask; He must give. We begin, He accomplishes. We offer all we can; He supplies our deficiency. We say that God can do whatever he will and that man cannot of his proper will and of himself be free from sin. If he can, then you needlessly insert “by the grace of God;” which is not needed, if you are all-sufficient of yourselves. If you cannot act without that grace, then you foolishly affirm that you have a power which you have not. For it is manifest that whatever depends upon another’s will is not theirs for whose power you are contending, but His without whom they can do nothing. God indeed commands possibilities. But because men do not perform possibilities; therefore they need God’s mercy. Shew me an example of a man who has performed fully every point of duty, and then you

III may shew one who has no need of indulgence. But take the example of David, a holy man and especially chosen by God. And yet he transgressed. Man, if he remits his vigilance but a little, feels his own weakness. p. 1026 St. Paul was not perfect. The natural wants, the physical infirmities of man will divide his attention with higher matters, and will not suffer his whole time to be employed upon solemn thoughts and holy meditations. You may complain that God has not repressed evil, that he has permitted the existence of the devil. This is the language of Marcion and the whole tribe of heretics. They argue thus. Either God knew that man in Paradise would fall, or he did not know it. If he knew it, then man who could not avoid what God foreknew is not in fault, but God who so formed him. If he knew it not, you destroy his divinity by destroying his prescience. Why was Saul chosen, who was to become a most impious king? Was it not either ignorance or injustice to choose twelve Apostles, of whom one was a devil? Why choose the traitor Judas?—The answer is, God judges the present and not the future. Nor does he from his prescience condemn those of whom he knows that they will hereafter displease him. Such is his goodness, so unspeakable his clemency, that he elects those whom he sees to be now good and yet knows will be wicked hereafter, granting them an opportunity for conversion and penitence. Adam therefore did not sin because God foreknew it, but God foreknew what Adam of his own free will would do. We see in the example of the Ninevites^y and in the declaration of Jeremiah^z that God will spare when man repents.

It is answered p. 1029 “You give free will in words, you take it away in fact; making God the author of evil when you assert that man can do nothing of himself and that all we do is to be imputed to God. Our doctrine on the contrary is that the good and evil done by man through free will is to be imputed to himself and not to that Being who once for all granted him free will.” Atticus replies that even by this reasoning if God does not assist, yet he is the author of evils, because he could prevent and yet permitted. He then shews p. 1031 from Scripture in the examples of Jacob and Joseph that all depend upon the immediate agency of God; that St. Paul affirms our sufficiency to be from God; p. 1032 that our Lord in the Gospels declares I am the vine, you are the branches. No man can come to me unless the Father draw him^a; p. 1033. 1034 that, as the perpetual health of the body cannot be secured, so the III perpetual purity of the mind (for sin is to the mind what disease is to the body) cannot be maintained without God; that if we are invited to perfection in Scripture, this is to be understood of good things to come. The Lord addressing his disciples calls them evil^b. Abraham fell to the ground from a sense of his own weakness^c. It is said in Genesis I have seen God face to face^d. It is said again Thou canst not see my face, for no man can see my face and live^e. And again The invisible and only God, whom no man hath seen or can see^f. And No man hath seen God at any time^g. The latter expressions teach you how to understand the first. p. 1037 A resemblance to God and a true contemplation of him is then promised when he shall appear in his glory.

Pelagius writing to a widow in what manner saints should pray prescribes a form exhibiting a proud self confidence, like that of the Pharisee in the Gospel. Compare that prayer with the form commanded by our Lord. p. 1040 Our Lord says Lead us not into temptation. You with Jovinian say that after baptism there is no temptation and no sin. Pelagius flatters that widow and is not ashamed to ascribe to her a piety and truth which even the angels do not claim. p. 1041 Those two clauses of prayer and panegyric Pelagius is wont to deny to be his own, though the style confirms them to be his.

Critobulus exclaims Grant at least that children are without sin, who from their age are incapable of transgressing. Atticus replies I grant it, if they are baptized. Infants are baptized that their sins may be remitted by baptism. Critobulus enquires What evil had they done? Is any one loosed who is not bound? Atticus quotes St. Paulⁱ Death reigned from Adam to Moses even over those who had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression. He argues that all men are liable either on their own account or through Adam; that children by baptism are loosed from the guilt derived from Adam; adults both from that and from their own personal sins. He quotes Cyprian p. 1043 who calls the nature derived from Adam "the contagion of the old death." Atticus mentions Augustine ad Marcellinum de infantibus baptizandis^k, and a letter of Augustine to Hilarius against the doctrine of Pelagius^l; and concludes p. 1044 "If the remission to children by baptism of the sin which another

THEODORUS OF MOPSUESTIA.

We will now add from the work of Theodorus of Mopsuestia “ against those who affirm that men sin by nature and “ not by their own will,” (which has been described already at N° 219,) the argument against Hieronymus, so far as it is set forth in the abstract of Photius Cod. 177, to which we will add the remarks of Photius himself.

The chief dogmas of this sect are these: that men sin through nature and not through their own will; and this not a nature such as that with which Adam was originally created, for this they say was good, the workmanship of a good God, but such a nature as was afterwards allotted to him upon his transgression, when he received in exchange an evil nature for a good, and a mortal for an immortal. In this manner then it is affirmed that men become by nature evil, who were by nature good before, and incur sin by nature and not through their own will. This second proposition follows from the former; that not even new born infants are free from sin, inasmuch as the nature of man is founded in sin. For after the transgression of Adam (as they affirm) a sinful nature extended to all his posterity. And they bring such texts as *I was born in sin*ⁿ to confirm their dogmas. The sacrament of Baptism itself, and the sacrament of the Lord's Supper they apply to the remission of sins; and to establish their own opinions they administer these sacraments even to infants. Moreover, as a consequence of their original proposition they affirm that no one among men is just, and they apply the text In thy sight no flesh shall be justified^o. In the fourth place (O blasphemous and impious words) they hold that not even Christ himself, who is our God, is pure from sin, because he received a corrupt nature: and yet, as Theodorus affirms, in other parts of their blasphemy it may be seen that they do not ascribe to him the human nature in reality and in truth, but only by a figure. Fifthly they hold that marriage and the union of the sexes by which the race of man is continued are the works of a sinful nature—of that sinful nature into which Adam fell through his transgression, when he received from the inherent wickedness of his nature a mass of evils.

Such are the maxims of these heretics; and Theodorus does well to reject them, and sometimes excellently and forcibly rebukes their absurd and blasphemous opinions, and, adapting an opposite sense to those texts of Scripture which they have misinterpreted, he convicts them of utter ignorance. But he is not always right; for in many passages he may be seen to incline to the Nestorian dogma, and to hold with Origen that future punishments will not be eternal. Moreover when Theodorus asserts that Adam was originally created mortal, and that God threatened him with death, and pronounced death to be the consequence of sin, only to deter men from committing it, this dogma, as it seems to me, is not founded upon sound principles and might be fully refuted and disproved if it were to be examined; however much this opinion, as he affirms, may be adverse to those heretics. For we are not to conclude at once an argument to be good, because it combats a bad one; for evil will contradict itself. But if any thing is consonant to right reason and recognised by Scripture, this is to be accepted, even though no heresy ventures to oppose it.

Neither do I admit that sentiment among true dogmas, a sentiment superfluous and unheard of in the church, that there are two remissions of sins, the one of sins committed, the other a security against sinning in future, which I know not how to call, as he does, a remission of sins; for we shall need, as it seems, many explanatory interpretations to make this new form of remission of sins intelligible; which in exact language would be called impeccability, but which he names the complete and perfect remission and extinction of sin. What then is this remission, and where given, and whence proceeding? It began (he says) to manifest itself at the Advent of Christ; and to be given as a pledge. It is given completely both for works themselves and in the restitution of things at the resurrection; to obtain which both we and infants are baptized. Thus far all is splendid, and prepares us to expect the end. Tell us then what follows; we listen with attentive ears. What is that perfect remission of sins? After the resurrection, you say, there will be no more sin. From what hopes you have snatched us away! For not to enquire how this can be called remission of sins, I briefly ask, was it for this that Christ assumed flesh and was crucified, that after the resurrection you should sin no more? Did those then sin who died before the Advent? Will the unbaptized, whether adults or infants, sin in that future world? Will unbelievers repent of their sins in that state? For whom you have not found adequate punishment for what they have committed here.

I have pointed out what I cannot admit in his doctrine concerning the remission of sins. Perhaps however he has not willingly come to this conclusion himself, but has endeavoured to solve the difficulty which they create, when they ask wherefore are children admitted to the sacraments of the Lord's Supper and of Baptism if they themselves are not full of sin implanted in their nature. For these sacraments are administered for the remission of sins. But he ought to have solved that difficulty, which admits of many other solutions, in some other way, and, duly considering the absurdities which follow from his scheme, to have avoided so extravagant a supposition.

This is the Theodorus who in 28 books contended not amiss with Eunomius, and supported the opinions of Basil of Cæsarea, which are truth itself.

Photius then, although he disapproves of the explanation offered concerning the remission of sin, and although he disapproves also of those three other points,—the assertion that Adam was created mortal, the inclination to the dogma of Nestorius, and the adoption of the opinion of Origen that future punishments would have an end,—yet agreed with Theodorus in condemning the doctrine of Augustine and Hieronymus concerning Original Sin, and thus with him may be charged with adopting the Pelagian principle.

§. 9. TESTIMONIA PATRUM.

It remains in conclusion to collect the testimony of the Fathers to some important questions which force themselves on the attention of earnest and thoughtful minds.

Some have been apt to hold the authority of the Fathers in too high respect, while others passing to the opposite extreme have rejected it altogether. But in the first place their evidence is important. They possessed the advantage of being near the apostolical times, and within reach of tradition of what the apostles taught. With reference to the ministry of Christ upon earth, we of these latter days^a behold Him but not nigh. The immediate successors of the apostles might converse with those who remembered the time when He dwelt among them full of grace and truth. Even Hieronymus and Chrysostom were scarcely more distant from the Resurrection and Ascension than we are from Luther. But in the next place, besides their value as reporters of evidence, the ancient Fathers with all their imperfections are valuable interpreters in many respects. In the fundamental doctrines they are generally safe guides. If, in the display of an impassioned eloquence, they are often inconclusive reasoners; if, in the heat of contest, they sometimes press an argument too far, the same or equal faults may be charged upon many modern preachers and interpreters. The Greek Fathers also possessed the important advantage that the language in which the New Testament is written was their own vernacular tongue, the language in which they thought and discoursed and wrote. In their commentaries they expounded the original text. Hence the petition in the Lord's prayer, ῥῦσαι ἡμᾶς ἀπὸ τοῦ πονηροῦ, is interpreted in its true meaning by Chrysostom in Matth. Opp. tom. 7 p. 254 Ἀ πονηρὸν δὲ ἐνταῦθα τὸν διάβολον καλεῖ. They comprehended every shade of meaning which that unrivalled language was capable of conveying; and when they set forth the abstruse doctrines they could express themselves with greater force and clearness in Greek than in most other languages. Augustine, though imperfectly acquainted with the Greek language, yet was conscious of its superiority to the Latin; and felt the difficulty of expressing in the latter language the difference between οὐσία and ὑπόστασις. Of his own knowledge of Greek

^a It may not be uninteresting to the reader to be informed that the manuscript of the lamented Author of this Epitome terminates with these words. The unfinished sentence was never completed by him. He was transcribing from the larger work, and the sentence is finished by the Editor as it stands in that work. From an entry in the Author's Journal it appears that this last page of the manuscript of the Epitome was written about 18 days before his decease. The cause of the abrupt termination of the manuscript in the middle of a sentence is not known. That he did use his pen again is evident from further entries in his Journal, which was completed to the day previous to his departure. The last entry is the following: (1852) "Oct. 23. Received the "Holy Sacrament from G. H. H.—Pre—" sent K—, E—, A—." He expired early on the morning of the 24th.

For the compilation of the remainder of the Epitome the Editor is responsible. See Preface.

he confesses Ego quidem Græcæ linguæ perparum assecutus sum et prope nihil.

On the fundamental doctrines, the Trinity, the Incarnation, the Atonement, they appeal to apostolic teaching. They acknowledge that the Apostles alone were inspired; that other interpreters are fallible; and that Theology like other sciences is now to be acquired by study and labour.

But the Fathers gradually lapsed into gross errors and superstitions. They taught that Saints were to be invoked and relics to be honoured; that self-inflicted austerities had a spiritual effect; that monachism was the most acceptable mode of life; that the state of celibacy was more pleasing to God than the state of marriage. They multiplied forms and ceremonies, fasts and festivals. They claimed exorbitant power for the clergy. They persecuted heretics with intolerant zeal. In these things however they had not the same authority to produce. They are witnesses against themselves. And this is important; for testimony is always valuable when it is at variance with the prejudices and opposed to the inclinations of the witness. From their own evidence it appears that these things were devised by themselves and not enjoined by the Apostles,—were the inventions of men and not the commandments of God.

HOLY DAYS. The Jewish polity under the Law was a system of rites and ceremonies appointed by Divine command. But under the Gospel the ceremonies of the Law were abolished. The Apostles themselves instituted no forms. Socrates on this subject speaks as follows: “No law of Christ “allowed the faithful to follow Jewish rites. On the con“trary the Apostle forbids this, not only casting out circum-
“cision, but counselling them not to dispute about festal “days He loudly exclaims that the observances were a “shadow. Wherefore he says, Let no man judge you in eat- “ing and drinking or in the matter of a festival, or a new “moon, or a sabbath, which are a shadow of the future
“Nowhere therefore has the Apostle nor have the Evan“gelists imposed a yoke of servitude upon those who came “to their preaching. They left it to the gratitude of those “who had received the benefits to honour the Passover and “the other festivals. Whence, since men love festivals, (for

“ in these they rest from their labours) each in his several “ abode, as he pleased, commemorated the Crucifixion. Nei“ ther Christ nor the Apostles commanded these observances
 “ by any law. Neither the Gospels nor the Apostles have “ threatened us with any penalty or punishment or imprec“ tion as the Mosaic law threatens the Jews. The object of “ the Apostles was not to legislate concerning festal days, “ but to point the way to a good life and piety towards “ God.”

There is evidence to shew that the Apostles observed the first day of the week or the Lord's day. But of so little importance was the observance of other stated days in their eyes, that St. Peter and St. Paul in Italy, and St. John and St. Philip in Asia, observed Easter by a different rule and commemorated the Crucifixion on different days. From the testimony of the Fathers we learn that certain festivals and days were not observed in the early times. Centuries passed before even the Nativity of Christ, or of the Baptist, or the Presentation in the temple, or the Annunciation were appointed to be celebrated. See F. Rom. Vol. 2 c. 2 p. 209. That the other days here mentioned were not fixed till after the Nativity had been placed at Dec. 25 is manifest; for their position depended upon this. The Nativity of the Baptist was assumed to be six months before, the Annunciation nine months before, and the Presentation in the temple 40 days after the Nativity of Christ. That the first day of the week was observed by the Apostles is shewn by Bingham, who quotes among other testimonies the following from Scripture, Acts XX. 7. 1 Cor. XVI. 2. Rev. I. 10.

HOLY TABLE. The Gentiles might remark with wonder that the Christians had neither altars nor temples. The table of the Lord was a Table and nothing more. Athanasius and Chrysostom still called it by the name which it had received from St. Paul (1 Cor. X. 21. τραπέζης Κυρίου); and although soon after the Apostolic age, by an easy metaphor, it was called an altar, yet the Gentiles in the time of Minucius Felix and Origen and Arnobius might observe that the Christians had no altars, because their Holy Table was applied to none of the purposes of an altar. In the time of Athanasius the Table was still of wood. Writing ad Mona- chos he calls the table at Alexandria τὴν τράπεζαν; and adds, ξυλίνη γὰρ ἦν. The expression however seems to intimate that in some places it was no longer of wood. Themistius in describing the different religions in the time of Jovian opposes the tables of the Christians to the altars of the heathen. Theodoret is careful to explain that the bread and wine used in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper underwent no miraculous change. They still remained bread and wine. Chrysostom affirms of the bread that it was still bread after consecration. Origen, so far as we can discern from the translation of Rufinus, explains that the bread and wine are not really Christ's body and blood; that they had a mystical meaning; that Christ, himself the Bread, ate it with us; that Christ, himself the Wine, drank it with us.

ECCLESIA. The heathen nations had temples—ἱερά—for their worship, because their gods were supposed to dwell in the sacred place. At Jerusalem also the Temple was the appointed place for the sacrifices and ceremonies of the Law. The Holy Spirit was especially present in the Holy Place. But the Christians were taught that God dwelleth not in temples made with hands; that Christ was present wherever two or three were gathered together in his name. The disciple was commanded to enter into his closet and shut the door and pray to the Father who seeth in secret. The efficacy of prayer depended upon the devotion of the worshipper and not upon the place or form of words. The building in which the Christians assembled was not called a Temple or a Holy Place, but a place of prayer, or a house of the congregation, or ecclesia. The place of worship received its name from those who assembled in it. In the time of the monk Antonius it was called "The Lord's house," or κυριακόν. It was also called οἶκος εὐκτήριος by Basil; and προσευκτήριον by Eusebius H. E. VIII. 1, where he marks the increasing pomp and splendour of the buildings at the time of the persecution in A. D. 302. The place of worship is called Ecclesia by Aurelian; a house by Eunapius. It was not till the reign of Constantine that the edifice for Christian worship was called ναός. We know from Origen the Christians had no temples down to A. D. 250; for (Cels. VIII. 19) he speaks of temples in a figurative sense, and describes the Christians as living temples of the Spirit.

The ambiguous word ecclesia gradually came to be used in so many senses that it is necessary to trace and distinguish the various meanings of the word. It means

(1) An assembly generally.

(2) A legislative or judicial assembly.

(3) The whole Christian society collectively, of either sex and of every age and profession; and this either (a) the Christian society throughout the world, or (b) of each particular place, or (c) the Congregation assembled for prayer.

(4) The building for public worship. Examples have been already given of ecclesia in this sense. It is not used in this meaning in the New Testament.

(5) Ecclesia in Matt. XVIII. 17 is used in a peculiar sense, and perhaps has a reference to Jewish institutions. Cranmer translates the passage thus: "Tell it unto the Congregation; if he hear not the Congregation, let him be to thee as an heathen man and a publican." It is evident that the assembly here called ecclesia had not the power of compelling or commanding, but only the power of advising. (For these various uses of the word ecclesia see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 524, 525. notes.)

(6) The above meanings of the word ecclesia are found in the ancient republics and secular and Gentile writers, and in Scripture and the early Church. But when the Clergy increased in influence and power they applied the term exclusively to themselves. The Clergy were ecclesia, the people were the laity; the power of the Church meant the power of the Clergy, the revenues of the Church were the revenues of the Clergy. Ecclesia, for the Clergy, appears in the Theodosian Code. In this sense the word is applied by the Church of Rome; and some English theologians assign to it this meaning, in opposition to their own Articles, in which the true definition is given: "The visible Church of Christ is a congregation of faithful men." Art. 19. Wheatly's supposition that "the Church must mean the Clergy where there was no Christian civil magistrate," is the reverse of the truth; for in the time of heathen princes ecclesia meant the whole Society of Christian people. But when Christian princes reigned, and when there was a Christian civil magistrate, then it was that ecclesia came to be used in its limited sense, and to mean the Clergy only^b. A dexterous disputant can apply the word ecclesia or church as he finds it convenient to his argument, sometimes in its original sense to the whole Christian community, sometimes in the limited sense which it afterwards acquired, to the Clergy only.

CELIBACY. The Fathers of the Church, even the wisest and the best, obstinately persisted in the pernicious error that celibacy was more acceptable and more holy than marriage. But the declaration of the Apostle, that false teachers should arise, forbidding to marry, was too clear to be mistaken; and the Fathers in commenting on it were compelled to bear testimony to its meaning. Even Hieronymus himself, the great champion of celibacy and monachism, in many passages of his works finds it difficult to defend his own favourite dogma. Irenæus speaks justly and liberally of marriage. Athanasius extols celibacy and virginity tom. 1 p. 105 c; but in tom. 2 p. 496 p. 501 B. he takes a liberal view of the subject, approving of marriage, but preferring celibacy as more holy in his opinion. Clemens Alexandrinus in many passages celebrates celibacy, but in others allows and vindicates marriage. He asserts that the apostles Philip and Paul were married. Φίλιππος καὶ τὰς θυγατέρας ἀνδράσιν ἐξέδωκεν καὶ ὁ γε Παῦλος οὐκ ὀκνεῖ ἐν τινι ἐπιστολῇ τὴν αὐτοῦ προσαγορεύειν σύζυγον. Mistaking (as Potter remarks) Philip the deacon for Philip the apostle, and misinterpreting σύζυγος in Philipp. IV. 3. Chrysostom Olympiadi Ep. 2 tom. 7 p. 61, 10 Sav. admits that celibacy was not enjoined by Christ. Tertullian ad uxorem II. 1 p. 76. 77. 84. celebrates celibacy, but fully admits the lawfulness of marriage. Basilus Cæsar. Amphilochio Ep. 2 p. 766 quest. on virgins, who had married after their engagement of virginity, says that the Clergy treated such as widows who had contracted a second marriage; and excluded them for a year. But he thinks that as the Church is now stronger and the number of such virgins greater, they should be treated with greater rigour. But he equitably determines p. 767 D that those who are pledged to virginity in their infancy by their parents are not bound; that it must be their own act at the age of maturity, at more than 16 or 17 years of age. Then it is to be binding, and those who lapse are to be inexorably punished.

It appears from Augustine Ep. 109 p. 587 ad monachas that down to A.D. 428, the date of this Epistle, these societies were voluntary, and that the nun might leave or be expelled from the society.

Some ages passed before celibacy could be fully established among the clergy: Hieronimus Oceano tom. 2 p. 1068, "Carterius, a Spanish bishop, had a wife before his baptism, and after her death and after baptism married another. You think that he does not come within the description of St. Paul 1 Tim. III. 2.—I wonder that you should produce this single example, when the world is full of persons married under similar circumstances, not only presbyters but bishops: whom if I were to name their number would be greater than that of the Synod of Ariminum." Gregory of Nazianzus was himself the son of a bishop: Theodorus, bishop of Rome in 642, was the son of a bishop. Synesius bishop of Pentapolis refuses to part with his wife, and in writing to his brother Euoptyus on the subject displays a mind superior to the narrow prejudices of his time: see Fast. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 524 note w. Filii clericorum in the time of Athanasius are mentioned in a law of Constantius II. Paphnutius, an Egyptian bishop, is memorable for the wise and prudent counsel which he gave on this occasion, in Socrates H. E. I. II. at the council of Nice in 325.

PERSECUTION AND INTOLERANCE. The spirit of Christianity was especially adverse to intolerance. The precept was Judge not that ye be not judged. Another Scripture said Who art thou that judgest another's servant? To his own master he stands or falls. Those who would have called down fire from heaven were met by the rebuke, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. The weapon with which the Faith was to be propagated was Persuasion and not Force. This is acknowledged by Augustine de vera relig. c. 16=c. 31 (Christus) nihil egit vi, sed omnia suadendo et monendo. But when the Clergy had attained power, that spirit and those precepts were forgotten. From that time for many ages the persecution of heretics never ceased. Not only the church of Rome, but the Greek churches and the Protestant churches were persecutors. Says Mr. Hallam, "Such a genuine toleration as Christianity and philosophy alike demand had no place in our statute book before the reign of George III." Complete liberty of conscience was not finally established in England by law till that period. Some specimens however remain of men who conformed to the precepts of their religion rather than to the practice of their times. The death of Priscillian was condemned, and its authors punished. Martin of Tours interposed with Maximus to stay persecution. Chrysostom advised to spare heretics,—not to slay them, but to deal mildly with them. Augustine in the preamble to a treatise against the Manichees has these noble sentiments, which ought to be perpetually remembered by every theologian: Unum verum Deum omnipotentem, ex quo omnia, per quem omnia, in quo omnia, et rogavi et rogo ut in refellenda et revincenda hæresi vestra, Manichæi, cui et vos fortasse imprudentius quam malitiosius adhæsisistis, det mihi mentem pacatam atque tranquillam, et magis de vestra correctione quam de subversione cogitantem. Quamquam enim Dominus per suos servos regna subvertat erroris, ipsos tamen homines, in quantum homines sunt, emendandos esse potius quam perdendos jubet. Et quidquid divinitus ante illud ultimum judicium vindicatur, sive per improbos sive per justos, sive per nescientes sive per scientes, sive occulte sive palam, non ad interitum hominum sed ad medicinam valere credendum est. —Nostrum igitur fuit eligere et optare meliora, ut ad vestram correctionem aditum haberemus non in contentione et æmulatione et persecutionibus, sed mansuete consolando, benevole cohortando, leniter disputando; sicut scriptum est 'Servum autem Domini non oportet litigare.'—Illi in vos sæviant qui nesciunt cum quo labore verum inveniat et quam difficile caveantur errores. Illi in vos sæviant qui nesciunt quam rarum et arduum sit carnalia phantasmata piæ mentis serenitate superare. Illi in vos sæviant qui nesciunt quibus suspiriis et gemitibus fiat ut ex quantulacunque parte possit intelligi Deus. Postremo, illi in vos sæviant qui nunquam tali errore decepti sunt quali vos deceptos vident.

Augustine wrote thus in A. D. 397. Unhappily he afterwards abandoned these generous opinions, and adopted very different maxims, calling for imperial edicts against the heretics. He recommends indeed in Ep. 127 = 100, written A. D. 408 Donato proconsuli, that the lives of the Donatists should be spared; but in A. D. 412 he urges against them every degree of punishment except the infliction of death. And in A. D. 418 Ep. 105 = 194 Sixto presbytero Romano, where he treats at large of the Pelagian question, he gives the following rules for the treatment of heretics p. 529: Alii severius coercendi, alii vigilantius vestigandi, alii tractandi quidem lenius, sed non segnus sunt docendi, ut, si non timentur ne periant, non tamen negligentur, ne pereant.

Paley at the close of his Evidences for Christianity among many valuable and just remarks has one observation to which we cannot assent. He says Vol. 2 p. 367 "I apologize for no species nor degree of persecution; but I think that even the fact has been exaggerated. The slave-trade destroys more in a year than the Inquisition hath done in a hundred years, or perhaps hath done since its foundation." But, if we number those who have been destroyed by persecution, we must not limit our view to the victims of the Inquisition alone. We must take a wider survey of the times that preceded it and the countries into which it was not introduced. We must add, for example, the Paulicians, who arose in A. D. 660, and were persecuted for many centuries in the East and in the West. We must add the Albigenses, who were exterminated by Innocent III (who died in 1216) before the establishment of the Inquisition, which began in 1233. We must add the heretics who were destroyed in England in the reigns of Henry IV and V, and of Henry VIII and of Mary, under the act de hæretico comburendo, which was passed in A. D. 1400. Paley has not shewn by any proofs that "the fact has been exaggerated." But we are not to limit the enquiry to those only who suffered death from their oppressors. When life was spared, the persecution was exercised in other forms. Through the whole period from Constantine to A. D. 1688, a period which will include the revocation of the Edict of Nantes and the reign of James II of England, there was exile, or confiscation, or imprisonment, or torture for the heretic. The sum of all must be computed before we can estimate the full amount of misery. And, lest the mention of the slave-trade, and the ideas excited by that odious term, should abate somewhat of the abhorrence which is due to the Inquisition, we must observe that the guilt of that tribunal does not merely consist in the number of its victims, but that we must bear in mind all the circumstances—the mockery of a judicial process, the hypocritical pretext of religion, the lingering torments of the rack and the flames; and all this inflicted by men who called themselves ministers of Christ.

The Theodosian Code exhibits in the laws against heretics the intolerance of the times. It is declared that the least deviation from the appointed path is to be called Heresy. The penalties enacted were a prohibition of publicly exercising their worship, or expulsion from the cities and from particular districts, or interdiction of civil rights, or incapacity of bequeathing or inheriting by will, or confiscation, or corporal punishment, or death. The Novatians are treated with less rigour than the rest; but even these in some laws are included in the same description as other heretics. Against the Manichees many edicts were issued^d. The most severe language is employed against the Quartadecimans. Those who presumed to commemorate the Crucifixion on the day on which it was observed by the Apostle and Evangelist St. John are pronounced to have committed an offence which exceeds the madness of all heretics. And in another law it is declared that those who differ from others in the day of observing Easter are worse than all heretics, and are to be banished like the Manichees. It is ordered that they should be searched out by inquisitors: Summa exploratione rimetur ut quicumque in unum Paschæ diem non obsequenti religionis convenerint tales indubitanter quales hac lege damnavimus habeantur.

Some particular facts and opinions deserve to be noticed, which rest upon early and unsuspected authority.

Laymen were permitted to teach: for Origen while yet a layman presided in the Catechetical School at Alexandria.

Fasting and abstinence were not held in great esteem, and were not supposed to convey any spiritual benefits; for a martyr at Lyons in A. D. 177, who had been accustomed to subsist on bread and water, and proposed during his imprisonment to continue that practice, as a self-discipline, was dissuaded by his Christian brethren, and was advised to partake of the gifts which God had designed for the use of man.

It was held that men are responsible for their own acts alone. Ezekiel XVIII. 20 expresses that the son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son. This declaration of the Prophet is applied to the state of man by Basil and Hieronymus. Justin Martyr in speaking of the actions of men excludes the idea of Destiny.

That there will be different degrees, of blessedness in Heaven, and of punishment for the wicked, is the opinion of the greatest authorities among the Fathers. Those who hold that the lot of all in both states will be equal, and that all transgressions will be visited with the same measure of punishment, are refuted by the interpretations of the Fathers not less than by Scripture itself and by reason.

Hieronymus admits that faith is a difficult thing; but Gregory of Nazianzus truly observes that the difficulties in the doctrine of the Trinity are not greater than the difficulties in the constitution of man and in the laws of visible and material Nature. Basil also concludes an argument on the same subject thus: "If we know not the structure of an ant, how can we boast of comprehending the nature of God?"

That upon some questions appertaining to Theology men must think differently according to the different bias of their minds is acknowledged by Gregory, who, writing against the Eunomians, remarks that every one is not qualified to discourse concerning God; and advises men to contend against the heathen sects of philosophers rather than to argue too curiously upon questions of doctrine. He concludes that men may express their thoughts upon the following questions: upon the plurality of worlds—matter—the soul—good and evil intellectual natures—the Resurrection—the future Judgment and the retribution appointed for all men according to their works—and upon the sufferings of Christ.

Upon Creeds it were much to be desired that modern theologians had imitated the moderation and followed the examples of Athanasius and Basil. Athanasius writes thus: "Those who accept all other points of the Nicene Creed,

“but do not admit the word Homoïusion, we will not reject
 “as adversaries.” Basil holds that “nothing can be added “to the Creed agreed upon by the Nicene Council, not even “in the smallest particulars, except the doxology with refer“ence to the Holy Spirit; because the Fathers only men“tioned that subject incidentally; that question being not “yet agitated.” But the dogmas interwoven with this Creed concerning the Incarnation Basil “neither examines nor ac“cepts.” He considers them “as too abstruse for human “comprehension,” and knows that “when the simplicity of “the Faith is once disturbed there is no need of arguments.”

§ 10. BISHOPS OF ROME, ALEXANDRIA, &c.

Eusebius supplies materials for the years and successions of the Bishops down to his own time. The lists of Nicephorus continue the series for some centuries longer, and supply valuable information, although in the years assigned to each episcopate the numbers are sometimes erroneous through the mistake of Nicephorus himself, and sometimes corrupted through the fault of his transcriber.

The following Catalogue contains the bishops of Rome, Alexandria, Antioch, Jerusalem, Constantinople, who belong to this work. Appended is an account, omitting what has been said before, of those who are not already described.

1 Bishops of Rome.

The first twelve are here given as they stand in Irenæus quoted in the Tables A.D. 179 p. 177, F. Rom. Vol. I. who does not number St. Peter among the bishops, and reckons Eleutherus the twelfth.

The two lists of Roman bishops in Eusebius, the Catalogue in Bucherius, and the series of names in Augustine, shall be given in parallel columns, that their variations may be compared.

Eusebius in Chronico numbers the bishops exclusive of St. Peter. Anaclethus is the second, and Caius the 27th Bishop. The dates of Marcellinus, Eusebius, Miltiades, and Sylvester are from the translation of Hieronymus; Marcus, Julius, Liberius, and Damasus are from his Supplement. The rest are given in the continuation of Prosper in this manner :

	A. D.	y.	m.	d.

16 Urbanus I. Acta Concil. tom. I Urbanus natione Romanus ex patre Pontiano sedit annos IV menses X dies XII. His appointment is determined by the death of his predecessor to A. D. 222. But Pagi tom. I. p. 214 extends his pontificate to A. D. 230.

17 Pontianus. Pagi places his appointment at June 22 A. D. 230. The account of the liber Damasi is given in the tables A. D. 236 p. 251 F. Rom. Vol. I.

21 Lucius. On the pontificate of Lucius conf. Pagium tom. I p. 248. Stephanas succeeded in May of 253: Pagi tom. I p. 252 assigns to Stephanas 4y 2^m 21^d which commence at May 13 A. D. 253, eight months after the death of Cornelius. These eight months contain the episcopate of Lucius, and the dies interpontificiales which preceded and followed his episcopate.

28 Marcellinus. Natione Romanus: presided 9y 2^m 16^d to A. D. 304.

Quo tempore fuit persecutio magna—Cessavit episcopatus annos VII [Pagi rightly gives annos III] menses VI [Pagi III] dies XXV persequente Dioclesiano Christianos. His successor Marcellus was appointed in A. D. 308. Marcellus is confounded with his predecessor, and is omitted by Hieronymus in Eusebii Chronico, by Nicephorus in catalogo p. 411 C. D. The pontificate of Eusebius is determined to A. D. 310 by Pagi tom. 1 p. 356.

31 Melciades. Natione Afer. Pagi throws back the beginning of this episcopate to A. D. 310 because the 3y 7^m 9^d of its duration terminate in Jan. A. D. 314.

32 Silvester. Natione Romanus: presided 21y 11^m, to A. D. 335.

33 Marcus. 8^m 20^d in A. D. 336 ex die XV Kal. Feb. usque in diem Non. Oct. Nepotiano et Facundo coss.

34 Julius I. Fuit temporibus Constantis, et consulatu Feliciani et Titiani A. D. 337 ex die VIII Id. Feb. in diem Prid. Id. April. Constantio V et Constantio Cesare coss. A. D. 352.

35 Liberius. Appointed June 21 A. D. 352. He was exiled by Constantius II, in A. D. 355, because he refused his assent to the heresy of Arius, and remained in exile 3 years. Felix was chosen in his room. He returned from exile Aug. 2 A. D. 358, and was permitted to resume his office. His death is marked by Pagi at Sept. 24 A. D. 366.

38 Siricius. Succeeded Damasus at the end of December 384, or the beginning of January 385: he was succeeded by Anastasius in A. D. 398. His episcopate was not 15y 11^m 25^d as Lib. Pont. gives it; nor, as Pagi amends it, 13y 11^m 25^d; but from the end of December A. D. 384 to Feb. 22 A. D. 398, about 13y 2^m. Prosper and Marcellinus are also both inaccurate in assigning the period of this episcopate. See Tables F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 553.

40 Innocentius I. Succeeded in A. D. 402. Natione Albanensis: presided 15y 2^m 21^d.—Hic invenit Pelagium et Cælestium hæreticos et damnavit eos. Gennadius asserts that he was the author of a decree against the Pelagians, which his successor Zosimus more extensively promulgated.

Thirty-four Epistles of Innocentius are given apud Acta Concil. tom. 3.

Innocentius is at Rome during the first siege in 408. At the second siege he is at Ravenna with Honorius.

41 Zosimus. Natione Græcus. As the 15y 2^m 21^d of Innocentius commenced, according to Prosper, in A. D. 402, they terminate in A. D. 417, and the succession of Zosimus is fixed to that year. His episcopate of 1y 9^m 9^d ends a day or two before Dec. 26 A. D. 418.

The years 417, 418 are confirmed by the dates of his Epistles, 13 in number, apud Acta Conc. tom. 3 p. 399.

42 Bonifacius I. Natione Romanus, ex patre Jocundo presbytero; presided 37 8^m 7^d, or 37 8^m 6^d according to Prosper. Hic sub contentione ordinatur cum Eulalio, et fuit dissensio in clero menses VII dies XV. Lib. Pont. apud Acta Conc. tom. 3 p. 433. As the period of his episcopate began at the close of December A. D. 418, it terminated in the beginning of September A. D. 422.

Three letters of Bonifacius are extant in Actis Conc. tom. 3 p. 434.

43 Cælestinus. Natione Romanus. Pagi vol. 2 p. 242 fixes the period of this episcopate to 97 10^m 9^d, and, as this term commenced in September A. D. 422, it terminated in August A. D. 432.

Gennadius c. 54 Cælestinus urbis Romæ episcopus decretum synodi adversus Nestorium habitum volumine describens ad orientis et occidentis ecclesias dedit, duabus in Christo manentibus perfecte naturis, unam Filii Dei credendam esse personam. Huic enim sententiæ supradictus Nestorius ostensus est esse contrarius. Similiter etiam Xystus esse successor Cælestini pro eadem re et ad ipsum Nestorium et ad orientis episcopos adversum errorem ejus succidendum sententias direxit.

Fourteen letters of Cælestinus are extant apud Acta Conc. tom. 3 p. 469.

44 Sixtus III. Natione Romanus: presided 87 19^m. Hic post annum unum et menses VIII incriminatur a quodam Basso. Eodem tempore audiens hoc Valentinianus Augustus jussit concilium et sanctam synodum congregari. Et, facto conventu cum magna examinatione, per judicium synodicum purgatur a LVI episcopis. He was succeeded by Leo in A. D. 440.

Hieronymus omits Marcellus (N^o 29) whom he confounds with Marcellinus (as before stated). Hence he numbers Marcellinus 28 and Eusebius 29. He omits again Felix II (N^o 36) who presided during the exile of Liberius; and Liberius is called by Hieronymus the 34th instead of the 35th, Damasus the 35th instead of the 37th. From these omissions all the succeeding bishops of Rome are reckoned two below the real number in Prosper and Marcellinus.

52 Hormisdas. Appointed A. D. 514, died A. D. 523: see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 541 for the epistles of Hormisdas apud Acta Conc. Eighty are there enumerated.

53 Joannes I. Succeeded A. D. 523, died A. D. 526. In the consulship of Olybrius A. D. 526 the dates June 11 and Oct. 18 were after the death of Joannes. Two epistles of Joannes are extant apud Acta Conc. Both were written in A. D. 523.

55 Bonifacius II. Succeeded Felix IV in A. D. 530, died in 532. In Actis Conc. Ep. 2 Casario Arelatensi episcopo is dated VIII Kal. Feb. Lampadio et Oreste VV. CC. consulibus A. D. 530. But as Felix was still living at Jan. 25, we may read VIII Kal. Jan. Dec. 25, or VIII Kal. Jan. Dec. 24.

56 Joannes II. Appointed Jan. 1 A. D. 533.

57 Agapetus. Appointed A. D. 535. For Epistles of Agapetus see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 542, and Tables p. 765.

60 Pelagius I. Succeeded A. D. 555. To the epistles of Pelagius enumerated in Tables F. Rom. p. 807, add Ep. 2. 3. 4. 5 apud Acta Conc. tom. 6 p. 467—470 all addressed Narsæ patricio et duci in Italia. Ep. 16 p. 479 Childeberto regi Pelagius episcopus. In this epistle he adduces the first four General Councils, but not the fifth: Definitiones quæ in quatuor sanctis conciliis statutæ sunt.

65 Sabinianus. Natione Tuscus de civitate Ulera: presided 17 5^m 26^d.—Et cessavit episcopatus menses XI dies XXVI.

66 Bonifacius III. Natione Romanus: presided 8^m 28^d. HIC OBTINUIT APUD PHOCAM PRINCIPEM UT SEDES APOSTOLICA B. PETRI APOSTOLI CAPUT ESSET OMNIUM ECCLESiarUM, ID EST, ECCLESIA ROMANA, QUIA ECCLESIA CP. PRIMAM SE OMNIUM ECCLESiarUM SCRIBEBAT.—Sepultus est—die XII mensis Novembris.—Et cessavit episcopatus menses X dies VI. The periods of 17 5^m 9^d and 11^m 26^d from the appointment of Sabinianus will place this pontificate in A. D. 607.

67 Bonifacius IV. Natione Marsorum de civitate Valeria, presided 6y 8^m 13^d. Appointed according to Pagi Vol. 2 p. 728 Aug. 25 A. D. 608. He died imperante Domino Heraclio, anno ejus V.

68 Deus dedit. Natione Romanus ex patre Stephano subdiacono: presided 3y 24^d: buried Nov. 8—et cessavit episcopatus mensem unum dies XVI. As he succeeded in A. D. 615, he died in Nov. A. D. 618.

69 Bonifacius V. Natione Campanus de civitate Neapoli: presided 5y 13^d: buried Oct. 25.—Et cessavit episcopatus menses VI dies XVIII. The interval which followed the death of his predecessor was more than a year, and his episcopate commenced Dec. 23 A. D. 619 according to Pagi Vol. 2 p. 756: and according to Epitaphium apud Pagium p. 771 he presided 5y 10^m; and Pagi determines his death to Oct. 22 A. D. 625.

70 Honorius I. Natione Campanus: presided 12y 11^m 17^d. Hic temporibus suis multa bona fecit.—Sepultus est sub die IV Id. Oct. et cessavit episcopatus annum unum menses VII dies XVII. Ordained Oct. 27 A.D. 625: five days after the death of his predecessor : Pagi p. 772. For epistles of Honorius see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 543.

71 Severinus. Nazione Romanus : presided 2^m 4^d: buried IV Non. Aug. et cessavit episcopatus menses IV dies XXIX. His pontificate is fixed to A. D. 640 by Pagi Vol. 2 p. 814.

72 Joannes IV. Nazione Dalmata ex patre Venantio Scholastico : presided 1^y 9^m 18^d. Sepultus est sub die IV Id. Oct. et cessavit episcopatus mensem unum dies XIII. Appointed Dec. 24 A. D. 640.

73 Theodorus. Nazione Græcus ex patre Theodoro episcopo de civitate Hierosolyma : presided 6^y 5^m 18^d. Sepultus est sub die II Id. Maii, et cessavit episcopatus dies LII. The periods assigned under Joannes IV, namely 1^y 9^m 18^d + 1^m 13^d = 1^y 11^m, computed from Dec. 24 A. D. 640 will fix the appointment of Theodorus at Nov. A. D. 642; and his episcopate of 6^y 5^m 18^d is terminated at May A. D. 649.

74 Martinus I. De civitate Tudertina provincia Tusciæ : presided 6^y 1^m 26^d. Martin in a council of one hundred and five bishops, which he held in the Lateran, denounced anathemata on the Monothelites and their patrons Cyrus of Alexandria, Sergius, Pyrrhus, and Paulus. For these proceedings he was deposed by the emperor Constans, and carried a prisoner first to Naxos, then to Byzantium. From thence he was banished to Cherson, where he died. For particulars of his imprisonment and exile see below, Bishops of CP. 36 Paulus. The preceding interval of 55 days brings the appointment of Martinus to July A. D. 649. According to authorities quoted by Pagi tom. 3 p. 13, 14 he died in his exile in Cherson, Sep. 16 A. D. 655. Whence Pagi assigns 6^y 2^m 12^d to his pontificate, including the term of his exile.

75 Eugenius I. Nazione Romanus—clericus a cunabulis, ex patre Ruffiano : presided 2^y 8^m 24^d: sepultus est sub die IV Non. Junii, et cessavit episcopatus mensem I dies XXIX. His election in the absence of Martinus is fixed by Pagi to Sept. 8 A. D. 654, and his death to June 1 A. D. 657.

76 Vitalianus. Nazione Signiensis provinciæ Campaniæ : presided 14^y 6^m. Sepultus est sub die VI Kal. Feb. Et cessavit episcopatus menses II dies XIII. The interval of 1^m 29^d brings the succession of Vitalianus to July 30 A. D. 657. His episcopate of 14^y 6^m brings his death to VI Kal. Feb. A. D. 672. Among his epistles extant in Actis Conc. Ep. 2. 3. 4 are dated VI Kal. Feb. Indict. II. Jan. 27 A. D. 659.

77 A Deo datus. Nazione Romanus ex monachis : presided 4^y 2^m 5^d. Sepultus est sub die VI Kal. Jul. Et cessavit episcopatus menses IV dies XV. The preceding interval will place his appointment at April A.D. 672. His 4^y 2^m 5^d terminate VI Kal. Jul. A.D. 676, which carries back the beginning to 22 April, 672; and Pagi enlarges the preceding interval to 2^m 25^d.

Pagi fixes the day of each bishop's accession. But we cannot be certain in all cases of the precise day. 1 The years and months and days assigned in the liber pontificalis are often variously given in different copies; and, although the year and the month may be fixed from other testimony, yet the days must often remain uncertain. 2 The day of a bishop's death is often called the day of his funeral. 3 The day of accession and day of the death are sometimes included in the episcopate, but sometimes reckoned to the dies interpontificiales. See Pagi Vol. 2 p. 414. 4 Pagi endeavours so to adjust the periods as to place the ordination on a Sunday. But he himself admits that this rule was not always observed.

Geiseler Vol. 1 p. 373: "The collection of vite paparum Rom. is " by very different authors; but two general divisions may be observed. The first consists of short notices of each pope, and ends " with Sisinnius [A.D. 708], soon after whose time it was compiled; " the 2nd beginning with Constantine [A.D. 709] gives copious " biographies, and contains important materials for ecclesiastical history in general."

2 Bishops of Alexandria.

1 Annianus. Eusebius H. E. II. 24 Νέρωνος δὲ ὄγδοον ἄγοντος τῆς βασιλείας ἔτος, πρῶτος μετὰ Μάρκον τὸν ἀπόστολον καὶ εὐαγγελιστὴν τῆς ἐν Ἀλεξανδρείᾳ παροικίας Ἀννιανὸς τὴν λειτουργίαν διαδέχεται, ἀνὴρ θεοφιλὴς ὢν καὶ τὰ πάντα θαυμάσιος. He presided 22^y.

2 Abilius. Eusebius states that he succeeded Annianus in the fourth year of Domitian: he presided 13^y.

3 Cerdon. Succeeded in A.D. 98, and presided eleven years.

4 Primus. Was chosen A.D. 109, according to Chron. Armen. Hieronymus gives 9th of Trajan for the date of his succession.

5 Justus. Succeeded in the fourth year of Hadrian, A.D. 120, and held his episcopate eleven years.

6. Eumenes. Appointed in the fifteenth year of Hadrian, A.D. 131. Hadrian in epistola apud Vopiscum p. 960 at this time calls the bishop of Alexandria the patriarch.

7 Marcus. After Eumenes had presided twelve years Marcus was appointed A.D. 143, in the 6th year of Antoninus. He presided ten years, and was succeeded by 8 Celadion. A.D. 153. Erroneous and conflicting dates for his succession are given in Chron. Hieron. and Chron. Armen.

9 Agrippinus. Succeeded A. D. 168: and held his episcopate for twelve years.

10 Julianus. Succeeded in the last year of the emperor Marcus Aurelius A. D. 180, and presided ten years.

24 Timotheus I. Present at the second Council A. D. 381. Placed too low in Theophanes. As the eight years of Timotheus terminated in July A. D. 385, they commenced in 377.

29 Timotheus II Ælurus, 30 Timotheus III Salophaciatus.

Timotheus II succeeded in A. D. 457: was expelled in 460. His successor Timotheus III is addressed by Leo Ep. 139 Timotheo episcopo catholico Alexandrinæ ecclesiæ Aug. 18 A. D. 460. From the date of Leo's epistle we may collect that Timotheus III was appointed in July, and the preceding five months, during which the episcopal chair was vacant after the expulsion of Timotheus II, will carry back his expulsion to Feb. A. D. 460. He was restored by Basiliscus in A. D. 476. Zeno fled at the close of 475, and Basiliscus might restore Timotheus II in the beginning of 476. Timotheus II died in 477. Gennadius c. 72 supposed Timotheus Ælurus to be still living in 492. That this was an error appears from Liberatus, Theophanes, and Victor.

Timotheus III died in A. D. 482: Simplicii Romani Ep. 17 July 15 A. D. 482: Ad nos ex more relatio missa patefecit—obiisse Timotheum, inque ejus vicem consona fidelium voluntate Joannem—subrogatum. His death therefore may be referred to June A. D. 482. Placed too high in Victor Tun. From the first appointment of Timotheus III in July 460 to his death about June 482 are 22 years complete.

31. 32 Joannes I. Petrus III. Joannes was appointed in June A. D. 482. He is described by Theophanes as ἀνὴρ σόφρος καὶ τῶν ὀρθῶν δογμάτων ὑπέρμαχος. But Petrus Mongus was preferred by Zeno; whose appointment is referred to by Simplicius Ep. 17 July 15 A. D. 482. On the expulsion of Joannes and the appointment of Petrus see Liberatus c. 17 tom. 6 p. 445, 446. The death of Petrus is recorded by Theophanes in the 16th year of Zeno A. D. 489.

33 Athanasius II. His appointment is placed by Victor in A. D. 490. His death in 495. But he presided 7 years current: Severus apud Renaudot p. 125 sedit annos 7 obiitque 20^a mensis Thoth die Martis. Pagi quoting from the same authority which Severus used, expresses the same time; and then adds Dies 20^a mensis Thoth concurrat cum die 17^a Septembris in quam anno 496 feria tertia incidebat. The death of Athanasius is therefore fixed to Sept. 17 A. D.

496, and his 6^y 223^d commence at Feb. 7 A. D. 490. The character of Athanasius II is thus described by Severus: Vir bonus et plenus Spiritu Sancto, qui munere sibi credito præclare functus est. And he adds: Nulla ejus tempore persecutio, turbæ nullæ ecclesiam agita-verunt.

34 Joannes II. Succeeded in Sept. A. D. 496. His death is given by Theophanes in the 15th year of Anastasius A. D. 505. He assigns 9 years to Joannes II. Also 9 years in Eutychius. Pagi, from the author historiæ patriarcharum Coptitarum, gives 8^y 224^d. This period is Sept. 18 A. D. 496—April 29 A. D. 505 both inclusive. Elmacin apud Renaudot records that the see was vacant for one year after the death of Joannes.

35 Joannes III. Theophanes gives him 11 years, and thus assigns his death at A. D. 516. Pagi fixes the period of his episcopate at 11^y 23^d. The 11^y 23^d are April 30 A. D. 506 May 22 A. D. 517. But Pagi has omitted to observe that from Ap. 29 A. D. 505, where he places the death of Joannes II to May 22 A. D. 517, where he places the death of Joannes III, are twelve years and twenty-three days. Which will be explained if we admit the interval of one year recorded by Elmacin apud Renaudot p. 226.

36 Dioscorus II. Succeeded in May A. D. 517 and presided 2^y 146^d. From May 22 A. D. 517 to Oct. 14 A. D. 519 both inclusive.

37 Timotheus IV. Succeeded Dioscorus in Oct. A. D. 519. Pagi fixes the death of Dioscorus at Oct. 8 because he had read in his copy historiæ patriarcharum Coptitarum 10^a Babæ. But the numbers in Renaudot, 17^a Babæ and dies 146, correspond, and confirm each other.

40 Paulus. Succeeded Theodosius at the close of A. D. 538. Liberatus c. 23: Postquam ergo Theodosius Alexandrinus in exilium missus est, Paulus quidam unus abbatum Tabennensium monachorum ad Alexandriam sedem ordinatur episcopus.—Plane orthodoxus, suscipiens Chalcedonensem synodum. Theophanes, after referring to the events which followed the death of Timotheus IV, adds—καὶ οἱ μὲν Θεοδόσιον οἱ δὲ Γαῖνᾶν προεβάλλοντο εἰς ἐπίσκοπον Ἀλεξανδρείας· καὶ Γαῖνᾶς μὲν ἐκράτησε τῆς ἐπισκοπῆς ἐνιαυτὸν, ὁ δὲ Θεοδόσιος δύο· τούτους δὲ Ἰουστινιανὸς πέμψας ἤγαγεν ἐν Βυζαντίῳ—Παῦλον δὲ τινα δοκούμενον εἶναι ὀρθόδοξον ἐπίσκοπον Ἀλεξανδρείας προεβάλετο. Theophanes has placed these facts at too low a date. If, according to Victor, Zoilus succeeded in 541, Paulus had something more than two years. See, for these transactions, F. Rom. Vol. I Page 823.

41 Zoilus. Theophanes gives the 16th of Justinian for the succession of Zoilus, and assigns him 7 years. His deposition is at A. D. 551 in Victor Tun. He had probably more than 7 years; for these would only place his appointment at A. D. 544, more than two years after the deposition of his predecessor.

The years of the preceding bishops from Proterius to Zoilus are given in Nicephorus (see Fasti Rom. Vol. 2 p. 547); and the sum of these years is 92. But from the appointment of Proterius in A. D. 452 to the deposition of Zoilus in 551 are 99 years; a deficiency therefore of 7 years in the whole amount in Nicephorus. Intervals—dies vel menses interpontificiales—might in part supply this deficiency; and an interval (which Pagi seems to suppose) might precede the episcopate of Zoilus.

42 Apollinarius. Already appointed before September 551: Malalas XVIII p. 230. He has 19 years in Nicephorus p. 417 B. and in Theophanes p. 192 A. His 19th year was current in 569.

43 Joannes IV. Appointed before the exile of Anastasius of Antioch. See the Tables F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 828. Joannes IV has eleven years in Nicephorus p. 417 B—and in Theophanes p. 205. C. Theophanes assigns Sept. 1 A. D. 568 as the date of his succession. But as the last year of his predecessor Apollinarius was current in A. D. 569, and as the first year of his successor Eulogius was at A. D. 580, the appointment of Joannes is fixed to the close of A. D. 569.

47 Georgius. His predecessor Joannes V withdrew, when Alexandria was taken by the Persians, to his native country, Cyprus; where he died. But Alexandria was taken by the Persians in A. D. 616 (see Tables A. D. 616); and Georgius was therefore appointed in that year. Theophanes assigns him 14 years, which terminated in A. D. 630; and Cyrus was already bishop of Alexandria in 631.

48 Cyrus, who succeeded in 630, was called to CP. in A. D. 640. See the reasons for his summons thither stated by Nicephorus in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 547, 548.

Heracleonas, during his short reign in 641, restored Cyrus. His successor was Petrus, who might succeed in A. D. 644. Nicephorus Chron. p. 417 B (where in the present copies Cyrus is omitted) ends his catalogue of bishops of Alexandria with Petrus.

3 Bishops of Antioch.

1 Euodius. Euseb. Chron. Arm. Anno 2058 Claudii 2^o [A. D. 43] primus Antiochiæ episcopus Euodius fuit.

2 Ignatius. Eusebius places the succession of Ignatius in the first of Vespasian [A. D. 68]. A. D. 70 will be 45 years before the death of Ignatius. But as Eusebius has erred in the year of the death of Ignatius he may have placed the beginning of the episcopate too high.

3 Hero. The succession of Hero is determined by the death of his predecessor to A. D. 115.

4 Cornelius. Eusebius assigns the 12th of Hadrian A. D. 128 as the date of the accession of Cornelius.

5 Eros. Hieronymus: Anno 2158 Antiochiæ quintus constituitur episcopus Heros ann. XXIV. The 24 years would place Theophilus anno 2182. But Theophilus is placed by Eusebius and Hieronymus at 2186 or 2184.

The years of these five bishops are thus given in Nicephorus :

Εὐόδιος—ἐτη κγ'

Ἰγνάτιος—ἐτη δ'

Ἡρώων—ἐτη κ'

Κορνήλιος—ἐτη ιγ'

Ἐρώς—ἐτη κς'

Making 86 years. But from the accession of Euodius to the accession of Theophilus are computed in Eusebius 128 years, anni 2058—2186. Wherefore we may supply Ἰγνάτιος—ἐτη μδ' to bring the amount to a nearer agreement with Eusebius.

10 Philetus. Eusebius assigns the 6th of Caracalla A. D. 217 for the accession of Philetus.

11 Zebinus. A. D. 229. See Tables F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 243.

12 Babylas. His death in A. D. 250 would place the beginning of his thirteen years current at A. D. 238, the 1st of Gordian. Babylas died in prison in the Decian persecution.

20 Vitalis. He succeeded Tyrannus, according to Hieronymus, anno 2344 A. D. 328.

21 Philigonius. 22 Paulinus I. Paulinus is omitted by Theodoret; but is mentioned by Sozomen, and by Nicephorus.

Paulinus was deposed; and perhaps on that account omitted by Theodoret. He was still living in A. D. 347.

23 Eustathius. See Sozomen quoted in Tables F. Rom. Vol. 1 A. D. 324. The Tables in Theophanes place Eustathius many years too high. Hieronymus records the deposition of Eustathius at the year 2344 A. D. 328, which agrees with the term of Philostorgius, three whole years from A. D. 325; therefore after June A. D. 328, about 31 years before the appointment of Meletius in 360. Eustathius was still living in A. D. 370, 42 years after his expulsion. For the expulsion of Eustathius see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 549.

24 Paulinus II. Transferred from Tyre to Antioch. He had been long dead in 336. Hieronymus records the deposition of Eustathius, and thus proceeds : Quo in exilium ob fidem truso, usque in præsentem diem [A. D. 378] Arianæ ecclesiam occupaverunt. Id est

Eulalius
Eusebius
Euphronius
Placillus
Stephanus
Leontius
Eudoxius
Meletius
Euzoius
Dorotheus
Rursum Meletius

Quorum idcirco tempora non digessi, quod eos hostes potius quam episcopos Christi judicavi. See for the catalogue of Nicephorus F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 549.

Paulinus II is omitted by Hieronymus, Nicephorus, and Sozomen. But he was succeeded after six months by Eulalius. Eusebius addresses this Paulinus H. E. X. I ιερώτατε Παυλίνε.

25 Eulalius. Named by Theodoret, who omits Paulinus. Hieronymus inserts Eusebius, but, as appears from Theodoret, without reason. Nicephorus mentions that Eusebius was proposed, ὡς δ' ἐκεῖνος ἀπέειπε, καὶ ὁ βασιλεὺς ἀπηγόρευσε τὴν μετάθεσιν, σχολάσαι φασὶ τὸν θρόνον ἐξῆς ἐπὶ ἔτη ὀκτώ· εἶτα χειροτονοῦσιν Εὐφρόνιον. Socrates omitting Eulalius names Euphronius. Sozomen also omitting Eulalius relates that Eusebius declined the episcopate of Antioch, and that Euphronius was appointed.

26 Euphronius. See 24.

27 Placillus. Present at the synod of Tyre A. D. 335. He was also at the synod of Antioch in 341.

28 Stephanus I. See 24. The predecessor of Leontius. Stephanus was deposed.

29 Leontius. See 24. For the testimonies against Leontius see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 550. In Chron. Pasch. A. D. 350 he is very differently described as ὁ μακάριος Λεόντιος ὁ ἐπίσκοπος Ἀντιοχείας τῆς Συρίας, ἀνὴρ κατὰ πάντα πιστός τε καὶ εὐλαβὴς καὶ ζηλωτὴς ὑπάρχων τῆς ἀληθοῦς πίστεως. His death is recorded by Sozomen. The following incidents—the emperor at Sirmium in spring 358, the return of Liberius Aug. 2, 358, and the testimony of Athanasius that Leontius still lived in that year, place the death of Leontius at the close of A. D. 358. Socrates in his narrative appears to place the death of Leontius a year earlier, which is inconsistent with Athanasius.

30 Eudoxius. Appointed at the close of A. D. 358. He was already bishop of Germanicia in A. D. 341, when he was present at the Arian synod of Antioch. He was present again at the synod in 345. Deposed in September A. D. 359 by the synod of Seleucia.

31 Anianus. Omitted by Hieronymus and Theodoret. Appointed at the synod of Seleucia Sept. A. D. 359. Nicephorus gives to Anianus four years. But for the whole interval between Eustathius A. D. 328 and Meletius A. D. 360 (less than 32 years) he gives 40 years. The numbers then of Nicephorus are not to be trusted; and Pagi tom. 1 p. 445 is not justified in giving 12 years to Placillus because 12 years are assigned by Nicephorus.

32 Meletius. Transferred from Sebastia of Armenia to Antioch. But he was immediately expelled. This expulsion of Meletius happened in the winter of A. D. 36†. He was restored by Julian A. D. 362: was at Antioch in 363: again expelled by Valens, after Nov. 10 A. D. 371, during the stay of Valens at Antioch. For Valens at Antioch see the Tables A. D. 370, and F. Rom. Vol. 2 c. 1 p. 119, 120. After the death of Valens A. D. 378, he is restored by Gratian. Theodoret relates the contest between the parties of Paulinus, Euzoius, and Meletius. Meletius died in A. D. 381.

33 Euzoius. Appointed by Constantius II in the winter of 36†.

34 Paulinus III. Socrates: Παυλῖνος μίαν τῶν μικρῶν ἔχον τῆς πόλεως ἐκκλησιῶν εἶχεν, ἧς αὐτὸν Εὐζώιος αἰδοῖ τῇ πρὸς αὐτὸν οὐκ ἐξέβαλε.

35 Dorotheus. Succeeded Euzoius in 376.

36 Flavianus. Succeeded Meletius in 381. Is mentioned by Chrysostom in the Tables. He refused to take part in the proceedings against Chrysostom, and died at the time of the exile of Chrysostom A. D. 404; before Nov. 18, when his successor Porphyrius is mentioned in a law of Arcadius. The episcopate of Flavianus extended from the middle of 381 to the middle of 404, 23 complete years.

37 Porphyrius. Succeeded before Nov. 18 A. D. 404. See 36. The unpopularity of Porphyrius, who was the adversary of Chrysostom, is marked by Auctor dialogi de Chrysostomo. His death is fixed by a notice in Theodoret to A. D. 413.

38 Alexander. The term of 85 years noted by Theodoret commences at the deposition of Eustathius. And as that deposition was at the close of A. D. 328, the 85 years place the appointment of Alexander at A. D. 413.

39 Theodotus. Theophanes assigns 12th of Theodosius II (A. D. 419) for the appointment of Theodotus. This date is consistent with authorities quoted by Norisius and Pagi, which establish that Alexander lived through A. D. 418. But Theodotus still lived at the time of the death of Theodorus of Mopsuestia. And the death of Theodotus must be referred to A. D. 429. His episcopate therefore was of 10 years' duration instead of 4 years. The last 6 years of Theodotus and the 13 years of his successor are described by Theodoret. The 13 years of Joannes terminate in 442: the seventh year of Domnus is current at 448.

40 Joannes I. His episcopate is determined by Theodoret to A. D. 429—442.

41 Domnus II. Succeeded in 442. Deposed by the Council of Ephesus in August 449.

42 Maximus. He was appointed in 449. Nicephorus: Μάξιμος ὁ ἐν τῇ τετάρτῃ συνόδῳ ἐν Καλχηδόνι, ὃς ἐξεβλήθη διὰ πταῖσμα, ἔτη δ'. The charge against Maximus is referred to by Leo of Rome. His successor Basilus was appointed before the death of Marcian,—therefore before Feb. A. D. 457, about the close of 456, seven years after the deposition of Domnus. Maximus is at the Council of Chalcedon A. D. 451.

43 Basilus. Succeeded at the close of A. D. 456. Norisius has shewn that he still lived in the beginning of A. D. 458. This is consistent with Nicephorus who records that Acacius was bishop at the time of the earthquake. But the earthquake happened Sept. 13 A. D. 458.

44 Acacius. Succeeded between February and September A. D. 458. Called Alexander in the present copies of Victor Tun.

45 Martyrius. The episcopate of Acacius determines the succession of Martyrius to A. D. 459. His 13th year was current at A. D. 471, where Victor names his successor Julianus.

During the episcopate of Martyrius Peter the fuller disturbed the Church of Antioch. See F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 553. The beginning of the troubles excited by Peter are placed by Cedrenus at the 7th of Leo, A. D. 463.

46 Julianus. Was appointed in A. D. 471, on the resignation of Martyrius. Julianus died during the reign of Basiliscus, in A. D. 476. For Basiliscus reigned from Nov. 475 to July 477.

47 Petrus Fullo. Expelled by Joannes probably in the close of A. D. 477; and Joannes appointed in the beginning of 478.

48 Joannes II. For the expulsion of Petrus Fullo and the appointment of Joannes II see F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 553.

49 Stephanus II. Appointed in the beginning of 478. Nicephorus has these numbers :

Πέτρος ὁ γραφεὺς—ἔτη γ'
 Ἰωάννης ὁ μετὰ τρίμηνον ἐκβληθείς
 Στέφανος—ἔτη γ'
 Στέφανος ἄλλος—ἔτος ἑν
 Καλανδίου—ἔτη δ'
 Πέτρος πάλιν γραφεὺς—ἔτη γ'
 Παλλάδιος—ἔτη ι'.

Stephanus has also 3 years in Theophanes. Three years current will place the death of Stephanus II at the close of A. D. 480, and the death of Stephanus III at the close of A. D. 481.

50 Stephanus III. Murdered probably on June 22 A. D. 482.

51 Calandio. Appointed at the close of 481. Expelled in 485, and Peter restored. The expulsion of Calandio by Peter is fixed to 485 from the date of a Roman synod, in which Peter was condemned, held in that year. Calandio therefore presided 4 years, and his deposition is placed 4 years too low by Theophanes and Cedrenus.

Evidence to the troubles at Alexandria and Antioch in the reigns of Leo and Zeno is contained in an authentic document quoted by Pagi and Basnage, and extant in Act. Concil. tom. 5. p. 173—176. This document is given in full in F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 554—555.

Petrus Fullo died in A. D. 483. The death of Stephanus III, the episcopate of Calandio, his expulsion, and the restoration of Petrus, are related by Malalas XV p. 91.

52 Palladius. Succeeded Petrus Fullo in 488. He has ten years in Nicephorus and in Theophanes.

53 Flavianus II. Appointed in 498. Succeeded by Severus in 512. He presided therefore 14 years, from his appointment to his deposition. Theophanes only assigns 13 years. In the reckoning of Theophanes the 1st of Anastasius was computed from Sept. 1. A. D. 491, the 9th of Anastasius and the 1st of Flavianus from Sept. 1 A. D. 499; the 21st of Anastasius and the 13th of Flavianus from Sept. 1 A. D. 511. But Flavianus was appointed in 498, within the eighth year of Anastasius, and Severus in Nov. 512, in the 22d of Anastasius.

58 Domnus III. Succeeded Epiphanius in A. D. 545. Anastasius succeeded Domnus III in A. D. 559. Anastasius was expelled and succeeded by Gregory in A. D. 570: see Tables F. Rom. Vol. 1 p. 828: but was restored in the middle of 593. His successor Anastasius II is addressed by Gregory of Rome in Ep. IX 49, written in March A. D. 599. Anastasius I might die at the close of 598. He has six years in Theophanes after his restoration. He was restored in the 11th of Mauricius, and died in the 17th. Nicephorus in his list omits Severus, and gives wrong numbers to Flavianus. For the rest he agrees with Theophanes.

61 Anastasius II. Succeeded about the beginning of A. D. 599. Slain in a sedition in Sept. A. D. 610, in the 11th year current of his episcopate. And he presided about 10^v 8^m instead of 9 years, the term assigned by Theophanes and Nicephorus.

4 Bishops of Jerusalem.

2—16 Simeon—Marcus. Twelve bishops of Jerusalem are placed in 26 years between Justus and Marcus. Simeon was bishop after the death of St. James; and St. James was put to death A. D. 67 or 70. See F. Rom. Vol. 2 p. 556.

17—30 Cassianus—Narcissus. Narcissus seceded from his bishopric between A. D. 197—212 for about 15 years. In this interval Dius, Germanio, and Gordianus presided in succession. Narcissus then returned to his charge, and resigned it to Alexander A. D. 214.

46 Prayllus. 47 Juvenalis. 48 Anastasius.

Prayllus succeeded Joannes after Dec. A. D. 415: after Prayllus Nicephorus proceeds

Ἰουβενάλιος—ἔτη λη' Θεοδόσιος ὁ ἐκβληθεὶς ὑπὸ Μαρκιανού, καὶ πάλιν Ἰουβενάλιος
Ἀναστάσιος—ἔτη ιη'
Μαρτύριος—ἔτη η'
Σαλούστιος—ἔτη η'

Anastasius was appointed in July A. D. 458.

Theophanes assigns to Juvenalis 38 years. He had 38 years, from A. D. 421; or 34 years from A. D. 425.

Anastasius, who has 18 years in Nicephorus and Theophanes, survived till A. D. 478. He presided therefore 20 years from July A. D. 458, instead of 18 years.

49 Martyrius. Died in the 8th year of his episcopate, in A. D. 486. Cyrillus in Vita Sabæ states that Martyrius died in the 48th year of Sabas. Sabas was born in Jan. A. D. 439. His 48th year commenced in Jan. A. D. 486, to which year the death of Martyrius is determined. Martyrius died about April. And, as his 8th year was current in April 486, his first year might commence in 478.

50 Salustius. Cyrillus in vita Sabæ asserts that Salustius died in the 56th year of Sabas. That year commenced in Jan. A. D. 494 ; and the death of Salustius is in July of the second indiction A. D. 494. The 8^y 3^m of his episcopate, which is the period Cyril assigns to it, carry back his appointment and the death of his predecessor to April A. D. 486. Salustius has 8 years in Nicephorus and Theophanes.

51 Elias. Appointed July 23 A. D. 494. His deposition is fixed to A. D. 513 by Cyrillus. He survived till A. D. 518, and died ten days after the emperor Anastasius.

52 Joannes II. Appointed in 513. Died in 524. Cyrillus gives the 86th year of the life of Sabas as the date of the death of Joannes. The 86th year of Sabas commenced in Jan. A. D. 524. Cyrillus assigns to Joannes the term of 7^y 9^m ; which commenced, as Pagi explains, from a point of time in the 4th year of his episcopate.

53 Petrus. Succeeded Joannes in 524. He has 20 years in Nicephorus, and in Theophanes. Victor Tun. marks the date of his death A. D. 544.

54 Macarius. Appointed in 544.

55 Eustochius. Macarius was expelled from his bishopric, and Eustochius appointed in his room in 552. In 563 Eustochius was deposed, and Macarius reappointed. He held his episcopate the second time 8 or 10 years.

56 Joannes III. Succeeded Macarius 573. Evagrius closed his history in the interval between the death of Joannes and the appointment of his successor. Joannes therefore died in A. D. 593 ; and at the close of that year, when Evagrius wrote, Amos was not yet appointed.

The year of the death of Macarius and the succession of Joannes can only be assigned upon the uncertain evidence of Nicephorus and Theophanes, and of the years assigned to Macarius and Joannes. The term of 22 years will begin in A. D. 571, of 20 years in 573 ; and Macarius after his restoration presided either 8 or 10 years.

57 Amos. Appointed in the beginning of 594. His death is fixed to A. D. 601 by Greg. Rom. A letter written by Gregory, on the accession of Isacius determines his appointment to the beginning of A. D. 601. The period of 8 years assigned by Nicephorus to Amos must be understood of 7 years complete and 8 years current.

58 Isacius. Succeeded in 601. His death is marked at A. D. 609 ; agreeing with the term of 8 years assigned by Nicephorus and Theophanes.

59 Zacharias. Succeeded in 609. Mentioned at A. D. 610 by Nicephorus. He died in 629.

60 Modestus. 61 Sophronius. Modestus was appointed in the spring of A. D. 629. He has two years in Theophanes, but in Nicephorus one year, and in Eutychius nine months, followed by an interval of 6 years.

Sophronius survived the capture of Jerusalem, and died at the close of A. D. 637 in the beginning of the 28th year of Heraclius and of the 11th indiction. He has 4 years in Eutychius. These years current might commence in the beginning of 633. The nine months of Modestus might terminate in the beginning of 630, leaving a space of 3 years instead of 6 between the two pontificates. Theophanes assigns 3 years to Sophronius, and places his first year at the 24th of Heraclius A. D. 63 $\frac{1}{2}$, and his death after the capture of Jerusalem at the 26th of Heraclius.

After the death of Sophronius the see was vacant for 29 years. Zonaras observes that at the 6th council Nov. A. D. 680 there was no patriarch of Alexandria or of Jerusalem, because these cities had fallen under the dominion of the Saracens.

5 Bishops of Constantinople.

1 Alexander. His predecessor Metrophanes survived till the council of Nice A. D. 325. This is proved by the subscriptions to the council apud Gelasium. Alexander therefore succeeded Metrophanes at Byzantium about A. D. 326. He died in A. D. 340; for he survived Arius.

2 Paulus. Succeeded Alexander in A. D. 340. See A. D. 340. 352.

Eusebius of Nicomedia is appointed to CP. in the same year with Paulus A. D. 340.

6 Demophilus. Succeeded Eudorius in A. D. 370. Eudorius had been transferred from Antioch to CP. in A. D. 360. He therefore presided at CP. 10y or 11y current, and Valesius rightly ascribes δεκαετία in Socrates IV. 14 to corruption of the text.

7 Evagrius. Also appointed on the death of Eudorius.

Valesius ad Socr. IV. 14 rejects the account that Eustathius the deposed bishop of Antioch was still living, because the time is too remote, and because the place of his exile and death is Trajanopolis in Hieronymus. But the space of 42 years from his deposition in A. D. 328 to the appointment of Evagrius in 370 does not seem incredible, and Eustathius might have passed, or have been transferred, from Bizya in Thrace (which Socrates states to have been the place of his exile) to Trajanopolis, also in Thrace. His place of exile is called Philippi in Theodorus Lector. Perhaps by an error for Trajanopolis.

17 Flavianus. Succeeded Proclus in A. D. 447. Deposed in A. D. 449.

21 Fravitta. Succeeded Acacius in A. D. 489, and presided 3 months. Euphemius, described by Zonaras as δσιος ἀνὴρ καὶ ὀρθόδοξότατος, succeeded Fravitta. For the deposition of Euphemius see A. D. 496.

36 Paulus II. Appointed Oct. A. D. 641 on the deposition of Pyrrhus. Twelve years are assigned him by Zonaras and Theophanes, which would terminate in Oct. A. D. 653. But the death of Paulus is fixed by the imprisonment and exile of Martin of Rome to the year 655. Attested by the letter of Martin himself and the narrative of his companion, which are extant apud Acta Concil. Martinus Ep. XV Theodoro p. 66 describes his abduction from Rome June 15. He was put on board a ship June 19: he reached Messina July 1: he remained in the isle of Naxos a year. The narrative of his companion supplies the rest. He reached Byzantium Sept. 17 A. D. 654. He was imprisoned 93 days, when on Friday Dec. 19 he was brought before the senate. He was then imprisoned 85 days longer, until March 13 A. D. 655. He is next banished to Cherson: there he died Sept. 16 of the 14th indiction. The days of the week in these narratives and the indiction determine these events to June 15 A. D. 653—Sept. 16 A. D. 655; for indict. 14 commenced Sept. 1 A. D. 655.

When Martinus was brought out Dec. 19 A. D. 654, Paulus was near his end. Paulus therefore died soon after Dec. 19 A. D. 654. He completed his 13th year in Oct. preceding, and was in the 14th year of his episcopate.

Pyrrhus thus restored presided only 4^m 23^d. He died therefore and was succeeded by Petrus in A. D. 655. Not however in the 12th of Constans, as Zonaras assigns it,—for the 12th of Constans began before Oct. 5 A. D. 652, and was current in Indict. 11. But it has been shewn that Paulus died in Indict. 13, in the 14th of Constans.

37 Petrus. The appointment of Petrus is fixed by the dates in 36 to A. D. 655. He died 15 years before the 6th Council A. D. 680; therefore, as Pagi determines, in A. D. 666, in the 12th year current of his pontificate.

38 Thomas II. Presided 2^y 7^m. As he succeeded in 666, his episcopate will terminate in the close of 668.

39 Joannes V. Nicephorus assigns him 57 9^m. Zonaras gives no years. In the Tables of Theophanes he has 6 years. He succeeded towards the close of 668; and 57 9^m will place his death in 674.

40 Constantinus. Succeeded in 674. He has 17 8^m 7^d in Nicephorus. He has 2 years in Zonaras. Constantinus therefore died in 676; Theodorus his successor was expelled in 678; and Georgius, who followed Theodorus, was present in the 6th Council in 680.
